

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

3 3433 07574297 7

the 1990s, the number of people with a mental health problem has increased in the UK, and the number of people with a mental health problem who are in contact with mental health services has also increased (Mental Health Act 1983, 1990, 1994, 1997, 2003).

There is a growing awareness of the need to improve the lives of people with a mental health problem, and to reduce the stigma and discrimination that they experience. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the development of mental health services, the establishment of mental health charities, and the development of mental health legislation (Mental Health Act 1983, 1990, 1994, 1997, 2003).

The aim of this paper is to describe the development of mental health services in the UK, and to discuss the challenges that mental health services face in the future. The paper is divided into three sections. The first section describes the development of mental health services in the UK, and the second section discusses the challenges that mental health services face in the future. The third section discusses the implications of the findings of this paper for mental health services in the UK.

1. Introduction

The number of people with a mental health problem in the UK has increased in the 1990s, and the number of people with a mental health problem who are in contact with mental health services has also increased (Mental Health Act 1983, 1990, 1994, 1997, 2003). This has led to a number of initiatives, including the development of mental health services, the establishment of mental health charities, and the development of mental health legislation (Mental Health Act 1983, 1990, 1994, 1997, 2003).

The aim of this paper is to describe the development of mental health services in the UK, and to discuss the challenges that mental health services face in the future. The paper is divided into three sections. The first section describes the development of mental health services in the UK, and the second section discusses the challenges that mental health services face in the future. The third section discusses the implications of the findings of this paper for mental health services in the UK.

The number of people with a mental health problem in the UK has increased in the 1990s, and the number of people with a mental health problem who are in contact with mental health services has also increased (Mental Health Act 1983, 1990, 1994, 1997, 2003). This has led to a number of initiatives, including the development of mental health services, the establishment of mental health charities, and the development of mental health legislation (Mental Health Act 1983, 1990, 1994, 1997, 2003).

The aim of this paper is to describe the development of mental health services in the UK, and to discuss the challenges that mental health services face in the future. The paper is divided into three sections. The first section describes the development of mental health services in the UK, and the second section discusses the challenges that mental health services face in the future. The third section discusses the implications of the findings of this paper for mental health services in the UK.

NEW Scott

CASTLE DANHERTONS.

Whitford

Published by Ticknor and Fields, Boston, 1859

WAVERLEY NOVELS.

HOUSEHOLD EDITION.

CASTLE DANGEROUS.

INDEX AND GLOSSARY.

II.

BOSTON:
TICKNOR AND FIELDS.
NEW YORK: SHELDON, BLAKEMAN AND COMPANY.

M DCCC LIX.

RIVERSIDE, CAMBRIDGE: STEREOTYPED AND PRINTED BY
H. O. HOUGHTON AND COMPANY.

CASTLE DANGEROUS.
INDEX AND GLOSSARY.

45X1143

CASTLE DANGEROUS.

CHAPTER VIII.

THIS interlude carried some confusion into the proceedings of the hunt, thus suddenly surprised by the apparition of Michael Turnbull, an armed and avowed follower of the House of Douglas, a sight so little to be expected in the territory where his master was held a rebel and a bandit, and where he himself must have been well known to most of the peasantry present. The circumstance made an obvious impression on the English chivalry. Sir John de Walton looked grave and thoughtful, ordered the hunters to be assembled on the spot, and directed his soldiers to commence a strict search among the persons who had attended the chase, so as to discover whether Turnbull had any companions among them ; but it was too late to make that inquiry in the strict fashion which De Walton directed.

The Scottish attendants on the chase, when they beheld that the hunting, under pretence of which they were called together, was interrupted for the purpose of laying hands upon their persons, and subjecting them to examination, took care to suit their answers to the questions put to them; in a word, they kept their own secret, if they had any. Many of them, conscious of being the weaker party, became afraid of foul play, slipt away from the places to which they had been appointed, and left the hunting-match like men who conceived they had been invited with no friendly intent. Sir John de Walton became aware of the decreasing numbers of the Scottish—their gradual disappearance awakening in the English knight that degree of suspicion which had of late become his peculiar characteristic.

“Take, I pray thee,” said he to Sir Aymer de Valence, “as many men-at-arms as thou canst get together in five minutes’ space, and at least a hundred of the mounted archers, and ride as fast as thou canst, without permitting them to straggle from thy standard, to reinforce the garrison of Douglas; for I have my own thoughts what may have been attempted on the castle, when we observe with our own eyes such a nest of traitors here assembled.”

“With reverence, Sir John,” replied Aymer, “you shoot in this matter rather beyond the mark. That the Scottish peasants have had bad thoughts against us, I will be the last to deny; but, long debarred from any silvan sport, you cannot wonder at their crowding to any diversion by wood or river, and still less at their being easily alarmed as to the certainty of the safe footing on which they stand with us. The least rough usage is likely to strike them with fear, and with the desire of escape, and so”——

“And so,” said Sir John de Walton, who had listened with a degree of impatience scarce consistent with the grave and formal politeness which one knight was accustomed to bestow upon another, "and so I would rather see Sir Aymer de Valence busy his horse's heels to execute my orders, than give his tongue the trouble of impugning them."

At this sharp reprimand, all present looked at each other with indications of marked displeasure. Sir Aymer was highly offended, but saw it was no time to indulge in reprisal. He bowed until the feather which was in his barret-cap mingled with his horse's mane, and without reply—for he did not even choose to trust his voice in reply at the moment—headed a considerable body of cavalry by the straightest road back to the Castle of Douglas.

When he came to one of those eminences from which he could observe the massive and complicated towers and walls of the old fortress, with the glitter of the broad lake which surrounded it on three sides, he felt much pleasure at the sight of the great banner of England, which streamed from the highest part of the building. "I knew it," he internally said; "I was certain that Sir John de Walton had become a very woman in the indulgence of his fears and suspicions. Alas! that a situation of responsibility should so much have altered a disposition which I have known so noble and so knightly! By this good day, I scarce know in what manner I should demean me when thus publicly rebuked before the garrison. Certainly he deserves that I should, at some time or other, let him understand, that however he may triumph in the exercise of his short-lived command, yet, when man is to meet with man, it will puzzle Sir John de Walton to show himself the superior of Aymer de Valence, or perhaps to establish himself as his equal. But if, on the contrary, his fears, however fantastic, are sincere at the moment he expresses them, it becomes me to obey punctually commands which, however absurd, are imposed in consequence of the governor's belief that they are rendered necessary by the times, and not inventions designed to vex and domineer over his officers in the indulgence of his official powers. I would I knew which is the true statement of the case, and whether the once famed De Walton is become afraid of his enemies more than fits a knight, or makes imaginary doubts the pretext of tyrannizing over his friend. I cannot say it would make much difference to me, but I would rather have it that the man I once loved had turned a petty tyrant than a weak-spirited coward; and I would be content that he should study to vex me, rather than be afraid of his own shadow."

With these ideas passing in his mind, the young knight crossed the causeway which traversed the piece of water that fed the moat, and, passing under the strongly-fortified gateway, gave strict orders for letting down the portcullis, and elevating the drawbridge, even at the appearance of De Walton's own standard before it.

A slow and guarded movement from the hunting-ground to the Castle of Douglas, gave the governor ample time to recover his temper, and to forget that his young friend had shown less alacrity than usual in obeying his commands. He was even disposed to treat as a jest the length of time and extreme degree of ceremony with which every point of martial discipline was observed on his own readmission to the castle, though the raw air of a wet spring evening whistled around his own unsheltered person, and those of his followers, as they waited before the castle gate for the exchange of passwords, the delivery of keys, and all the slow minutiae attendant upon the movements of a garrison in a well-guarded fortress.

"Come," said he, to an old knight, who was peevishly blaming the lieutenant-governor, "it was my own fault; I spoke but now to Aymer de Valence with more authoritative emphasis than his newly dubbed dignity was pleased with, and this precise style of obedience is a piece of not unnatural and very pardonable revenge. Well, we will owe him a return, Sir Philip—shall we not? This is not a night to keep a man at the gate."

This dialogue, overheard by some of the squires and pages, was bandied about from one to another, until it entirely lost the tone of good-humour in which it was spoken, and the offence was one for which Sir John de Walton and old Sir Philip were to meditate revenge, and was said to have been represented by the governor as a piece of mortal and intentional offence on the part of his subordinate officer.

Thus an increasing feud went on from day to day between two warriors, who, with no just cause of quarrel, had at heart every reason to esteem and love each other. It became visible in the fortress even to those of the lower rank, who hoped to gain some consequence by intermingling in the species of emulation produced by the jealousy of the commanding officers—an emulation which may take place, indeed, in the present day, but can hardly have the same sense of wounded pride and jealous dignity attached to it, which existed in times when the personal honour of knighthood rendered those who possessed it jealous of every punctilio.

So many little debates took place between the two knights, that Sir Aymer de Valence thought himself under the necessity of writing to his uncle and namesake, the Earl of Pembroke, stating that his officer, Sir John de Walton, had unfortunately of late taken some degree of prejudice against him, and that after having borne with many provoking instances of his displeasure, he was now compelled to request that his place of service should be changed from the Castle of Douglas, to wherever honour could be acquired, and time might be given to put an end to his present cause of complaint against his commanding officer. Through the whole letter, young Sir Aymer was particularly cautious how he expressed his sense of Sir John de Walton's jealousy or severe usage; but such sentiments are not easily concealed, and in spite of him an air of displeasure glanced out from several passages, and indicated his discontent with his uncle's old friend and companion in arms, and with the sphere of military duty which his uncle had himself assigned him.

An accidental movement among the English troops brought Sir Aymer an answer to his letter sooner than he could have hoped for at that time of day, in the ordinary course of correspondence, which was then extremely slow and interrupted.

Pembroke, a rigid old warrior, entertained the most partial opinion of Sir John de Walton, who was a work as it were of his own hands, and was indignant to find that his nephew, whom he considered as a mere boy, elated by having had the dignity of knighthood conferred upon him at an age unusually early, did not absolutely coincide with him in this opinion. He replied to him, accordingly, in a tone of high displeasure, and expressed himself as a person of rank would write to a young and dependent kinsman upon the duties of his profession; and, as he gathered his nephew's cause of complaint from his own letter, he conceived that he did him no injustice in making it slighter than it really was. He reminded the young man that the study of chivalry consisted in the faithful and patient discharge of military service, whether of high or low degree, according to the circumstances in which war placed the champion. That above all, the post of danger, which Douglas Castle had been termed by common consent, was also the post of honour; and that a young man should be cautious how he incurred the supposition of being desirous of quitting his present honourable command, because he was tired of the discipline of a military director so renowned as Sir John de Walton. Much also there was, as was natural in a letter of that time, concerning the duty of young men, whether in council or in arms, to be guided implicitly by their elders; and it was observed, with justice, that the commanding officer, who had put himself into the situation of being responsible with his honour, if not his life, for the event of the siege or blockade, might justly, and in a degree more than common, claim the implicit direction of the whole defence. Lastly, Pembroke reminded his nephew that he was, in a great measure, dependent upon the report of Sir John de Walton for the character which he was to sustain in after life; and reminded him, that a few actions of headlong and inconsiderate valour would not so firmly found his military reputation, as months and years spent in regular, humble, and steady obedience to the commands which the governor of Douglas Castle might think necessary in so dangerous a conjuncture.

This missive arrived within so short a time after the dispatch of the letter to which it was a reply, that Sir Aymer was almost tempted to suppose that his uncle had some mode of corresponding with De Walton, unknown to the young knight himself, and to the rest of the garrison. And as the Earl alluded to some particular displeasure which had been exhibited by De Valence on a late trivial occasion, his uncle's knowledge of this, and other minutiae, seemed to confirm his idea that his own conduct was watched in a manner which he did not feel honourable to himself, or dignified on the part of his relative; in a word, he conceived himself exposed to that sort of surveillance of which, in all ages, the young have accused the old. It hardly needs to say that the admonition of the Earl of Pembroke greatly chafed the fiery spirit of his nephew; insomuch, that if the Earl had wished to write a letter purposely to increase the prejudices which he desired to put an end to, he could not have made use of terms better calculated for that effect.

The truth was, that the old archer, Gilbert Greenleaf, had, without the knowledge of the young knight, gone to Pembroke's camp, in Ayrshire, and was recommended by Sir John de Walton to the earl, as a person who could give such minute information respecting Aymer de Valence, as he might desire to receive. The old archer was, as we have seen, a formalist, and when pressed on some points of Sir Aymer de Valence's discipline, he did not hesitate to throw out hints, which, connected with those in the knight's letter to his uncle, made the severe old earl adopt too implicitly the idea that his nephew was indulging a spirit of insubordination, and a sense of impatience under authority, most dangerous to the character of a young soldier. A little explanation might have produced a complete agreement in the sentiments of both; but for this, fate allowed neither time nor opportunity; and the old earl was unfortunately induced to become a party, instead of a negotiator, in the quarrel,

“And by decision more embroil'd the fray.”

Sir John de Walton soon perceived, that the receipt of Pembroke's letter did not in any respect alter the cold ceremonious conduct of his lieutenant towards him, which limited their intercourse to what their situation rendered indispensable, and exhibited no advances to any more frank or intimate connexion. Thus, as may sometimes be the case between officers in their relative situations even at the present day, they remained in that cold stiff degree of official communication, in which their intercourse was limited to as few expressions as the respective duties of their situation absolutely demanded. Such a state of misunderstanding is, in fact, worse than a downright quarrel;—the latter may be explained or apologized for, or become the subject of mediation; but in such a case as the former, an éclaircissement is as unlikely to take place as a general engagement between two armies which have taken up strong defensive positions on both sides. Duty, however, obliged the two principal persons in the garrison of Douglas Castle to be often together, when they were so far from seeking an opportunity of making up matters, that they usually revived ancient subjects of debate.

It was upon such an occasion that De Walton, in a very formal manner, asked De Valence in what capacity, and for how long time, it was his pleasure that the minstrel, called Bertram, should remain at the castle.

"A week," said the governor, "is certainly long enough, in this time and place, to express the hospitality due to a minstrel."

"Certainly," replied the young man, "I have not interest enough in the subject to form a single wish upon it."

"In that case," resumed De Walton, "I shall request of this person, to cut short his visit at the Castle of Douglas."

"I know no particular interest," replied Aymer de Valence, "which I can possibly have in this man's motions. He is here under pretence of making some researches after the writings of Thomas of Erceldoun, called the Rhymer, which he says are infinitely curious, and of which there is a volume in the old Baron's study, saved somehow from the flames at the last conflagration. This told, you know as much of his errand as I do; and if you hold the presence of a wandering old man, and the neighbourhood of a boy, dangerous to the castle under your charge, you will no doubt do well to dismiss them—it will cost but a word of your mouth."

"Pardon me," said De Walton; "the minstrel came here as one of your retinue, and I could not, in fitting courtesy, send him away without your leave."

"I am sorry, then," answered Sir Aymer, "in my turn, that you did not mention your purpose sooner. I never entertained a dependent, vassal, or servant, whose residence in the castle I would wish to have prolonged a moment beyond your honourable pleasure."

"I am sorry," said Sir John de Walton, "that we two have of late grown so extremely courteous that it is difficult for us to understand each other. This minstrel and his son come from we know not where, and are bound we know not whither. There is a report among some of your escort, that this fellow Bertram upon the way had the audacity to impugn, even to your face, the King of England's right to the crown of Scotland, and that he debated the point with you, while your other attendants were desired by you to keep behind and out of hearing."

"Hah!" said Sir Aymer, "do you mean to found on that circumstance any charge against my loyalty? I pray you to observe, that such an averment would touch mine honour, which I am ready and willing to defend to the last gasp."

"No doubt of it, Sir Knight," answered the governor; "but it is the strolling minstrel, and not the high-born English knight, against whom the charge is brought. Well! the minstrel comes to this castle, and he intimates a wish that his son should be allowed to take up his quarters at the little old convent of Saint Bride, where two or three Scottish nuns and friars are still permitted to reside, most of them rather out of respect to their order, than for any good-will which they are supposed to bear the English or their sovereign. It may also be noticed, that this leave was purchased by a larger sum of money, if my information be correct, than is usually to be found in the purses of travelling minstrels, a class of wanderers alike remarkable for their poverty and for their genius. What do you think of all this?"

"I?"—replied De Valence; "I am happy that my situation, as a soldier under command, altogether dispenses with my thinking of it at all. My post, as lieutenant of your castle, is such, that if I can manage matters so as to call my honour and my soul my own, I must think that quite enough of free-will is left at my command; and I promise you shall not have again to reprove, or send a bad report of me to my uncle, on that account."

"This is beyond sufferance!" said Sir John de Walton half aside, and then proceeded aloud—"Do not, for Heaven's sake, do yourself and me the injustice of supposing that I am endeavouring to gain an advantage over you by these questions. Recollect, young knight, that when you evade giving your commanding officer your advice when required, you fail as much in point of duty, as if you declined affording him the assistance of your sword and lance."

"Such being the case," answered De Valence, "let me know plainly on what matter it is that you require my opinion? I will deliver it plainly, and stand by the result, even if I should have the misfortune (a crime unpardonable in so young a man, and so inferior an officer) to differ from that of Sir John de Walton."

"I would ask you then, Sir Knight of Valence," answered the governor, "what is your opinion with respect to this minstrel, Bertram, and whether the suspicions respecting him and his son are not such as to call upon me, in performance of my duty, to put them to a close examination, with the question ordinary and extraordinary, as is usual in such cases, and to expel them not only from the castle, but from the whole territory of Douglas Dale, under pain of scourging, if they be again found wandering in these parts?"

"You ask me my opinion," said De Valence, "and you shall have it, Sir Knight of Walton, as freely and fairly, as if matters stood betwixt us on a footing as friendly as they ever did. I agree with you, that most of those who in these days profess the science of minstrelsy, are altogether unqualified to support the higher pretensions of that noble order. Minstrels by right, are men who have dedicated themselves to the noble occupation of celebrating knightly deeds and generous principles; it is in their verse that the valiant knight is handed down to fame, and the poet has a right, nay is bound, to emulate the virtues which he praises. The looseness of the times has diminished the consequence, and impaired the morality of this class of wanderers; their satire and their praise are now too often distributed on no other principle than love of gain ; yet let us hope that there are still among them some who know, and also willingly perform, their duty. My own opinion is that this Bertram holds himself as one who has not shared in the degradation of his brethren, nor bent the knee to the mammon of the times ; it must remain with you, sir, to judge whether such a person, honourably and morally disposed, can cause any danger to the Castle of Douglas. But believing, from the sentiments he has manifested to me, that he is incapable of playing the part of a traitor, I must strongly remonstrate against his being punished as one, or subjected to the torture within the walls of an English garrison. I should blush for my country, if it required of us to inflict such wanton misery upon wanderers, whose sole fault is poverty ; and your own knightly sentiments will suggest more than would become me to state to Sir John de Walton, unless in so far as is necessary to apologize for retaining my own opinion."

Sir John de Walton's dark brow was stricken with red when he heard an opinion delivered in opposition to his own, which plainly went to stigmatize his advice as ungenerous, unfeeling, and unknightly. He made an effort to preserve his temper, while he thus replied with a degree of calmness. "You have given your opinion, Sir Aymer de Valence ; and that you have given it openly and boldly, without regard to my own, I thank you. It is not quite so clear that I am obliged to defer my own sentiments to yours, in case the rules on which I hold my office—the commands of the king—and the observations which I may personally have made, shall recommend to me a different line of conduct from that which you think it right to suggest."

De Walton bowed, in conclusion, with great gravity ; and the young knight, returning the reverence with exactly the same degree of stiff formality, asked whether there were any particular orders respecting his duty in the castle ; and having received an answer in the negative, took his departure.

Sir John de Walton, after an expression of impatience, as if disappointed at finding that the advance which he had made towards an explanation with his young friend had proved unexpectedly abortive, composed his brow as if to deep thought, and walked several times to and fro in the apartment, considering what course he was to take in these circumstances. " It is hard to censure him severely," he said, " when I recollect that, on first entering upon life, my own thoughts and feelings would have been the same with those of this giddy and hot-headed, but generous boy. Now prudence teaches me to suspect mankind in a thousand instances where perhaps there is not sufficient ground. If I am disposed to venture my own honour and fortune, rather than an idle travelling minstrel should suffer a little pain, which at all events I might make up to him by money, still, have I a right to run the risk of a conspiracy against the king, and thus advance the treasonable surrender of the Castle of Douglas, for which I know so many schemes are formed ; for which, too, none can be imagined so desperate but agents will be found bold enough to undertake the execution ? A man who holds my situation, although the slave of conscience, ought to learn to set aside those false scruples which assume the appearance of flowing from our own moral feeling, whereas they are in fact instilled by the suggestion of affected delicacy. I will not, I swear by Heaven, be infected by the follies of a boy such as Aymer ; I will not, that I may defer to his caprices, lose all that love, honour, and ambition can propose, for the reward of twelve months' service, of a nature the most watchful and unpleasant. I will go straight to my point, and use the ordinary precautions in Scotland which I should employ in Normandy or Gascoigny.—What ho! page! who waits there?”

One of his attendants replied to his summons—“Seek me out Gilbert Greenleaf the archer, and tell him I would speak with him touching the two bows and the sheaf of arrows, concerning which I gave him a commission to Ayr.”

A few minutes intervened after the order was given, when the archer entered, holding in his hand two bow-staves, not yet fashioned, and a number of arrows secured together with a thong. He bore the mysterious looks of one whose apparent business is not of very great consequence, but is meant as a passport for other affairs which are in themselves of a secret nature. Accordingly, as the knight was silent, and afforded no other opening for Greenleaf, that judicious negotiator proceeded to enter upon such as was open to him.

“Here are the bow-staves, noble sir, which you desired me to obtain while I was at Ayr with the Earl of Pembroke's army. They are not so good as I could have wished, yet are perhaps of better quality than could have been procured by any other than a fair judge of the weapon. The Earl of Pembroke's whole camp are frantic mad in order to procure real Spanish staves from the Groyne, and other ports in Spain; but though two vessels laden with such came into the port of Ayr, said to be for the King's army, yet I believe never one half of them have come into English hands. These two grew in Sherwood, which having been seasoned since the time of Robin Hood, are not likely to fail either in strength or in aim, in so strong a hand, and with so just an eye, as those of the men who wait on your worship."

"And who has got the rest, since two ships' cargoes of new bow-staves are arrived at Ayr, and thou with difficulty hast only procured me two old ones?" said the governor.

"Faith, I pretend not skill enough to know," answered Greenleaf, shrugging his shoulders. "Talk there is of plots in that country as well as here. It is said that their Bruce, and the rest of his kinsmen, intend a new May-game, and that the outlawed king proposes to land near to Turnberry, early in summer, with a number of stout kernes from Ireland; and no doubt the men of his mook earldom of Carrick are getting them ready with bow and spear for so hopeful an undertaking. I reckon that it will not cost us the expense of more than a few score of sheaves of arrows to put all that matter to rights."

"Do you talk then of conspiracies in this part of the country, Greenleaf?" said De Walton. "I know you are a sagacious fellow, well bred for many a day to the use of the bent stick and string, and will not allow such a practice to go on under thy nose, without taking notice of it."

"I am old enough, Heaven knows," said Greenleaf, "and have had good experience of these Scottish wars, and know well whether these native Scots are a people to be trusted to by knight or yeoman. Say they are a false generation, and say a good archer told you so, who, with a fair aim, seldom missed a handsbreadth of the white. Ah! sir, your honour knows how to deal with them—ride them strongly, and rein them hard,—you are not like those simple novices who imagine that all is to be done by gentleness, and wish to parade themselves as courteous and generous to those faithless mountaineers, who never, in the course of their lives, knew any tincture either of courteousness or generosity."

"Thou alludest to some one," said the governor, "and I charge thee, Gilbert, to be plain and sincere with me. Thou knowest, methinks, that in trusting me thou wilt come to no harm?"

"It is true, it is true, sir," said the old remnant of the wars, carrying his hand to his brow, "but it were imprudent to communicate all the remarks which float through an old man's brain in the idle moments of such a garrison as this. One stumbles unawares on fantasies, as well as realities, and thus one gets, not altogether undeservedly, the character of a talebearer and mischief-maker among his comrades, and methinks I would not willingly fall under that accusation."

"Speak frankly to me," answered De Walton, "and have no fear of being misconstrued, whosoever the conversation may concern."

"Nay, in plain truth," answered Gilbert, "I fear not the greatness of this young knight, being, as I am, the oldest soldier in the garrison, and having drawn a bow-string long and many a day ere he was weaned from his nurse's breast."

"It is, then," said De Walton, "my lieutenant and friend, Aymer de Valence, at whom your suspicions point?"

"At nothing," replied the archer, "touching the honour of the young knight himself, who is as brave as the sword he wears, and, his youth considered, stands high in the roll of English chivalry; but he is young, as your worship knows, and I own that in the choice of his company he disturbs and alarms me."

"Why, you know, Greenleaf," answered the governor, "that in the leisure of a garrison a knight cannot always confine his sports and pleasures among those of his own rank, who are not numerous, and may not be so gamesome or fond of frolic, as he would desire them to be."

"I know that well," answered the archer, "nor would I say a word concerning your honour's lieutenant for joining any honest fellows, however inferior their rank, in the wrestling ring, or at a bout of quarterstaff. But if Sir Aymer de Valence has a fondness for martial tales of former days, methinks he had better learn them from the ancient soldiers who have followed Edward the First, whom God assoilzie, and who have known before his time the Barons' wars and other onslaughts, in which the knights and archers of merry England transmitted so many gallant actions to be recorded by fame; this truly, I say, were more beseeming the Earl of Pembroke's nephew, than to see him closet himself day after day with a strolling minstrel, who gains his livelihood by reciting nonsense and lies to such young men as are fond enough to believe him, of whom hardly any one knows whether he be English or Scottish in his opinions, and still less can any one pretend to say whether he is of English or Scottish birth, or with what purpose he lies lounging about this castle, and is left free to communicate every thing which passes within it to those old mutterers of matins at Saint Bride's, who say with their tongues God save King Edward, but pray in their hearts God save King Robert the Bruce. Such a communication he can easily carry on by means of his son, who lies at Saint Bride's cell, as your worship knows, under pretence of illness."

"How do you say?" exclaimed the governor, "under pretence?—is he not then really indisposed?"

"Nay, he may be sick to the death for aught I know," said the archer; "but if so, were it not then more natural that the father should attend his son's sick-bed, than that he should be ranging about this castle, where one eternally meets him in the old Baron's study, or in some corner, where you least expect to find him?"

"If he has no lawful object," replied the knight, "it might be as you say; but he is said to be in quest of ancient poems or prophecies of Merlin, of the Rhymer, or some other old bard; and in truth it is natural for him to wish to enlarge his stock of knowledge and power of giving amusement, and where should he find the means save in a study filled with ancient books?"

"No doubt," replied the archer, with a sort of dry civil sneer of incredulity; "I have seldom known an insurrection in Scotland but that it was prophesied by some old forgotten rhyme, conjured out of dust and cobwebs, for the sake of giving courage to those North Country rebels, who durst not otherwise have abidden the whistling of the gray-goose shaft; but curled heads are hasty, and, with license, even your own train, Sir Knight, retains too much of the fire of youth for such uncertain times as the present."

"Thou hast convinced me, Gilbert Greenleaf, and I will look into this man's business and occupation more closely than hitherto. This is no time to peril the safety of a royal castle for the sake of affecting generosity towards a man of whom we know so little, and to whom, till we receive a very full explanation, we may, without doing him injustice, attach grave suspicions. Is he now in the apartment called the Baron's study?"

"Your worship will be certain to find him there," replied Greenleaf.

"Then follow me, with two or three of thy comrades, and keep out of sight, but within hearing; it may be necessary to arrest this man."

"My assistance," said the old archer, "shall be at hand when you call, but"——

"But what?" said the knight; "I hope I am not to find doubts and disobedience on all hands?"

"Certainly not on mine," replied Greenleaf; "I would only remind your worship that what I have said was a sincere opinion expressed in answer to your worship's question; and that, as Sir Aymer de Valence has avowed himself the patron of this man, I would not willingly be left to the hazard of his revenge."

"Pshaw!" answered De Walton, "is Aymer de Valence governor of this castle, or am I? or to whom do you imagine you are responsible for answering such questions as I may put to you?"

"Nay," replied the archer, secretly not displeased at seeing De Walton show some little jealousy of his own authority, "believe me, Sir Knight, that I know my own station and your worship's, and that I am not now to be told to whom I owe obedience."

"To the study, then, and let us find the man," said the governor.

"A fine matter, indeed," subjoined Greenleaf, following him, "that your worship should have to go in person to look after the arrest of so mean an individual. But your honour is right; these minstrels are often jugglers, and possess the power of making their escape by means which borrel * folk like myself are disposed to attribute to necromancy."

Without attending to these last words, Sir John de Walton set forth towards the study, walking at a quick pace, as if this conversation had augmented his desire to find himself in possession of the person of the suspected minstrel.

Traversing the ancient passages of the castle, the governor had no difficulty in reaching the study, which was strongly vaulted with stone, and furnished with a sort of iron cabinet, intended for the preservation of articles and papers of value, in case of fire. Here he found the minstrel seated at a small table, sustaining before him a manuscript apparently of great antiquity, from which he seemed engaged in making extracts. The windows of the room were very small, and still showed some traces that they had originally been glazed with a painted history of Saint Bride—another mark of the devotion of the great family of Douglas to their tutelar saint.

The minstrel, who had seemed deeply wrapped in the contemplation of his task, on being disturbed by the unlooked-for entrance of Sir John de Walton, rose with every mark of respect and humility, and, remaining standing in the governor's presence, appeared to wait for his interrogations, as if he had anticipated that the visit concerned himself particularly.

"I am to suppose, Sir Minstrel," said Sir John de Walton, "that you have been successful in your search, and have found the roll of poetry or prophecies that you proposed to seek after amongst these broken shelves and tattered volumes?"

"More successful than I could have expected," replied the minstrel, "considering the effects of the conflagration. This, Sir Knight, is apparently the fatal volume for which I sought, and strange it is, considering the heavy chance of other books contained in this library, that I have been able to find a few though imperfect fragments of it."

* Unlearned.

"Since, therefore, you have been permitted to indulge your curiosity," said the governor, "I trust, minstrel, you will have no objection to satisfy mine?"

The minstrel replied with the same humility, "that if there was any thing within the poor compass of his skill which could gratify Sir John de Walton in any degree, he would but reach his lute, and presently obey his commands."

"You mistake, sir," said Sir John, somewhat harshly. "I am none of those who have hours to spend in listening to tales or music of former days; my life has hardly given me time enough for learning the duties of my profession, far less has it allowed me leisure for such twangling follies. I care not who knows it, but my ear is so incapable of judging of your art, which you doubtless think a noble one, that I can scarcely tell the modulation of one tune from another."

"In that case," replied the minstrel composedly, "I can hardly promise myself the pleasure of affording your worship the amusement which I might otherwise have done."

"Nor do I look for any at your hand," said the governor, advancing a step nearer to him, and speaking in a sterner tone. "I want information, sir, which I am assured you can give me, if you incline; and it is my duty to tell you, that if you show unwillingness to speak the truth, I know means by which it will become my painful duty to extort it in a more disagreeable manner than I would wish."

"If your questions, Sir Knight," answered Bertram, "be such as I can or ought to answer, there shall be no occasion to put them more than once. If they are such as I cannot or ought not to reply to, believe me that no threats of violence will extort an answer from me."

"You speak boldly," said Sir John de Walton; "but take my word for it, that your courage will be put to the test. I am as little fond of proceeding to such extremities as you can be of undergoing them, but such will be the natural consequence of your own obstinacy. I therefore ask you whether Bertram be your real name—whether you have any other profession than that of a travelling minstrel—and, lastly, whether you have any acquaintance or connexion with any Englishman or Scottishman beyond the walls of this Castle of Douglas?"

"To these questions," replied the minstrel, "I have already answered the worshipful knight, Sir Aymer de Valence, and having fully satisfied him, it is not, I conceive, necessary that I should undergo a second examination; nor is it consistent either with your worship's honour, or that of the lieutenant-governor, that such a re-examination should take place."

"You are very considerate," replied the governor, "of my honour and of that of Sir Aymer de Valence. Take my word for it, they are both in perfect safety in our own keeping, and may dispense with your attention. I ask you, will you answer the inquiries which it is my duty to make, or am I to enforce obedience by putting you under the penalties of the question? I have already, it is my duty to say, seen the answers you have returned to my lieutenant, and they do not satisfy me."

He at the same time clapped his hands, and two or three archers showed themselves stripped of their tunics, and only attired in their shirts and hose.

"I understand," said the minstrel, "that you intend to inflict upon me a punishment which is foreign to the genius of the English laws, in that no proof is adduced of my guilt. I have already told that I am by birth an Englishman, by profession a minstrel, and that I am totally unconnected with any person likely to nourish any design against this Castle of Douglas, Sir John de Walton, or his garrison. What answers you may extort from me by bodily agony, I cannot, to speak as a plain-dealing Christian, hold myself responsible for. I think that I can endure as much pain as any one; I am sure that I never yet felt a degree of agony, that I would not willingly prefer to breaking my plighted word, or becoming a false informer against innocent persons, but I own I do not know the extent to which the art of torture may be carried; and though I do not fear you, Sir John de Walton, yet I must acknowledge that I fear myself, since I know not to what extremity your cruelty may be capable of subjecting me, or how far I may be enabled to bear it. I, therefore, in the first place, protest, that I shall in no manner be liable for any words which I may utter in the course of any examination enforced from me by torture; and you must therefore, under such circumstances, proceed to the execution of an office, which, permit me to say, is hardly that which I expected to have found thus administered by an accomplished knight like yourself."

"Hark you, sir," replied the governor, "you and I are at issue, and in doing my duty, I ought instantly to proceed to the extremities I have threatened; but perhaps you yourself feel less reluctance to undergo the examination as proposed, than I shall do in commanding it ; I will therefore consign you for the present to a place of confinement, suitable to one who is suspected of being a spy upon this fortress. Until you are pleased to remove such suspicions, your lodgings and nourishment are those of a prisoner. In the meantime, before subjecting you to the question, take notice, I will myself ride to the Abbey of Saint Bride, and satisfy myself whether the young person whom you would pass as your son, is possessed of the same determination as that which you yourself seem to assert. It may so happen that his examination and yours may throw such light upon each other as will decidedly prove either your guilt or innocence, without its being confirmed by the use of the extraordinary question. If it be otherwise, tremble for your son's sake, if not for your own.—Have I shaken you, sir?—or do you fear, for your boy's young sinews and joints, the engines which, in your own case, you seem willing to defy ?”

“Sir,” answered the minstrel, recovering from the momentary emotion he had shown, “I leave it to yourself, as a man of honour and candour, whether you ought, in common fairness, to form a worse opinion of any man, because he is not unwilling to incur, in his own person, severities which he would not desire to be inflicted upon his child, a sickly youth, just recovering from a dangerous disease.”

“It is my duty,” answered De Walton, after a short pause, “to leave no stone unturned by which this business may be traced to the source ; and if thou desirest mercy for thy son, thou wilt thyself most easily attain it, by setting him the example of honesty and plain-dealing.”

The minstrel threw himself back on the seat, as if fully resolved to bear every extremity that could be inflicted, rather than make any farther answer than he had already offered. Sir John de Walton himself seemed in some degree uncertain what might now be his best course. He felt an invincible repugnance to proceed, without due consideration, in what most people would have deemed the direct line of his duty, by inflicting the torture both upon father and son; but deep as was his sense of devotion towards the King, and numerous as were the hopes and expectations he had formed upon the strict discharge of his present high trust, he could not resolve upon having recourse at once to this cruel method of cutting the knot. Bertram's appearance was venerable, and his power of words not unworthy of his aspect and bearing. The governor remembered that Aymer de Valence, whose judgment in general it was impossible to deny, had described him as one of those rare individuals, who vindicated the honour of a corrupted profession by their personal good behaviour; and he acknowledged to himself, that there was gross cruelty and injustice in refusing to admit the prisoner to the credit of being a true and honest man, until, by way of proving his rectitude, he had strained every sinew, and crushed every joint in his body, as well as those of his son. "I have no touchstone," he said internally, "which can distinguish truth from falsehood; the Bruce and his followers are on the alert,—he has certainly equipped the galleys which lay at Rahrin during winter. This story, too, of Greenleaf, about arms being procured for a new insurrection, tallies strangely with the appearance of that savage-looking forester at the hunt; and all tends to show, that something is upon the anvil which it is my duty to provide against. I will, therefore, pass over no circumstance by which I can affect the mind through hope or fear; but, please God to give me light from any other source, I will not think it lawful to torment these unfortunate, and it may yet be, honest men." He accordingly took his departure from the library, whispering a word to Greenleaf respecting the prisoner.

He had reached the outward door of the study, and his satellites had already taken the minstrel into their grasp, when the voice of the old man was heard calling upon De Walton to return for a single moment.

"What hast thou to say, sir?" said the governor; "be speedy, for I have already lost more time in listening to thee than I am answerable for, and so I advise thee for thine own sake"——

"I advise thee," said the minstrel, "for thine own sake, Sir John de Walton, to beware how thou dost insist on thy present purpose, by which thou thyself alone, of all men living, will most severely suffer. If thou harmest a hair of that young man's head—nay, if thou permittest him to undergo any privation which it is in thy power to prevent, thou wilt, in doing so, prepare for thine own suffering a degree of agony more acute than any thing else in this mortal world could cause thee. I swear by the most blessed objects of our holy religion; I call to witness that holy sepulchre, of which I have been an unworthy visitor, that I speak nothing but the truth, and that thou wilt one day testify thy gratitude for the part I am now acting. It is my interest, as well as yours, to secure you in the safe possession of this castle, although assuredly I know some things respecting it, and respecting your worship, which I am not at liberty to tell without the consent of that youth. Bring me but a note under his hand, consenting to my taking you into our mystery, and believe me, you will soon see those clouds charmed away ; since there was never a doleful uncertainty which more speedily changed to joy, or a thunder-cloud of adversity which more instantly gave way to sunshine, than would then the suspicions which appear now so formidable."

He spoke with so much earnestness as to make some impression upon Sir John de Walton, who was once more wholly at a loss to know what line his duty called upon him to pursue.

"I would most gladly," said the governor, "follow out my purpose by the gentlest means in my power ; and I shall bring no further distress upon this poor lad, than thine own obstinacy and his shall appear to deserve. In the meantime, think, Sir Minstrel, that my duty has limits, and if I slack it for a day, it will become thee to exert every effort in thy power to meet my condescension. I will give thee leave to address thy son by a line under thy hand, and I will await his answer before I proceed farther in this matter, which seems to be very mysterious. Meantime, as thou hast a soul to be saved, I conjure thee to speak the truth, and tell me whether the secrets of which thou seemest to be a too faithful treasurer, have regard to the practices of Douglas, of Bruce, or of any in their names, against this Castle of Douglas?"

The prisoner thought a moment, and then replied—"I am aware, Sir Knight, of the severe charge under which this command is intrusted to your hands, and were it in my power to assist you, as a faithful minstrel and loyal subject, either with hand or tongue, I should feel myself called upon so to do ; but so far am I from being the character your suspicions have apprehended, that I should have held it for certain that the Bruce and Douglas had assembled their followers, for the purpose of renouncing their rebellious attempts, and taking their departure for the Holy Land, but for the apparition of the forester, who, I hear, bearded you at the hunting, which impresses upon me the belief, that when so resolute a follower and henchman of the Douglas was sitting fearless among you, his master and comrades could be at no great distance—how far his intentions could be friendly to you, I must leave it to yourself to judge; only believe me thus far, that the rack, pulley or pincers, would not have compelled me to act the informer, or adviser, in a quarrel wherein I have little or no share, if I had not been desirous of fixing the belief upon you, that you are dealing with a true man, and one who has your welfare at heart.—Meanwhile, permit me to have writing materials, or let my own be restored, for I possess, in some degree, the higher arts of my calling; nor do I fear but that I can procure for you an explanation of these marvels, without much more loss of time.”

“God grant it prove so,” said the governor; “though I see not well how I can hope for so favourable a termination, and I may sustain great harm by trusting too much on the present occasion. My duty, however, requires that, in the meantime, you be removed into strict confinement.”

He handed to the prisoner, as he spoke, the writing materials, which had been seized upon by the archers on their first entrance, and then commanded those satellites to unhand the minstrel.

“I must, then,” said Bertram, “remain subjected to all the severities of a strict captivity; but I deprecate no hardship whatever in my own person, so I may secure you from acting with a degree of rashness, of which you will all your life repent, without the means of atoning.”

“No more words, minstrel,” said the governor; “but since I have made my choice, perhaps a very dangerous one for myself, let us carry this spell into execution, which thou sayest is to serve me, as mariners say that oil spread upon the raging billows will assuage their fury.”

CHAPTER IX.

Beware! beware! of the black Friar,
He still retains his sway,
For he is yet the Church's heir by right,
Whoever may be the lay.
Amundeville is lord by day,
But the monk is lord by night,
Nor wine nor wassel could raise a vassal
To question that friar's right.

Don Juan, Canto xvii.

THE minstrel made no vain boast of the skill which he possessed in the use of pen and ink. In fact, no priest of the time could have produced his little scroll more speedily, more neatly composed, or more fairly written, than were the lines addressed "To the youth called Augustine, son of Bertram the Minstrel."

"I have not folded this letter," said he, "nor tied it with silk, for it is not expressed so as to explain the mystery to you; nor, to speak frankly, do I think that it can convey to you any intelligence; but it may be satisfactory to show you what the letter does not contain, and that it is written from and to a person who both mean kindly towards you and your garrison."

"That," said the governor, "is a deception which is easily practised; it tends, however, to show, though not with certainty, that you are disposed to act upon good faith; and until the contrary appear, I shall consider it a point of duty to treat you with as much gentleness as the matter admits of. Meantime, I will myself ride to the Abbey of Saint Bride, and in person examine the young prisoner; and as you say he has the power, so I pray to Heaven he may have the will, to read this riddle, which seems to throw us all into confusion." So saying, he ordered his horse, and while it was getting ready, he perused with great composure the minstrel's letter. Its contents ran thus:—

"DEAR AUGUSTINE,

"Sir John de Walton, the governor of this castle, has conceived those suspicions which I pointed out as likely to be the consequence of our coming to this country without an avowed errand. I at least am seized, and threatened with examination under torture, to force me to tell the purpose of our journey; but they shall tear my flesh from my bones, ere they force me to break the oath which I have taken. And the purport of this letter is to apprise you of the danger in which you stand of being placed in similar circumstances, unless you are disposed to authorize me to make the discovery to this knight; but on this subject you have only to express your own wishes, being assured they shall be in every respect attended to by your devoted

BERTRAM."

This letter did not throw the smallest light upon the mystery of the writer. The governor read it more than once, and turned it repeatedly in his hand, as if he had hoped by that mechanical process to draw something from the missive, which at a first view the words did not express; but as no result of this sort appeared, De Walton retired to the hall, where he informed Sir Aymer de

Valence, that he was going abroad as far as the Abbey of Saint Bride, and that he would be obliged by his taking upon him the duties of governor during his absence. Sir Aymer, of course, intimated his acquiescence in the charge; and the state of disunion in which they stood to each other, permitted no further explanation.

Upon the arrival of Sir John de Walton at the dilapidated shrine, the abbot, with trembling haste, made it his business immediately to attend the commander of the English garrison, upon whom for the present, their house depended for every indulgence they experienced, as well as for the subsistence and protection necessary to them in so perilous a period. Having interrogated this old man respecting the youth residing in the abbey, De Walton was informed that he had been indisposed since left there by his father, Bertram, a minstrel. It appeared to the abbot, that his indisposition might be of that contagious kind which, at that period, ravaged the English Borders, and made some incursions into Scotland, where it afterwards worked a fearful progress. After some farther conversation, Sir John de Walton put into the abbot's hand the letter to the young person under his roof, on delivering which to Augustine, the reverend father was charged with a message to the English governor, so bold, that he was afraid to be the bearer of it. It signified, that the youth could not, and would not, at that moment, receive the English knight; but that, if he came back on the morrow after mass, it was probable he might learn something of what was requested.

“This is not an answer,” said Sir John de Walton, “to be sent by a boy like this to a person in my charge; and methinks, Father Abbot, you consult your own safety but slenderly in delivering such an insolent message.”

The abbot trembled under the folds of his large coarse habit; and De Walton, imagining that his discomposure was the consequence of guilty fear, called upon him to remember the duties which he owed to England, the benefits which he had received from himself, and the probable consequence of taking part in a pert boy's insolent defiance of the power of the governor of the province.

The abbot vindicated himself from these charges with the utmost anxiety. He pledged his sacred word, that the inconsiderate character of the boy's message was owing to the waywardness arising from indisposition. He reminded the governor that, as a Christian and an Englishman, he had duties to observe towards the community of Saint Bride, which had never given the English government the least subject of complaint. As he spoke, the churchman seemed to gather courage from the immunities of his order. He said he could not permit a sick boy, who had taken refuge within the sanctuary of the Church, to be seized or subjected to any species of force, unless he was accused of a specific crime, capable of being immediately proved. The Douglasses, a headstrong race, had, in former days, uniformly respected the sanctuary of Saint Bride, and it was not to be supposed that the King of England, the dutiful and obedient child of the Church of Rome, would act with less veneration for her rights, than the followers of a usurper, homicide, and excommunicated person like Robert Bruce.

Walton was considerably shaken with this remonstrance. He knew that, in the circumstances of the times, the Pope had great power in every controversy in which it was his pleasure to interfere. He knew that even in the dispute respecting the supremacy of Scotland, his Holiness had set up a claim to the kingdom which, in the temper of the times, might perhaps have been deemed superior both to that of Robert Bruce and that of Edward of England, and he conceived his monarch would give him little thanks for any fresh embroilment which might take place with the Church. Moreover, it was easy to place a watch, so as to prevent Augustine from escaping during the night, and on the following morning he would be still as effectually in the power of the English governor as if he were seized on by open force at the present moment. Sir John de Walton however, so far exerted his authority over the abbot, that he engaged, in consideration of the sanctuary being respected for this space of time, that, when it expired, he would be aiding and assisting with his spiritual authority to surrender the youth, should he not allege a sufficient reason to the contrary. This arrangement, which appeared still to flatter the governor with the prospect of an easy termination of this troublesome dispute, induced him to grant the delay which Augustine rather demanded than petitioned for.

“At your request, Father Abbot, whom I have hitherto found a true man, I will indulge this youth with the grace he asks, before taking him into custody, understanding that he shall not be permitted to leave this place; and thou art to be responsible to this effect, giving thee, as is reasonable, power to command our little garrison at Hazelside, to which I will send a reinforcement on my return to the Castle, in case it should be necessary to use the strong hand, or circumstances impose upon me other measures.”

“Worthy Sir Knight,” replied the abbot, “I have no idea that the frowardness of this youth will render any course necessary, saving that of persuasion; and I venture to say, that you yourself will in the highest degree approve of the method in which I shall acquit myself of my present trust."

The abbot went through the duties of hospitality, enumerating what simple cheer the cloister of the convent permitted him to offer to the English knight. Sir John de Walton declined the offer of refreshment, however, took a courteous leave of the churchman, and did not spare his horse until the noble animal had brought him again before the Castle of Douglas. Sir Aymer de Valence met him on the drawbridge, and reported the state of the garrison to be the same in which he had left it, excepting that intimation had been received that twelve or fifteen men were expected on their way to the town of Lanark; and being on march from the neighbourhood of Ayr, would that night take up their quarters at the outpost of Hazelside.

"I am glad of it," replied the governor; "I was about to strengthen that detachment. This stripling, the son of Bertram the minstrel, or whoever he is, has engaged to deliver himself up for examination in the morning. As this party of soldiers are followers of your uncle, Lord Pembroke, may I request you will ride to meet them, and command them to remain at Hazelside until you make farther inquiries about this youth, who has still to clear up the mystery which hangs about him, and reply to a letter which I delivered with my own hand to the Abbot of Saint Bride. I have shown too much forbearance in this matter, and I trust to your looking to the security of this young man, and conveying him hither, with all due care and attention, as being a prisoner of some importance."

"Certainly, Sir John," answered Sir Aymer; "your orders shall be obeyed, since you have none of greater importance for one who hath the honour to be second only to yourself in this place."

"I crave your mercy, Sir Aymer," returned the governor, "if the commission be in any degree beneath your dignity; but it is our misfortune to misunderstand each other when we endeavour to be most intelligible."

"But what am I to do," said Sir Aymer—"no way disputing your command, but only asking for information—what am I to do, if the Abbot of Saint Bride offers opposition?"

"How!" answered Sir John de Walton; "with the reinforcement from my Lord of Pembroke, you will command at least twenty war-men, with bow and spear, against five or six timid old monks, with only gown and hood."

"True," said Sir Aymer, "but ban and excommunication are sometimes, in the present day, too hard for the mail coat, and I would not willingly be thrown out of the pale of the Christian Church."

"Well, then, thou very suspicious and scrupulous young man," replied De Walton, "know that if this youth does not deliver himself up to thee of his own accord, the abbot has promised to put him into thy hands."

There was no farther answer to be made, and De Valence, though still thinking himself unnecessarily harassed with the charge of a petty commission, took the sort of half arms which were always used when the knight stirred beyond the walls of the garrison, and proceeded to execute the commands of De Walton. A horseman or two, together with his squire Fabian, accompanied him.

The evening closed in with one of those Scottish mists which are commonly said to be equal to the showers of happier climates; the path became more and more dark, the hills more wreathed in vapours, and more difficult to traverse; and all the little petty inconveniences which rendered travelling through the district slow and uncertain, were augmented by the density of the fog which overhung every thing.

Sir Aymer, therefore, occasionally mended his pace, and often incurred the fate of one who is over-late, delaying himself by his efforts to make greater expedition. The knight bethought himself that he would get into a straight road by passing through the almost deserted town of Douglas,—the inhabitants of which had been treated so severely by the English, in the course of those fierce troubles, that most of them who were capable of bearing arms had left it, and withdrawn themselves to different parts of the country. This almost deserted place was defended by a rude palisade, and a ruder drawbridge, which gave entrance into streets so narrow, as to admit with difficulty three horses abreast, and evincing with what strictness the ancient lords of the village adhered to their prejudice against fortifications, and their opinion in favour of keeping the field, so quaintly expressed in the well-known proverb of the family,—“It is better to hear the lark sing than the mouse cheep.” The streets, or rather the lanes, were dark, but for a shifting gleam of moonlight, which, as that planet began to rise, was now and then visible upon some steep and narrow gable. No sound of domestic industry, or domestic festivity, was heard, and no ray of candle or firelight glanced from the windows of the houses; the ancient ordinance called the curfew, which the Conqueror had introduced into England, was at this time in full force in such parts of Scotland as were thought doubtful, and likely to rebel; under which description it need not be said the ancient possessions of the Douglas were most especially regarded. The Church, whose Gothic monuments were of a magnificent character, had been, as far as possible, destroyed by fire; but the ruins, held together by the weight of the massive stones of which they were composed, still sufficiently evinced the greatness of the family at whose cost it had been raised, and whose bones, from immemorial time, had been entombed in its crypts.

: Paying little attention to these relics of departed splendour, Sir Aymer de Valence advanced with his small detachment, and had passed the scattered fragments of the cemetery of the Douglasses, when to his surprise, the noise of his horse's feet was seemingly replied to by sounds which rung like those of another knightly steed advancing heavily up the street, as if it were to meet him. Valence was unable to conjecture what might be the cause of these warlike sounds; the ring and the clang of armour was distinct, and the heavy tramp of a war-horse was not to be mistaken by the ear of a warrior. The difficulty of keeping soldiers from straying out of quarters by night, would have sufficiently accounted for the appearance of a straggling foot-soldier; but it was more difficult to account for a mounted horseman, in full armour; and such was the apparition which a peculiarly bright glimpse of moonlight now showed at the bottom of the causewayed hill. Perhaps the unknown warrior obtained at the same time a glance of Aymer de Valence and his armed followers—at least each of them shouted "Who goes there?"—the alarm of the times; and on the instant the deep answers of "St. George!" on the one side, and, "The Douglas!" on the other, awakened the still echoes of the small and ruinous street, and the silent arches of the dilapidated church. Astonished at a war-cry with which so many recollections were connected, the English knight spurred his horse at full gallop down the steep and broken descent leading out at the south or southeast gate of the town; and it was the work of an instant to call out, "Ho! Saint George! upon the insolent villain all of you!—To the gate, Fabian, and cut him off from flight!—Saint George! I say, for England! Bows and bills!—bows and bills!" At the same time Aymer de Valence laid in rest his own long lance, which he snatched from the squire by whom it was carried. But the light was seen and gone in an instant, and though De Valence concluded that the hostile warrior had hardly room to avoid his career, yet he could take no aim for the encounter, unless by mere guess, and continued to plunge down the dark declivity, among shattered stones and other encumbrances, without groping out with his lance the object of his pursuit. He rode, in short, at a broken gallop, a descent of about fifty or sixty yards, without having any reason to suppose that he had met the figure which had appeared to him, although the narrowness of the street scarcely admitted his having passed him, unless both horse and horseman could have melted at the moment of encounter like an air-bubble. The riders of his suite, meanwhile, were struck with a feeling like supernatural terror, which a number of singular adventures had caused most of them to attach to the name of Douglas; and when he reached the gate by which the broken street was terminated, there was none close behind him but Fabian, in whose head no suggestions of a timorous nature could outlive the sound of his dear master's voice.

Here there were a post of English archers, who were turning out in considerable alarm, when De Valence and his page rode in amongst them. "Villains!" shouted De Valence, "why were you not upon your duty? Who was it passed through your post even now, with the traitorous cry of Douglas?"

"We know of no such," said the captain of the watch.

"That is to say, you besotted villains," answered the young knight, "you have been drinking, and have slept?"

The men protested the contrary, but in a confused manner, which was far from overcoming De Valence's suspicions. He called loudly to bring cressets, torches, and candles; and a few remaining inhabitants began to make their unwilling appearance, with such various means of giving light as they chanced to possess. They heard the story of the young English knight with wonder; nor, although it was confirmed by all his retinue, did they give credit to the recital, more than that the Englishmen wished, somehow or other, to pick a quarrel with the people of the place, under the pretence of their having admitted a retainer of their ancient lord by night into the town. They protested, therefore, their innocence of the cause of tumult, and endeavoured to seem active in hastening from house to house, and corner to corner, with their torches, in order to discover the invisible cavalier. The English suspected them no less of treachery, than the Scottish imagined the whole matter a pretext for bringing an accusation, on the part of the young knight, against the citizens. The women, however, who now began to issue from the houses, had a key for the solution of the apparition, which at that time was believed of efficacy sufficient to solve any mystery. "The devil," they said, "must have appeared visibly amongst them," an explanation which had already occurred to the followers of the young knight; for that a living man and horse, both as it seemed, of a gigantic size, could be conjured in the twinkling of an eye, and appear in a street secured at one end by the best of the archers, and at the other by the horsemen under Valence himself, was altogether, it seemed, a thing impossible. The inhabitants did not venture to put their thoughts on the subject into language, for fear of giving offence, and only indicated by a passing word to each other the secret degree of pleasure which they felt in the confusion and embarrassment of the English garrison. Still, however, they continued to affect a great deal of interest in the alarm which De Valence had received, and the anxiety which he expressed to discover the cause.

At length a female voice spoke above the Babel of confused sounds, saying, "Where is the Southern Knight? I am sure that I can tell him where he can find the only person who can help him out of his present difficulty."

"And who is that, good woman?" said Aymer de Valence, who was growing every moment more impatient at the loss of time, which was flying fast, in an investigation which had something in it vexatious, and even ridiculous. At the same time, the sight of an armed partisan of the Douglasses, in their own native town, seemed to bode too serious consequences, if it should be suffered to pass without being probed to the bottom.

"Come hither to me," said the female voice, "and I will name to you the only person who can explain all matters of this kind that chance in this country." On this the knight snatched a torch from some of those who were present, and holding it up, descried the person who spoke, a tall woman, who evidently endeavoured to render herself remarkable. When he approached her, she communicated her intelligence in a grave and sententious tone of voice.

“We had once wise men, that could have answered any parables which might have been put to them for explanation in this country side. Whether you yourselves, gentlemen, have not had some hand in weeding them out, good troth, it is not for the like of me to say; at any rate, good counsel is not so easy come by as it was in this Douglas country, nor, may be, is it a safe thing to pretend to the power of giving it.”

“Good woman,” said De Valence, “if you will give me an explanation of this mystery I will owe you a kirtle of the best raploch grey.”

“It is not I,” said the old woman, “that pretend to possess the knowledge which may assist you; but I would fain know that the man whom I shall name to you shall be scathless and harmless. Upon your knighthood and your honour, will you promise to me so much?”

“Assuredly,” said De Valence, “such a person shall even have thanks and reward, if he is a faithful informer; ay, and pardon, moreover, although he may have listened to any dangerous practices, or been concerned in any plots.”

“Oh! not he,” replied the female; “it is old Goodman Powheid, who has the charge of the muniments,” (meaning probably monuments,) “that is, such part of them as you English have left standing; I mean the old sexton of the kirk of Douglas, who can tell more stories of these old folk, whom your honour is not very fond of hearing named, than would last us from this day to Yule.”

“Does anybody,” said the knight, “know whom it is that this old woman means?”

"I conjecture," replied Fabian, "that she speaks of an old dotard, who is, I think, the general referee concerning the history and antiquities of this old town, and of the savage family that lived here perhaps before the flood."

"And who, I dare say," said the knight, "knows as much about the matter as she herself does. But where is this man? a sexton is he? He may be acquainted with places of concealment, which are often fabricated in Gothic buildings, and known to those whose business calls them to frequent them. Come, my good old dame, bring this man to me; or, what may be better, I will go to him, for we have already spent too much time."

"Time!" replied the old woman,—"is time an object with your honour? I am sure I can hardly get so much for mine as will hold soul and body together. You are not far from the old man's house."

She led the way accordingly, blundering over heaps of rubbish, and encountering all the embarrassments of a ruinous street, in lighting the way to Sir Aymer, who, giving his horse to one of his attendants, and desiring Fabian to be ready at a call, scrambled after as well as the slowness of his guide would permit.

Both were soon involved in the remains of the old church, much dilapidated as it had been by wanton damage done to it by the soldiery, and so much impeded by rubbish, that the knight marvelled how the old woman could find the way. She kept talking all the while as she stumbled onward. Sometimes she called out in a screeching tone, "Powheid! Lazarus Powheid!"—and then muttered—"Ay, ay, the old man will be busy with some of his duties, as he calls them; I wonder he fashes wi' them in these times. But never mind, I warrant they will last for his day, and for mine; and the times, Lord help us! for all that I can see, are well enough for those that are to live in them."

"Are you sure, good woman," replied the knight, "that there is any inhabitant in these ruins? For my part, I should rather suppose that you are taking me to the charnel-house of the dead."

"Maybe you are right," said the old woman with a ghastly laugh; "carles and carlines agree weel with funeral vaults and charnel-houses, and when an auld bedral dwells near the dead, he is living, ye ken, among his customers—Halloo! Powheid! Lazarus Powheid! there is a gentleman would speak with you;" and she added, with some sort of emphasis, "an English noble gentleman—one of the honourable garrison."

An old man's step was now heard advancing, so slowly that the glimmering light which he held in his hand was visible on the ruined walls of the vault some time before it showed the person who bore it.

The shadow of the old man was also projected upon the illuminated wall ere his person came in view; his dress was in considerable confusion, owing to his having been roused from his bed; and since artificial light was forbidden by the regulations of the garrison, the natives of Douglas Dale spent in sleep the time that they could not very well get rid of by any other means. The sexton was a tall thin man, emaciated by years and by privations; his body was bent habitually by his occupation of grave-digging, and his eye naturally inclined downward to the scene of his labours. His hand sustained the cruise or little lamp, which he held so as to throw light upon his visitant; at the same time it displayed to the young knight the features of the person with whom he was now confronted, which, though neither handsome nor pleasing, were strongly marked, sagacious, and venerable, indicating, at the same time, a certain air of dignity, which age, even mere poverty, may be found occasionally to bestow, as conferring that last melancholy species of independence proper to those whose situation can hardly by any imaginable means, be rendered much worse than years and fortune have already made it. The habit of a lay brother added somewhat of religious importance to his appearance.

“What would you with me, young man?” said the sexton. “Your youthful features, and your gay dress, bespeak one who stands in need of my ministry neither for himself nor for others.”

“I am indeed,” replied the knight, “a living man, and therefore need not either shovel or pick-axe for my own behoof. I am not, as you see, attired in mourning, and therefore need not your offices in behalf of any friend; I would only ask you a few questions.”

“What you would have done must needs be done, you being at present one of our rulers, and, as I think, a man of authority,” replied the sexton; “follow me this way into my poor habitation; I have had a better in my day; and yet, Heaven knows, it is good enough for me, when many men of much greater consequence must perforce content themselves with worse.”

He opened a lowly door, which was fitted, though irregularly, to serve as the entrance of a vaulted apartment, where it appeared that the old man held, apart from the living world, his wretched and solitary dwelling.* The floor, composed of paving stones, laid together with some accuracy, and here and there inscribed with letters and hieroglyphics, as if they had once upon a time served to distinguish sepulchres, was indifferently well swept, and a fire at the upper end directed its smoke into a hole which served for a chimney. The spade and pick-axe, (with other tools,) which the chamberlain of mortality makes use of, lay scattered about the apartment, and, with a rude stool or two, and a table, where some inexperienced hand had unquestionably supplied the labours of the joiner, were nearly the only furniture, if we include the old man's bed of straw, lying in a corner, and discomposed, as if he had been just raised from it. At the lower end of the apartment, the wall was almost entirely covered by a large escutcheon, such as is usually hung over the graves of men of very high rank, having the appropriate quarters, to the number of sixteen, each properly blazoned and distinct, placed as ornaments around the principal armorial coat itself.

* [This is a most graphic and accurate description of the present state of the ruin. Its being occupied by the sexton as a dwelling-place, and the whole scene of the old man's interview with De Valence, may be classed with our illustrious author's most felicitous imaginings.—Note by the Rev. Mr. STEWART of Douglas.]

"Let us sit," said the old man; "the posture will better enable my failing ears to apprehend your meaning, and the asthma will deal with me more mercifully in permitting me to make you understand mine."

A peal of short asthmatic coughs attested the violence of the disorder which he had last named, and the young knight followed his host's example, in sitting down on one of the rickety stools by the side of the fire. The old man brought from one corner of the apartment an apron, which he occasionally wore, full of broken boards in irregular pieces, some of which were covered with black cloth, or driven full of nails, black, as it might happen, or gilded.

"You will find this fresh fuel necessary," said the old man, "to keep some degree of heat within this waste apartment; nor are the vapours of mortality, with which this vault is apt to be filled, if the fire is permitted to become extinct, indifferent to the lungs of the dainty and the healthy, like your worship, though to me they are become habitual. The wood will catch fire, although it is some time ere the damps of the grave are overcome by the drier air, and the warmth of the chimney."

Accordingly, the relics of mortality with which the old man had heaped his fireplace, began by degrees to send forth a thick unctuous vapour, which at length leaped to light, and blazing up the aperture, gave a degree of liveliness to the gloomy scene. The blazonry of the huge escutcheon met and returned the rays with as brilliant a reflection as that lugubrious object was capable of, and the whole apartment looked with a fantastic gaiety, strangely mingled with the gloomy ideas which its ornaments were calculated to impress upon the imagination.

"You are astonished," said the old man, "and perhaps, Sir Knight, you have never before seen these relics of the dead applied to the purpose of rendering the living in some degree, more comfortable than their condition would otherwise admit of."

"Comfortable!" returned the Knight of Valence, shrugging his shoulders; "I should be sorry, old man, to know that I had a dog that was as indifferently quartered as thou art, whose gray hairs have certainly seen better days."

"It may be," answered the sexton, "and it may be otherwise; but it was not, I presume, concerning my own history that your worship seemed disposed to ask me some questions; and I would venture to inquire, therefore, to whom they have relation?"

"I will speak plainly to you," replied Sir Aymer, "and you will at once acknowledge the necessity of giving a short and distinct reply. I have even now met in the streets of this village a person only shown to me by a single flash of light, who had the audacity to display the armorial insignia and utter the war-cry of the Douglasses; nay, if I could trust a transient glance, this daring cavalier had the features and the dark complexion proper to the Douglas. I am referred to thee as to one who possesses means of explaining this extraordinary circumstance, which, as an English knight, and one holding a charge under King Edward, I am particularly called upon to make inquiry into."

"Let me make a distinction," said the old man. "The Douglasses of former generations are my near neighbours, and, according to my superstitious townsmen, my acquaintances and visitors; I can take it upon my conscience to be answerable for their good behaviour, and to become bound that none of the old barons, to whom the roots of that mighty tree may, it is said, be traced, will again disturb with their war-cry the towns or villages of their native country—not one will parade in moonshine the black armour which has long rusted upon their tombs.

'The knights are dust,
And their good swords are rust;
Their souls are with the saints, we trust.' *

* [The author has somewhat altered part of a beautiful unpublished fragment of Coleridge:—

"Where is the grave of Sir Arthur Orellan,— Where may the grave of that good knight be?
By the marge of a brook, on the slope of Helvellyn,
Under the boughs of a young birch-tree.
The oak that in Summer was pleasant to hear,
That rustled in Autumn all withered and sear,
That whistled and groan'd thro' the Winter alone,
He hath gone, and a birch in his place is grown.
The knight's bones are dust,
His good sword is rust;
His spirit is with the saints, we trust."—Edit.]

Look around, Sir Knight, you have above and around you the men of whom we speak. Beneath us, in a little aisle, (which hath not been opened since these thin gray locks were thick and brown,) there lies the first man whom I can name as memorable among those of this mighty line. It is he whom the Thane of Athol pointed out to the King of Scotland as Sholto Dhuglass, or the dark iron-coloured man, whose exertions had gained the battle for his native prince; and who, according to this legend, bequeathed his name to our dale and town, though others say that the race assumed the name of Douglas from the stream so called in unrecorded times, before they had their fastness on its banks. Others, his descendants, called Eachain, or Hector the first, and Orodh, or Hugh, William, the first of that name, and Gilmour, the theme of many a minstrel song, commemorating achievements done under the oriflamme of Charles the Great, Emperor of France, have all consigned themselves to their last sleep, nor has their memory been sufficiently preserved from the waste of time. Something we know concerning their great deeds, their great power, and, alas! their great crimes. Something we also know of a Lord of Douglas who sat in a Parliament at Forfar, held by King Malcolm the First, and we are aware that from his attachment to hunting the wild hart, he built himself a tower called Blackhouse, in the forest of Ettrick, which perhaps still exists."

"I crave your forgiveness, old man," said the knight, "but I have no time at present to bestow upon the recitation of the pedigree of the House of Douglas. A less matter would hold a well-breathed minstrel in subject for recitation for a calendar month, Sundays and holidays included."

“What other information can you expect from me,” said the sexton, “than that respecting those heroes, some of whom it has been my lot to consign to that eternal rest which will for ever divide the dead from the duties of this world? I have told you where the race sleep, down to the reign of the royal Malcolm. I can tell you also of another vault, in which lie Sir John of Douglas-burn, with his son Lord Archibald, and a third William, known by an indenture with Lord Abernethy. Lastly, I can tell you of him to whom that escutcheon, with its appurtenances of splendour and dignity, justly belong. Do you envy that nobleman, whom, if death were in the sound, I would not hesitate to term my honourable patron? and have you any design of dishonouring his remains? It will be a poor victory! nor does it become a knight and nobleman to come in person to enjoy such a triumph over the dead, against whom, when he lived, there were few knights dared spur their horses. He fought in defence of his country, but he had not the good fortune of most of his ancestors, to die on the field of battle. Captivity, sickness, and regret for the misfortunes of his native land, brought his head to the grave in his prison-house, in the land of the stranger.”

The old man's voice here became interrupted by emotion, and the English knight found it difficult to continue his examination in the stern fashion which his duty required.

“Old man,” he said, “I do not require from thee this detail, which must be useless to me, as well as painful to thyself. Thou dost but thy duty in rendering justice to thy ancient lord; but thou hast not yet explained to me why I have met in this town, this very night, and not half an hour since, a person in the arms, and bearing the complexion, of one of the Black Douglasses, who cried his war-cry as if in contempt of his conquerors."

"Surely," replied the sexton, "it is not my business to explain such a fancy, otherwise than by supposing that the natural fears of the Southron will raise the spectre of a Douglas at any time, when he is within sight of their sepulchre. Methinks, in such a night as this, the fairest cavalier would wear the complexion of this swarthy race, nor can I hold it wonderful that the war-cry which was once in the throats of so many thousands in this country, should issue upon occasion from the mouth of a single champion."

"You are bold, old man," returned the English knight; "do you consider that your life is in my power, and that it may, in certain cases, be my duty to inflict death with that degree of pain at which humanity shudders?"

The old man rose up slowly in the light of the blazing fire, displaying his emaciated features, which resembled those ascribed by artists to Saint Anthony of the desert; and pointing to the feeble lamp, which he placed upon the coarse table, thus addressed his interrogator, with an appearance of perfect firmness, and something even resembling dignity:—

"Young knight of England, you see that utensil constructed for the purpose of dispensing light amidst these fatal vaults,—it is as frail as any thing can well be, whose flame is supplied by living element, contained in a frame composed of iron. It is doubtless in your power entirely to end its service, by destroying the frame, or extinguishing the light. Threaten it with such annihilation, Sir Knight, and see whether your menace will impress any sense of fear either on the element or the iron. Know that you have no more power over the frail mortal whom you threaten with similar annihilation. You may tear from my body the skin in which it is now swathed, but although my nerves might glow with agony during the inhuman operation, it would produce no more impression on me than flaying on the stag which an arrow has previously pierced through the heart. My age sets me beyond your cruelty: if you think otherwise, call your agents, and commence your operations; neither threats nor inflictions will enable you to extort from me any thing that I am not ready to tell you of my own accord."

"You trifle with me, old man," said De Valence; "you talk as if you possessed some secret respecting the motions of these Douglasses, who are to you as gods, yet you communicate no intelligence to me whatever."

"You may soon know," replied the old man, "all that a poor sexton has to communicate; and it will not increase your knowledge respecting the living, though it may throw some light upon my proper domains, which are those of the dead. The spirits of the deceased Douglasses do not rest in their graves during the dishonour of their monuments, and the downfall of their house. That, upon death, the greater part of any line are consigned to the regions of eternal bliss, or of never-ending misery, religion will not suffer us to believe, and amidst a race who had so great a share of worldly triumph and prosperity, we must suppose there have existed many who have been justly subjected to the doom of an intermediate space of punishment. You have destroyed the temples which were built by their posterity to propitiate Heaven for the welfare of their souls; you have silenced the prayers and stopped the choirs, by the mediation of which the piety of children had sought to appease the wrath of Heaven in behalf of their ancestors, subjected to expiatory fires. Can you wonder that the tormented spirits, thus deprived of the relief which had been proposed to them, should not, according to the common phrase, rest in their graves? Can you wonder they should show themselves like discontented loiterers near to the places which, but for the manner in which you have prosecuted your remorseless warfare, might have ere now afforded them rest? Or do you marvel that these fleshless warriors should interrupt your marches, and do what else their airy nature may permit to disturb your councils, and meet as far as they may the hostilities which you make it your boast to carry on, as well against those who are deceased, as against any who may yet survive your cruelty?"

"Old man," replied Aymer de Valence, "you cannot expect that I am to take for answer a story like this, being a fiction too gross to charm to sleep a schoolboy tormented with the toothach; nevertheless, I thank God that thy doom does not remain in my hands. My squire and two archers shall carry thee captive to the worshipful Sir John de Walton, Governor of the Castle and Valley, that he may deal with thee as seems meet; nor is he a person to believe in your apparitions and ghosts from purgatory.—What ho! Fabian! Come hither, and bring with thee two archers of the guard."

Fabian, accordingly, who had waited at the entrance of the ruined building, now found his way, by the light of the old sexton's lamp, and the sound of his master's voice, into the singular apartment of the old man, the strange decorations of which struck the youth with great surprise, and some horror.

"Take the two archers with thee, Fabian," said the knight of Valence, "and, with their assistance, convey this old man, on horseback, or in a litter, to the presence of the worshipful Sir John de Walton. Tell him what we have seen, which thou didst witness as well as I; and tell him that this old sexton, whom I send to be examined by his superior wisdom, seems to know more than he is willing to disclose respecting our ghostly cavalier, though he will give us no account of him, except intimating that he is a spirit of the old Douglasses from purgatory, to which Sir John de Walton will give what faith he pleases. You may say, that, for my part, my belief is, either that the sexton is crazed by age, want, and enthusiasm, or that he is connected with some plot which the country people are hatching. You may also say that I shall not use much ceremony with the youth under the care of the Abbot of St. Bride; there is something suspicious in all the occurrences that are now passing around us."

Fabian promised obedience; and the knight, pulling him aside, gave him an additional caution, to behave with attention in this business, seeing he must recollect that neither the judgment of himself, nor that of his master, were apparently held in very much esteem by the governor; and that it would ill become them to make any mistake in a matter where the safety of the Castle was perhaps concerned.

"Fear me not, worshipful sir," replied the youth; "I am returning to pure air in the first place, and a good fire in the second, both acceptable exchanges for this dungeon of suffocating vapours and execrable smells. You may trust to my making no delay; a very short time will carry me back to Castle Douglas, even moving with suitable attention to this old man's bones."

"Use him humanely," answered the knight. "And thou, old man, if thou art insensible to threats of personal danger in this matter, remember, that if thou art found paltering with us, thy punishment will perhaps be more severe than any we can inflict upon thy person."

"Can you administer the torture to the soul?" said the sexton.

"As to thee," answered the knight, "we have that power;—we will dissolve every monastery or religious establishment held for the souls of these Douglasses, and will only allow the religious people to hold their residence there upon condition of their praying for the soul of King Edward the First of glorious memory, the malleus Scotorum; and if the Douglasses are deprived of the ghostly benefit of the prayers and services of such shrines, they may term thy obstinacy the cause."

"Such a species of vengeance," answered the old man, in the same bold unsubdued tone which he had hitherto used, "were more worthy of the infernal fiends than of Christian men."

The squire raised his hand. The knight interposed: "Forbear him," he said, "Fabian, he is very old, and perhaps insane.—And you, sexton, remember that the vengeance threatened is lawfully directed towards a family which have been the obstinate supporters of the excommunicated rebel, who murdered the Red Comyn at the High Church in Dumfries."

So saying, Aymer strode out of the ruins, picking his way with much difficulty—took his horse, which he found at the entrance—repeated a caution to Fabian, to conduct himself with prudence—and, passing on to the south-western gate, gave the strongest injunctions concerning the necessity of keeping a vigilant watch, both by patrols and by sentinels, intimating, at the same time, that it must have been neglected during the preceding part of the evening. The men murmured an apology, the confusion of which seemed to express that there had existed some occasion for the reprimand.

Sir Aymer then proceeded on his journey to Hazelside, his train diminished by the absence of Fabian and his assistants. After a hasty, but not a short journey, the knight alighted at Thomas Dickson's, where he found the detachment from Ayr had arrived before him, and were snugly housed for the night. He sent one of the archers to announce his approach to the Abbot of Saint Bride and his young guest, intimating at the same time, that the archer must keep sight of the latter until he himself arrived at the chapel, which would be instantly.

CHAPTER X.

When the nightengale singes, the wodes waxes grene,
 Lef, and gras, and blosme, springeth in April I wene,
 And love is to myne herte gone with one speare so kene.
 Night and day my blood hyt drynkes, mine herte deth me tene.

MSS. Harl. Quoted by Warton.

SIR AYMER DE VALENCE had no sooner followed his archer to the convent of Saint Bride, than he summoned the abbot to his presence, who came with the air of a man who loves his ease, and who is suddenly called from the couch where he has consigned himself to a comfortable repose, at the summons of one whom he does not think it safe to disobey, and to whom he would not disguise his sense of peevishness, if he durst.

“It is a late ride,” he said, “which has brought your worthy honour hither from the castle. May I be informed of the cause, after the arrangement so recently gone into with the governor?”

“It is my hope,” replied the knight, “that you, Father Abbot, are not already conscious of it; suspicions are afloat, and I myself have this night seen something to confirm them, that some of the obstinate rebels of this country are again setting afoot dangerous practices, to the peril of the garrison; and I come, father, to see whether, in requital of many favours received from the English monarch, you will not merit his bounty and protection, by contributing to the discovery of the designs of his enemies."

"Assuredly so," answered Father Jerome, in an agitated voice. "Most unquestionably my information should stand at your command; that is, if I knew any thing the communication of which could be of advantage to you."

"Father Abbot," replied the English knight, "although it is rash to make myself responsible for a North-country man in these times, yet I own I do consider you as one who has ever been faithfully subject to the King of England, and I willingly hope that you will still continue so."

"And a fine encouragement I have!" said the abbot; "to be called out of my bed at midnight, in this raw weather, to undergo the examination of a knight, who is the youngest, perhaps, of his own honourable rank, and who will not tell me the subject of the interrogatories, but detains me on this cold pavement, till, according to the opinion of Celsus, the podagra which lurks in my feet may be driven into my stomach, and then good-night to abbacy and examinations from henceforward."

"Good father," said the young man, "the spirit of the times must teach thee patience; recollect that I can feel no pleasure in this duty, and that if an insurrection should take place, the rebels, who are sufficiently displeased with thee for acknowledging the English monarch, would hang thee from thine own steeple to feed the crows; or that, if thou hast secured thy peace by some private compact with the insurgents, the English governor, who will sooner or later gain the advantage, will not fail to treat thee as a rebel to his sovereign."

"It may appear to you, my noble son," answered the abbot, obviously discomposed, "that I am hung up, in this case, on the horns of the dilemma which you have stated;

nevertheless, I protest to you, that if any one accuses me of conspiring with the rebels against the King of England, I am ready, provided you give me time to swallow a potion recommended by Celsus in my perilous case, to answer with the most perfect sincerity every question which you can put to me upon that subject." So saying, he called upon a monk who had attended at his levée, and giving him a large key, whispered something in his ear. The cup which the monk brought, was of such capacity as proved Celsus's draught required to be administered in considerable quantity, and a strong smell which it spread through the apartment, accredited the knight's suspicion that the medicine chiefly consisted of what were then termed distilled waters, a preparation known in the monasteries for some time before that comfortable secret had reached the laity in general. The abbot, neither overawed by the strength nor by the quantity of the potion, took it off with what he himself would have called a feeling of solace and pleasance, and his voice became much more composed; he signified himself as comforted extraordinarily by the medicine, and willing to proceed to answer any questions which could be put to him by his gallant young friend.

"At present," said the knight, "you are aware, father, that strangers travelling through this country, must be the first objects of our suspicions and inquiries. What is, for example, your own opinion of the youth termed Augustine, the son, or calling himself so, of a person called Bertram the minstrel, who has resided for some days in your convent?"

The abbot heard the question with eyes expressive of surprise at the quarter from which it came.

"Assuredly," said he, "I think of him as a youth who, from any thing I have seen, is of that excellent disposition, both with respect to loyalty and religion, which I should have expected, were I to judge from the estimable person who committed him to my care."

With this the abbot bowed to the knight, as if he had conceived that this repartee gave him a silencing advantage in any question which could follow upon that subject; and he was probably, therefore, surprised when Sir Aymer replied as follows:

"It is very true, Father Abbot, that I myself did recommend this stripling to you as a youth of a harmless disposition, and with respect to whom it would be unnecessary to exercise the strict vigilance extended to others in similar circumstances; but the evidence which seemed to me to vouch for this young man's innocence, has not appeared so satisfactory to my superior and commander; and it is by his orders that I now make farther inquiries of you. You must think they are of consequence, since we again trouble you, and at so unwonted an hour."

"I can only protest by my order, and by the veil of Saint Bride," replied the abbot, the spirit of Celsus appearing to fail his pupil, "that whatever evil may be in this matter, is totally unknown to me—nor could it be extorted from me by racks or implements of torture. Whatever signs of disloyalty may have been evinced by this young man I have witnessed none of them, although I have been strictly attentive to his behaviour."

"In what respect?" said the knight—"and what is the result of your observation?"

"My answer," said the abbot of Saint Bride, "shall be sincere and downright. The youth condescended upon payment of a certain number of gold crowns, not by any means to repay the hospitality of the church of Saint Bride, but merely"—

"Nay, father," interrupted the knight, "you may cut that short, since the governor and I well understand the terms upon which the monks of Saint Bride exercise their hospitality. In what manner, it is more necessary to ask, was it received by this boy?"

"With the utmost gentleness and moderation, noble sir," answered the abbot; "indeed it appeared to me, at first, that he might be a troublesome guest, since the amount of his benevolence to the convent was such as to encourage, and, in some degree, to authorize, his demanding accommodation of a kind superior to what we had to bestow."

"In which case," said Sir Aymer, "you would have had the discomfort of returning some part of the money you had received?"

"That," replied the abbot, "would have been a mode of settlement contrary to our vows. What is paid to the treasury of Saint Bridget, cannot, agreeably to our rule, be on any account restored. But, noble knight, there was no occasion for this; a crust of white bread and a draught of milk were diet sufficient to nourish this poor youth for a day, and it was my own anxiety for his health that dictated the furnishing of his cell with a softer bed and coverlet than are quite consistent with the rules of our order."

"Now hearken to what I say, Sir Abbot, and answer me truly," said the Knight of Valence—"What communication has this youth held with the inmates of your convent, or with those beyond your house? Search your memory concerning this, and let me have a distinct answer, for your guest's safety and your own depend upon it."

“As I am a Christian man,” said the abbot, “I have observed nothing which could give ground for your worship’s suspicions. The boy Augustine, unlike those whom I have observed who have been educated in the world, showed a marked preference to the company of such sisters as the house of Saint Bride contains, rather than for that of the monks, my brethren, although there are among them pleasant and conversable men.”

“Scandal,” said the young knight, “might find a reason for that preference.”

“Not in the case of the sisters of Saint Bridget,” said the abbot, “most of whom have been either sorely misused by time, or their comeliness destroyed by some mishap previously to their being received into the seclusion of the house.”

This observation the good father made with some internal movement of mirth, which was apparently excited at the idea of the sisterhood of Saint Bridget becoming attractive to any one by dint of their personal beauty, in which, as it happened, they were all notably, and almost ludicrously, deficient. The English knight, to whom the sisterhood were well known, felt also inclined to smile at this conversation.

“I acquit,” he said, “the pious sisterhood of charming, otherwise than by their kind wishes, and attention to the wants of the suffering stranger.”

“Sister Beatrice,” continued the father, resuming his gravity, “is indeed blessed with a winning gift of making comfits and syllabubs; but, on minute inquiry, I do not find that the youth has tasted any of them. Neither is sister Ursula so hard-favoured by nature, as from the effects of an accident; but your honour knows that when a woman is ugly, the men do not trouble themselves about the cause of her hard favour. I will go, with your leave, and see in what state the youth now is, and summon him before you."

"I request you to do so, father, for the affair is instant: and I earnestly advise you to watch, in the closest manner, this Augustine's behaviour: you cannot be too particular. I will wait your return, and either carry the boy to the castle, or leave him here, as circumstances may seem to require."

The abbot bowed, promised his utmost exertions, and hobbled out of the room to wait on the youth Augustine in his cell, anxious to favour, if possible, the wishes of De Valence, whom he looked upon as rendered by circumstances his military patron.

He remained long absent, and Sir Aymer began to be of opinion that the delay was suspicious, when the abbot returned with perplexity and discomposure in his countenance.

"I crave your pardon for keeping your worship waiting," said Jerome, with much anxiety; "but I have myself been detained and vexed by unnecessary formalities and scruples on the part of this peevish boy. In the first place, hearing my foot approaching his bedroom, my youth, instead of undoing the door, which would have been but proper respect to my place, on the contrary draws a strong bolt on the inside; and this fastening, forsooth, has been placed on his chamber by Ursula's command, that his slumbers might be suitably respected. I intimated to him, as I best could, that he must attend you without delay, and prepare to accompany you to the Castle of Douglas; but he would not answer a single word, save recommending to me patience, to which I was fain to have recourse, as well as your archer, whom I found standing sentinel before the door of the cell, and contenting himself with the assurance of the sisters that there was no other passage by which Augustine could make his escape. At length the door opens, and my young master presents himself fully arrayed for his journey. The truth is, I think some fresh attack of his malady has affected the youth; he may perhaps be disturbed with some touch of hypochondria, or black choler, a species of dotage of the mind, which is sometimes found concomitant with and symptomatic of this disorder; but he is at present composed, and if your worship chooses to see him, he is at your command."

"Call him hither," said the knight. And a considerable space of time again elapsed ere the eloquence of the abbot, half chiding and half soothing, prevailed on the lady, in her adopted character, to approach the parlour, in which at last she made her appearance, with a countenance on which the marks of tears might still be discovered, and a pettish sullenness, like that of a boy, or, with reverence, that of a girl, who is determined upon taking her own way in any matter, and equally resolved to give no reason for her doing so. Her hurried levée had not prevented her attending closely to all the muffings and disguisings by which her pilgrim's dress was arranged, so as to alter her appearance, and effectually disguise her sex. But as civility prevented her wearing her large slouched hat, she necessarily exposed her countenance more than in the open air; and though the knight beheld a most lovely set of features, yet they were not such as were inconsistent with the character she had adopted, and which she had resolved upon maintaining to the last. She had, accordingly, mustered up a degree of courage which was not natural to her, and which she perhaps supported by hopes which her situation hardly admitted. So soon as she found herself in the same apartment with De Valence, she assumed a style of manners, bolder and more determined than she had hitherto displayed.

"Your worship," she said, addressing him even before he spoke, "is a knight of England, and possessed, doubtless, of the virtues which become that noble station. I am an unfortunate lad, obliged, by reasons which I am under the necessity of keeping secret, to travel in a dangerous country, where I am suspected, without any just cause, of becoming accessory to plots and conspiracies which are contrary to my own interest, and which my very soul abhors; and which I might safely abjure, by imprecating upon myself all the curses of our religion and renouncing all its promises, if I were accessory to such designs, in thought, word, or deed. Nevertheless, you, who will not believe my solemn protestations, are about to proceed against me as a guilty person, and in so doing I must warn you, Sir Knight, that you will commit a great and cruel injustice."

"I shall endeavour to avoid that," said the knight, "by referring the duty to Sir John de Walton, the governor, who will decide what is to be done; in this case, my only duty will be to place you in his hands at Douglas Castle."

"Must you do this?" said Augustine.

"Certainly," replied the knight, "or be answerable for neglecting my duty."

"But if I become bound to answer your loss with a large sum of money, a large tract of land"—

"No treasure, no land,—supposing such at your disposal," answered the knight, "can atone for disgrace; and, besides, boy, how should I trust to your warrant were my avarice such as would induce me to listen to such proposals?"

"I must then prepare to attend you instantly to the Castle of Douglas and the presence of Sir John de Walton?" replied Augustine.

"Young man," answered De Valence, "there is no remedy, since if you delay me longer, I must carry you thither by force."

"What will be the consequence to my father?" said the youth.

"That," replied the knight, "will depend exactly on the nature of your confession and his; something you both have to say, as is evident from the terms of the letter Sir John de Walton conveyed to you; and I assure you, you were better to speak it out at once than to risk the consequences of more delay. I can admit of no more trifling; and, believe me, that your fate will be entirely ruled by your own frankness and candour."

"I must prepare, then, to travel at your command," said the youth. "But this cruel disease still hangs around me, and Abbot Jerome, whose leech-craft is famous, will himself assure you that I cannot travel without danger of my life; and that while I was residing in this convent, I declined every opportunity of exercise which was offered me by the kindness of the garrison at Hazelside, lest I might by mishap bring the contagion among your men."

"The youth says right," said the abbot; "the archers and men-at-arms have more than once sent to invite this lad to join in some of their military games, or to amuse them, perhaps, with some of his minstrelsy; but he has uniformly declined doing so; and, according to my belief, it is the effects of this disorder which have prevented his accepting an indulgence so natural to his age, and in so dull a place as the convent of Saint Bride must needs seem to a youth bred up in the world."

"Do you then hold, reverend father," said Sir Aymer, "that there is real danger in carrying this youth to the castle to-night, as I proposed?"

"I conceive such danger," replied the abbot, "to exist, not only as it may occasion the relapse of the poor youth himself, but as particularly likely, no preparations having been made, to introduce the infection among your honourable garrison; for it is in these relapses, more than in the first violence of the malady, that it has been found most contagious."

"Then," said the knight, "you must be content, my friend, to give a share of your room to an archer, by way of sentinel."

"I cannot object," said Augustine, "provided my unfortunate vicinity does not endanger the health of the poor soldier."

"He will be as ready to do his duty," said the abbot, "without the door of the apartment as within it; and if the youth should sleep soundly, which the presence of a guard in his chamber might prevent, he is the more likely to answer your purpose on the morrow."

"Let it be so," said Sir Aymer; "so you are sure that you do not minister any facility of escape."

"The apartment," said the monk, "hath no other entrance than that which is guarded by the archer; but, to content you, I shall secure the door in your presence."

"So be it, then," said the knight of Valence; "this done, I myself will lie down without doffing my mail-shirt, and snatch a sleep till the ruddy dawn calls me again to duty, when you, Augustine, will hold yourself ready to attend me to our Castle of Douglas."

The bells of the convent summoned the inhabitants and inmates of Saint Bride to morning prayers at the first peep of day. When this duty was over, the knight demanded his prisoner. The abbot marshalled him to the door of Augustine's chamber. The sentinel who was stationed there, armed with a brown-bill, or species of partisan, reported that he had heard no motion in the apartment during the whole night. The abbot tapped at the door, but received no answer. He knocked again louder, but the silence was unbroken from within.

"What means this?" said the reverend ruler of the convent of Saint Bride; "my young patient has certainly fallen into a syncope or swoon!"

"I wish, Father Abbot," said the knight, "that he may not have made his escape instead, an accident which both you and I may be required to answer, since, according to our strict duty, we ought to have kept sight of him, and detained him in close custody until daybreak."

"I trust your worship," said the abbot, "only anticipates a misfortune which I cannot think possible."

"We shall speedily see," said the knight; and raising his voice, he called aloud, so as to be heard within, "Bring crowbars and levers, and burst me that door into splinters without an instant's delay."

The loudness of his voice, and the stern tone in which he spoke, soon brought around him the brethren of the house, and two or three soldiers of his own party, who were already busy in caparisoning their horses. The displeasure of the young knight was manifested by his flushed features, and the abrupt manner in which he again repeated his commands for breaking open the door. This was speedily performed, though it required the application of considerable strength, and as the shattered remains fell crashing into the apartment, De Valence sprung, and the abbot hobbled, into the cell of the prisoner, which, to the fulfilment of their worst suspicions, they found empty.

CHAPTER XI.

Where is he? Has the deep earth swallow'd him?
Or hath he melted like some airy phantom
That shuns the approach of morn and the young sun?
Or hath he wrapt him in Cimmerian darkness,
And pass'd beyond the circuit of the sight
With things of the night's shadows?

ANONYMOUS.

THE disappearance of the youth, whose disguise and whose fate have, we hope, inclined our readers to take some interest in him, will require some explanation ere we proceed with the other personages of the story, and we shall set about giving it accordingly.

When Augustine was consigned to his cell for the second time on the preceding evening, both the monk and the young Knight of Valence had seen the key turned upon him, and had heard him secure the door in the inside with the bolt which had been put on at his request by sister Ursula, in whose affections the youth of Augustine, his extreme handsomeness, and, above all, his indisposition of body, and his melancholy of mind, had gained him considerable interest.

So soon, accordingly, as Augustine reëntered his apartment, he was greeted in a whisper by the sister, who, during the interval of his absence, had contrived to slip into the cell, and having tappiced herself behind the little bed, came out, with great appearance of joy, to greet the return of the youth. The number of little attentions, the disposal of holly boughs, and such other evergreens as the season permitted, showed the anxiety of the holy sisters to decorate the chamber of their guest, and the greetings of sister Ursula expressed the same friendly interest, at the same time intimating that she was already in some degree in possession of the stranger's mystery.

As Augustine and the holy sister were busied in exchange of confidence, the extraordinary difference between their countenances and their persons must have struck any one who might have been accidentally a witness of their interview. The dark pilgrim's robe of the disguised female, was not a stronger contrast to the white woollen garment worn by the votaress of Saint Bride, than the visage of the nun, seamed with many a ghastly scar, and the light of one of her eyes extinguished for ever, causing it to roll a sightless luminary in her head, was to the beautiful countenance of Augustine, now bent with a confidential, and even affectionate look, upon the extraordinary features of her companion.

"You know," said the supposed Augustine, "the principal part of my story; can you, or will you, lend me your assistance? If not, my dearest sister, you must consent to witness my death, rather than my shame. Yes, sister Ursula, I will not be pointed at by the finger of scorn, as the thoughtless maiden who sacrificed so much for a young man, of whose attachment she was not so well assured as she ought to have been. I will not be dragged before De Walton, for the purpose of being compelled, by threats of torture, to declare myself the female in honour of whom he holds the Dangerous Castle. No doubt, he might be glad to give his hand in wedlock to a damsel whose dowry is so ample; but who can tell whether he will regard me with that respect which every woman would wish to command, or pardon that boldness of which I have been guilty, even though its consequences have been in his own favour?"

"Nay, my darling daughter," answered the nun, "comfort yourself; for in all I can aid you, be assured I will. My means are somewhat more than my present situation may express, and, be assured, they shall be tried to the uttermost. Methinks, I still hear that lay which you sung to the other sisters and myself, although I alone, touched by feelings kindred to yours, had the address to comprehend that it told your own tale."

"I am yet surprised," said Augustine speaking beneath her breath, "how I had the boldness to sing in your ears the lay, which, in fact, was the history of my disgrace."

"Alas! that you will say so," returned the nun; "there was not a word but what resembled those tales of love and of high-spirited daring which the best minstrels love to celebrate, and the noblest knights and maidens weep at once and smile to hear. The Lady Augusta of Berkely, a great heiress, according to the world, both in land and movable goods, becomes the king's ward by the death of her parents; and thus is on the point of being given away in marriage to a minion of the King of England, whom in these Scottish valleys we scruple not to call a peremptory tyrant."

"I must not say so, my sister," said the pilgrim; "and yet, true it is, that the cousin of the obscure parasite Gaviston, on whom the king wished to confer my poor hand, was neither by birth, merit, nor circumstance, worthy of such an alliance. Meantime, I heard of the fame of Sir John de Walton; and I heard of it not with the less interest that his feats of chivalry were said to adorn a knight, who, rich in everything else, was poor in worldly goods, and in the smiles of fortune. I saw this Sir John de Walton, and I acknowledge that a thought, which had already intruded itself on my imagination, became, after this interview, by frequent recurrence, more familiar, and more welcome to me. Methought that the daughter of a powerful English family, if she could give away with her hand such wealth as the world spoke of, would more justly and honourably bestow it in remedying the errors of fortune in regard to a gallant knight like De Walton, than in patching the revenues of a beggarly Frenchman, whose only merit was in being the kinsman of a man who was very generally detested by the whole kingdom of England, excepting the infatuated monarch himself."

"Nobly designed, my daughter," said the nun; "what more worthy of a noble heart, possessing riches, beauty, birth, and rank, than to confer them all upon indigent and chivalrous merit?"

"Such, dearest sister, was my intention," replied Augustine; "but I have, perhaps, scarce sufficiently explained the manner in which I meant to proceed. By the advice of a minstrel of our house, the same who is now prisoner at Douglas, I caused exhibit a large feast upon Christmas eve, and sent invitations abroad to the young knights of noble name who were known to spend their leisure in quest of arms and adventures. When the tables were drawn, and the feast concluded, Bertram, as had been before devised, was called upon to take his harp. He sung, receiving from all who were present the attention due to a minstrel of so much fame. The theme which he chose, was the frequent capture of this Douglas Castle, or, as the poet termed it, Castle Dangerous. 'Where are the champions of the renowned Edward the First,' said the minstrel, 'when the realm of England cannot furnish a man brave enough, or sufficiently expert in the wars, to defend a miserable hamlet of the North against the Scottish rebels, who have vowed to retake it over our soldiers' heads ere the year rolls to an end? Where are the noble ladies, whose smiles used to give countenance to the Knights of Saint George's Cross? Alas! the spirit of love and of chivalry is alike dead amongst us—our knights are limited to petty enterprises—and our noblest heiresses are given as prizes to strangers, as if their own country had no one to deserve them.'—Here stopt the harp; and I shame to say, that I myself, as if moved to enthusiasm by the song of the minstrel, arose, and taking from my neck the chain of gold which supported a crucifix of special sanctity, I made my vow, always under the King's permission, that I would give my hand, and the inheritance of my fathers, to the good knight, being of noble birth and lineage, who should keep the Castle of Douglas in the King of England's name, for a year and a day. I sat down, my dearest sister, deafened with the jubilee in which my guests expressed their applause of my supposed patriotism. Yet some degree of pause took place amidst the young knights, who might reasonably have been supposed ready to embrace this offer, although at the risk of being encumbered with Augusta of Berkely."

"Shame on the man," said sister Ursula, "who should think so? Put your beauty alone, my dearest, into consideration, and a true knight ought to have embraced the dangers of twenty Castles of Douglas, rather than let such an invaluable opportunity of gaining your favour be lost."

"It may be that some in reality thought so," said the pilgrim; "but it was supposed that the king's favour might be lost by those who seemed too anxious to thwart his royal purpose upon his ward's hand. At any rate, greatly to my joy, the only person who availed himself of the offer I had made was Sir John de Walton; and as his acceptance of it was guarded by a clause, saving and reserving the king's approbation, I hope he has not suffered any diminution of Edward's favour."

"Assure yourself, noble and high-spirited young lady," replied the nun, "that there is no fear of thy generous devotion hurting thy lover with the King of England. Something we hear concerning worldly passages, even in this remote nook of Saint Bride's cloister; and the report goes among the English soldiers that their king was indeed offended at your putting your will in opposition to his own; yet, on the other hand, this preferred lover, Sir John de Walton, was a man of such extensive fame, and your offer was so much in the character of better but not forgotten times, that even a king could not at the beginning of a long and stubborn war deprive an errant cavalier of his bride, if she could be duly won by his sword and lance."

"Ah! dearest sister Ursula!" sighed the disguised pilgrim, "but, on the other hand, how much time must pass by in the siege, by defeating which that suit must needs be advanced? While I sat in my lonely castle, tidings after tidings came to astound me with the numerous, or rather the constant dangers, with which my lover was surrounded, until at length, in a moment I think of madness, I resolved to set out in this masculine disguise; and having myself with my own eyes seen in what situation I had placed my knight, I determined to take such measures in respect to shortening the term of his trial, or otherwise, as a sight of Douglas Castle, and—why should I deny it?—of Sir John de Walton, might suggest. Perhaps you, my dearest sister, may not so well understand my being tempted into flinching from the resolution which I had laid down for my own honour, and that of my lover; but consider, that my resolution was the consequence of a moment of excitation, and that the course which I adopted was the conclusion of a long, wasting, sickening state of uncertainty, the effect of which was to weaken the nerves which were once highly strung with love of my country, as I thought; but in reality, alas! with fond and anxious feelings of a more selfish description.”

“Alas!” said sister Ursula, evincing the strongest symptoms of interest and compassion, “am I the person, dearest child, whom you suspect of insensibility to the distresses which are the fruit of true love? Do you suppose that the air which is breathed within these walls has the property, upon the female heart, of such marvellous fountains as they say change into stone the substances which are immersed into their waters? Hear my tale, and judge if it can be thus with one who possesses my causes of grief. And do not fear for loss of time; we must let our neighbours at Hazelside be settled for the evening, ere I furnish you with the means of escape; and you must have a trusty guide, for whose fidelity I will be responsible, to direct your path through these woods, and protect you in case of any danger, too likely to occur in these troublesome times. It will thus be nigh an hour ere you depart; and sure I am that in no manner can you spend the time better than in listening to distresses too similar to your own, and flowing from the source of disappointed affection which you must needs sympathize with."

The distresses of the Lady Augusta did not prevent her being in some degree affected, almost ludicrously, with the singular contrast between the hideous countenance of this victim of the tender passion, and the cause to which she imputed her sorrows; but it was not a moment for giving way to a sense of the ridiculous, which would have been in the highest degree offensive to the sister of Saint Bride, whose good-will she had so many reasons to conciliate. She readily, therefore, succeeded in preparing herself to listen to the votary with an appearance of sympathy, which might reward that which she had herself experienced at the hands of sister Ursula; while the unfortunate recluse, with an agitation which made her ugliness still more conspicuous, narrated, nearly in a whisper, the following circumstances:—

"My misfortunes commenced long before I was called sister Ursula, or secluded as a votaress within these walls. My father was a noble Norman, who, like many of his countrymen, sought and found fortune at the court of the King of Scotland. He was endowed with the sheriffdom of this county, and Maurice de Hattely, or Hautlieu, was numbered among the wealthy and powerful barons of Scotland. Wherefore should I deny it, that the daughter of this baron, then called Margaret de Hautlieu, was also distinguished among the great and fair of the land? It can be no censurable vanity which provokes me to speak the truth, and unless I tell it myself, you could hardly suspect what a resemblance I once bore even to the lovely Lady Augusta of Berkely. About this time broke out those unfortunate feuds of Bruce and Baliol, which have been so long the curse of this country. My father, determined in his choice of party by the arguments of his wealthy kinsmen at the court of Edward, embraced with passion the faction of the English interest, and became one of the keenest partisans, at first of John Baliol, and afterwards of the English monarch. None among the Anglocised-Scottish, as his party was called, were so zealous as he for the red cross, and no one was more detested by his countrymen who followed the national standard of Saint Andrew and the patriot Wallace. Among those soldiers of the soil, Malcolm Fleming of Biggar was one of the most distinguished by his noble birth, his high acquirements, and his fame in chivalry. I saw him; and the ghastly spectre who now addresses you must not be ashamed to say, that she loved, and was beloved by, one of the handsomest youths in Scotland. Our attachment was discovered to my father almost ere we had owned it to each other, and he was furious both against my lover and myself; he placed me under the charge of a religious woman of this rule, and I was immured within the house of Saint Bride, where my father shamed not to announce he would cause me to take the veil by force, unless I agreed to wed a youth bred at the English court, his nephew; and, as Heaven had granted him no son, the heir, as he had resolved, of the house of Hautlieu. I was not long in making my election. I protested that death should be my choice, rather than any other husband excepting Malcolm Fleming. Neither was my lover less faithful; he found means to communicate to me a particular night on which he proposed to attempt to storm the nunnery of Saint Bride, and carry me from hence to freedom and the greenwood, of which Wallace was generally called the king. In an evil hour—

→an hour I think of infatuation and witchery—I suffered the abbess to wheedle the secret out of me, which I might have been sensible would appear more horribly flagitious to her than to any other woman that breathed; but I had not taken the vows, and I thought Wallace and Fleming had the same charms for every body as for me, and the artful woman gave me reason to believe that her loyalty to Bruce was without a flaw of suspicion, and she took part in a plot of which my freedom was the object. The abbess engaged to have the English guards removed to a distance, and in appearance the troops were withdrawn. Accordingly, in the middle of the night appointed, the window of my cell, which was two stories from the ground, was opened without noise; and never were my eyes more gladdened than, as ready disguised and arrayed for flight, even in a horseman's dress, like yourself, fairest Lady Augusta, I saw Malcolm Fleming spring into the apartment. He rushed towards me; but at the same time my father with ten of his strongest men filled the room, and cried their war-cry of Baliol. Blows were instantly dealt on every side. A form like a giant, however, appeared in the midst of the tumult, and distinguished himself, even to my half-giddy eye, by the ease with which he bore down and dispersed those who fought against our freedom. My father alone offered an opposition which threatened to prove fatal to him; for Wallace, it was said, could foil any two martial champions that ever drew sword. Brushing from him the armed men, as a lady would drive away with her fan a swarm of troublesome flies, he secured me in one arm, used his other for our mutual protection, and I found myself in the act of being borne in safety down the ladder by which my deliverers had ascended from without;—but an evil fate awaited this attempt.

“My father, whom the Champion of Scotland had spared for my sake, or rather for Fleming’s, gained by his victor’s compassion and lenity a fearful advantage, and made a remorseless use of it. Having only his left hand to oppose to the maniac attempts of my father, even the strength of Wallace could not prevent the assailant, with all the energy of desperation, from throwing down the ladder, on which his daughter was perched like a dove in the grasp of an eagle. The Champion saw our danger, and exerting his inimitable strength and agility, cleared himself and me from the ladder, and leaped free of the moat of the convent, into which we must otherwise have been precipitated. The Champion of Scotland was saved in the desperate attempt, but I who fell among a heap of stones and rubbish, I the disobedient daughter, wellnigh the apostate vestal, waked only from a long bed of sickness, to find myself the disfigured wretch, which you now see me. I then learned that Malcolm had escaped from the fray, and shortly after I heard, with feelings less keen perhaps than they ought to have been, that my father was slain in one of the endless battles which took place between the contending factions. If he had lived, I might have submitted to the completion of my fate; but since he was no more, I felt that it would be a preferable lot to be a beggar in the streets of a Scottish village, than an abbess in this miserable house of Saint Bride; nor was even that poor object of ambition, on which my father used to expatiate when desirous of persuading me to enter the monastic state by milder means than throwing me off the battlements, long open to me. The old abbess died of a cold caught the evening of the fray; and the place, which might have been kept open until I was capable of filling it, was disposed of otherwise, when the English thought fit to reform, as they termed it, the discipline of the house; and instead of electing a new abess, sent hither two or three friendly monks, who have now the absolute government of the community, and wield it entirely according to the pleasure of the English. But I, for one, who have had the honour to be supported by the arms of the Champion of my country, will not remain here to be commanded by this Abbot Jerome. I will go forth, nor do I fear to find relations and friends, who will provide a more fitting place of refuge for Margaret de Hautlieu than the convent of Saint Bride; you, too, dearest lady, shall obtain your freedom, and it will be well to leave such information as will make Sir John de Walton aware of the devotion with which his happy fate has inspired you."

"It is not, then, your own intention," said the Lady Augusta, "to return into the world again, and you are about to renounce the lover, in a union with whom you and he once saw your joint happiness?"

"It is a question, my dearest child," said sister Ursula, "which I dare not ask myself, and to which I am absolutely uncertain what answer I should return. I have not taken the final and irrevocable vows; I have done nothing to alter my situation with regard to Malcolm Fleming. He also, by the vows plighted in the Chancery of Heaven, is my affianced bridegroom, nor am I conscious that I less deserve his faith, in any respect now, than at the moment when it was pledged to me; but, I confess, dearest lady, that rumours have reached me, which sting me to the quick; the reports of my wounds and scars are said to have estranged the Knight of my choice. I am now, indeed, poor," she added, with a sigh, "and I am no longer possessed of those personal charms; which they say attract the love, and fix the fidelity, of the other sex, I teach myself, therefore, to think, in my moments of settled resolution, that all betwixt me and Malcolm Fleming is at an end, saving good wishes on the part of both towards the other; and yet there is a sensation in my bosom which whispers, in spite of my reason, that if I absolutely believed that which I now say, there would be no object on earth worthy my living for in order to attain it. This insinuating prepossession whispers, to my secret soul, and in very opposition to my reason and understanding, that Malcolm Fleming, who could pledge his all upon the service of his country, is incapable of nourishing the versatile affection of an ordinary, a coarse, or a venal character. Methinks, were the difference upon his part instead of mine, he would not lose his interest in my eyes, because he was seamed with honourable scars, obtained in asserting the freedom of his choice, but that such wounds would, in my opinion, add to his merit, whatever they took away from his personal comeliness. Ideas rise on my soul, as if Malcolm and Margaret might yet be to each other all that their affections once anticipated with so much security, and that a change, which took nothing from the honour and virtue of the beloved person, must rather add to, than diminish, the charms of the union. Look at me, dearest Lady Augusta!—look me—if you have courage—full in the face, and tell me whether I do not rave when my fancy is thus converting mere possibilities into that which is natural and probable.”

The lady of Berkely, conscious of the necessity, raised her eyes on the unfortunate nun, afraid of losing her own chance of deliverance by the mode in which she should conduct herself in this crisis; yet not willing at the same time to flatter the unfortunate Ursula, with suggesting ideas for which her own sense told her she could hardly find any rational grounds. But her imagination, stored with the minstrelsy of the time, brought back to her recollection the Loathly Lady in "The marriage of Sir Gawain," and she conducted her reply in the following manner:—

"You ask me, my dear Lady Margaret, a trying question, which it would be unfriendly to answer otherwise than sincerely, and most cruel to answer with too much rashness. It is true, that what is called beauty, is the first quality on which we of the weaker sex learn to set a value; we are flattered by the imputation of personal charms, whether we actually possess them or not; and no doubt we learn to place upon them a great deal more consequence than in reality is found to belong to them. Women, however, even such as are held by their own sex, and perhaps in secret by themselves, as devoid of all pretensions to beauty, have been known to become, from their understanding, their talents, or their accomplishments, the undoubted objects of the warmest attachment. Wherefore then should you, in the mere rashness of your apprehension, deem it impossible that your Malcolm Fleming should be made of that porcelain clay of the earth, which despises the passing captivations of outward form in comparison to the charms of true affection, and the excellence of talents and virtue?"

The nun pressed her companion's hand to her bosom, and answered her with a deep sigh.

"I fear," she said, "you flatter me; and yet in a crisis like this, it does one good to be flattered, even as cordials, otherwise dangerous to the constitution, are wisely given to support a patient through a paroxysm of agony, and enable him to endure at least what they cannot cure. Answer only one question, and it will be time to drop this conversation. Could you, sweet lady—you upon whom fortune has bestowed so many charms—could any argument make you patient under the irretrievable loss of your personal advantages, with the concomitant loss, as in my case is most probable, of that lover for whom you have already done so much?"

The English lady cast her eyes again on her friend, and could not help shuddering a little at the thought of her own beautiful countenance being exchanged for the seamed and scarred features of the Lady of Hautlieu, irregularly lighted by the beams of a single eye.

"Believe me," she said, looking solemnly upwards, "that even in the case which you suppose, I would not sorrow so much for myself, as I would for the poor-spirited thoughts of the lover who could leave me because those transitory charms (which must in any case ere long take their departure) had fled ere yet the bridal day. It is, however, concealed by the decrees of Providence, in what manner, or to what extent, other persons, with whose disposition we are not fully acquainted, may be affected by such changes. I can only assure you that my hopes go with yours, and that there is no difficulty which shall remain in your path in future, if it is in my power to remove it.—Hark!"——

"It is the signal of our freedom," replied Ursula, giving attention to something resembling the whoop of the night owl. "We must prepare to leave the convent in a few minutes. Have you any thing to take with you?"

"Nothing," answered the Lady of Berkely, "except the few valuables, which I scarce know why I brought with me on my flight hither. This scroll, which I shall leave behind, gives my faithful minstrel permission to save himself, by confessing to Sir John de Walton who the person really is whom he has had within his reach."

"It is strange," said the novice of Saint Bride, "through what extraordinary labyrinths this Love, this Will-of-the-Wisp, guides his votaries. Take heed as you descend; this trap-door, carefully concealed, curiously jointed and oiled, leads to a secret postern, where I conceive the horses already wait, which will enable us speedily to bid adieu to Saint Bride's—Heaven's blessing on her, and on her convent! We can have no advantage from any light, until we are in the open air."

During this time, sister Ursula, to give her for the last time her conventual name, exchanged her stole, or loose upper garment, for the more succinct cloak and hood of a horseman. She led the way through divers passages, studiously complicated, until the Lady of Berkely, with throbbing heart, stood in the pale and doubtful moonlight, which was shining with gray uncertainty upon the walls of the ancient building. The imitation of an owlet's cry directed them to a neighbouring large elm, and on approaching it, they were aware of three horses, held by one, concerning whom they could only see that he was tall, strong, and accoutred in the dress of a man-at-arms.

"The sooner," he said, "we are gone from this place, Lady Margaret, it is so much the better. You have only to direct the course which we shall hold."

Lady Margaret's answer was given beneath her breath; and replied to with a caution from the guide to ride slowly and silently for the first quarter of an hour, by which time inhabited places would be left at a distance.

CHAPTER XII.

GREAT was the astonishment of the young Knight of Valence and the reverend Father Jerome, when, upon breaking into the cell, they discovered the youthful pilgrim's absence; and, from the garments which were left, saw every reason to think that the one-eyed novice, sister Ursula, had accompanied him in his escape from custody. A thousand thoughts thronged upon Sir Aymer, how shamefully he had suffered himself to be outwitted by the artifices of a boy and of a novice. His reverend companion in error felt no less contrition for having recommended to the knight a mild exercise of his authority. Father Jerome had obtained his preferment as abbot upon the faith of his zeal for the cause of the English monarch, with the affected interest in which he was at a loss to reconcile his proceedings of the last night. A hurried inquiry took place, from which little could be learned, save that the young pilgrim had most certainly gone off with the Lady Margaret de Hantlieu, an incident at which the females of the convent expressed surprise, mingled with a great deal of horror; while that of the males, whom the news soon reached, was qualified with a degree of wonder, which seemed to be founded upon the very different personal appearance of the two fugitives.

"Sacred Virgin," said a nun, "who could have conceived the hopeful votaress, sister Ursula, so lately drowned in tears for her father's untimely fate, capable of eloping with a boy scarce fourteen years old!"

"And, holy Saint Bride!" said the Abbot Jerome, "what could have made so handsome a young man lend his arm to assist such a nightmare as sister Ursula, in the commission of so great an enormity? Certainly he can neither plead temptation nor seduction, but must have gone, as the worldly phrase is,—to the devil with a dish-clout."

"I must disperse the soldiers to pursue the fugitives," said De Valence, "unless this letter, which the pilgrim must have left behind him, shall contain some explanations respecting our mysterious prisoner."

After viewing the contents with some surprise, he read aloud,—“The undersigned, late residing in the house of Saint Bride, do you, father Jerome, the abbot of said house, to know, that finding you were disposed to treat me as a prisoner and a spy, in the sanctuary to which you had received me as a distressed person, I have resolved to use my natural liberty, with which you have no right to interfere, and therefore have withdrawn myself from your abbacy. Moreover, finding that the novice called in your convent sister Ursula (who hath, by monastic rule and discipline, a fair title to return to the world unless she is pleased, after a year's noviciate, to profess herself sister of your order) is determined to use such privilege, I joyfully take the opportunity of her company in this her lawful resolution, as being what is in conformity to the law of God, and the precepts of Saint Bride, which gave you no authority to detain any person in your convent by force, who hath not taken upon her irrevocably the vows of the order.

“To you, Sir John de Walton, and Sir Aymer de

Valence, knights of England, commanding the garrison of Douglas Dale, I have only to say, that you have acted and are acting against me under a mystery, the solution of which is comprehended in a secret known only to my faithful minstrel, Bertram of the many Lays, as whose son I have found it convenient to pass myself. But as I cannot at this time prevail upon myself personally to discover a secret which cannot well be unfolded without feelings of shame, I not only give permission to the said Bertram the minstrel, but I charge and command him, that he tell to you the purpose with which I came originally to the Castle of Douglas. When this is discovered, it will only remain to express my feelings towards the two knights, in return for the pain and agony of mind which their violence and threats of further severities have occasioned me.

“And first respecting Sir Aymer de Valence, I freely and willingly forgive him for having been involved in a mistake to which I myself led the way, and I shall at all times be happy to meet with him as an acquaintance, and never to think farther of his part in these few days’ history, saving as matter of mirth and ridicule.

“But respecting Sir John de Wakon, I must request of him to consider whether his conduct towards me, standing as we at present do towards each other, is such as he himself ought to forget or I ought to forgive; and I trust he will understand me when I tell him, that all former connexions must henceforth be at an end between him and the supposed

AUGUSTINE.”

“This is madness,” said the abbot, when he had read the letter,—“very midsummer madness; not unfrequently an accompaniment of this pestilential disease, and I should do well in requiring of those soldiers who shall first apprehend this youth Augustine, that they reduce his victuals immediately to water and bread, taking care that the diet do not exceed in measure what is necessary to sustain nature ; nay, I should be warranted by the learned, did I recommend a sufficient intermixture of flagellation with belts, stirrup-leathers, or surcingles, and flogging those, with riding-whips, switches, and the like."

"Hush ! my reverend father," said De Valence, "a light begins to break in upon me. John de Walton, if my suspicion be true, would sooner expose his own flesh to be hewn from his bones, than have this Augustine's finger stung by a gaat. Instead of treating this youth as a madman, I for my own part, will be contented to avow that I myself have been bewitched and fascinated ; and by my honour, if I send out my attendants in quest of the fugitives, it shall be with the strict charge, that, when apprehended, they treat them with all respect, and protect them, if they object to return to this house, to any honourable place of refuge which they may desire."

"I hope," said the abbot, looking strangely confused, "I shall be first heard in behalf of the Church concerning this affair of an abducted nun ? You see yourself, Sir Knight, that this scapegrace of a minstrel avouches neither repentance nor contrition at his share in a matter so flagitious."

"You shall be secured an opportunity of being fully heard," replied the knight, "if you shall find at last that you really desire one. Meantime, I must back, without a moment's delay, to inform Sir John de Walton of the turn which affairs have taken. Farewell, reverend father. By my honour we may wish each other joy that we have escaped from a troublesome charge, which brought as much terror with it as the phantoms of a fearful dream, and is yet found capable of being dispelled by a cure as simple as that of awakening the sleeper. But, by Saint Bride! both churchmen and laymen are bound to sympathise with the unfortunate Sir John de Walton. I tell thee, father, that if this letter"—touching the missive with his finger—"is to be construed literally, as far as respects him, he is the man most to be pitied betwixt the brink of Solway and the place where we now stand. Suspend thy curiosity, most worthy churchman, lest there should be more in this matter than I myself see; so that, while thinking that I have lighted on the true explanation, I may not have to acknowledge that I have been again leading you into error. Sound to horse there! Ho!" he called out from the window of the apartment; "and let the party I brought hither prepare to scour the woods on their return."

"By my faith!" said Father Jerome, "I am right glad that this young nut-cracker is going to leave me to my own meditation. I hate when a young person pretends to understand whatever passes, while his betters are obliged to confess that it is all a mystery to them. Such an assumption is like that of the conceited fool sister Ursula, who pretended to read with a single eye a manuscript which I myself could not find intelligible with the assistance of my spectacles."

This might not have quite pleased the young knight, nor was it one of those truths which the abbot would have chosen to deliver in his hearing. But the knight had shaken him by the hand, said adieu, and was already at Hazelside, issuing particular orders to little troops of the archers and others, and occasionally chiding Thomas Dickson, who, with a degree of curiosity which the English knight was not very willing to excuse, had been endeavouring to get some account of the occurrences of the night.

"Peace, fellow!" he said, "and mind thine own business, being well assured that the hour will come in which it will require all the attention thou canst give, leaving others to take care of their own affairs."

"If I am suspected of any thing," answered Dickson, in a tone rather dogged and surly than otherwise, "methinks it were but fair to let me know what accusation is brought against me. I need not tell you that chivalry prescribes that a knight should not attack an enemy undefied."

"When you are a knight," answered Sir Aymer de Valence, "it will be time enough for me to reckon with you upon the points of form due to you by the laws of chivalry. Meanwhile, you had best let me know what share you have had in playing off the martial phantom which sounded the rebellious slogan of Douglas in the town of that name?"

"I know nothing of what you speak," answered the goodman of Hazelside.

"See then," said the knight, "that you do not engage yourself in the affairs of other people, even if your conscience warrants that you are in no danger from your own."

So saying, he rode off, not waiting any answer. The ideas which filled his head were to the following purpose.

"I know not how it is, but one mist seems no sooner to clear away than we find ourselves engaged in another. I take it for granted that the disguised damsel is no other than the goddess of Walton's private idolatry, who has cost him and me so much trouble, and some certain degree of misunderstanding during these last weeks. By my honour! this fair lady is right lavish in the pardon which she has so frankly bestowed upon me, and if she is willing to be less complaisant to Sir John de Walton, why then—And what then?—It surely does not infer that she would receive me into that place in her affections, from which she has just expelled De Walton? Nor, if she did, could I avail myself of a change in favour of myself, at the expense of my friend and companion in arms. It were a folly even to dream of a thing so improbable. But with respect to the other business, it is worth serious consideration. Yon sexton seems to have kept company with dead bodies, until he is unfit for the society of the living; and as to that Dickson of Hazelside, as they call him, there is no attempt against the English during these endless wars, in which that man has not been concerned; had my life depended upon it, I could not have prevented myself from intimating my suspicions of him, let him take it as he lists.”

So saying, the knight spurred his horse, and arriving at Douglas Castle without farther adventure, demanded in a tone of greater cordiality than he had of late used, whether he could be admitted to Sir John de Walton, having something of consequence to report to him. He was immediately ushered into an apartment, in which the governor was seated at his solitary breakfast. Considering the terms upon which they had lately stood, the governor of Douglas Dale was somewhat surprised at the easy familiarity with which De Valence now approached him.

“Some uncommon news,” said Sir John, rather gravely, “have brought me the honour of Sir Aymer de Valence’s company.”

"It is," answered Sir Aymer, "what seems of high importance to your interest, Sir John de Walton, and therefore I were to blame if I lost a moment in communicating it."

"I shall be proud to profit by your intelligence," said Sir John de Walton.

"And I too," said the young knight, "am loath to lose the credit of having penetrated a mystery which blinded Sir John de Walton. At the same time, I do not wish to be thought capable of jesting with you, which might be the case were I, from misapprehension, to give a false key to this matter. With your permission, then, we will proceed thus: We go together to the place of Bertram the minstrel's confinement. I have in my possession a scroll from the young person who was intrusted to the care of the Abbot Jerome; it is written in a delicate female hand, and gives authority to the minstrel to declare the purpose which brought them to this vale of Douglas."

"It must be as you say," said Sir John de Walton, "although I can scarce see occasion for adding so much form to a mystery which can be expressed in such small compass."

Accordingly the two knights, the warder leading the way, proceeded to the dungeon to which the minstrel had been removed.

CHAPTER XIII.

THE doors of the stronghold being undone, displayed a dungeon such as in those days held victims hopeless of escape, but in which the ingenious knave of modern times would scarcely have deigned to remain many hours. The huge rings by which the fetters were soldered together, and attached to the human body, were, when examined minutely, found to be clenched together by riveting so very thin, that when rubbed with corrosive acid, or patiently ground with a bit of sandstone, the hold of the fetters upon each other might easily be forced asunder, and the purpose of them entirely frustrated. The locks also, large, and apparently very strong, were so coarsely made, that an artist of small ingenuity could easily contrive to get the better of their fastenings upon the same principle. The daylight found its way to the subterranean dungeon only at noon, and through a passage which was purposely made tortuous, so as to exclude the rays of the sun, while it presented no obstacle to wind or rain. The doctrine that a prisoner was to be esteemed innocent until he should be found guilty by his peers, was not understood in those days of brute force, and he was only accommodated with a lamp or other alleviation of his misery, if his demeanour was quiet, and he appeared disposed to give his jailor no trouble by attempting to make his escape. Such a cell of confinement was that of Bertram, whose moderation of temper and patience had nevertheless procured for him such mitigations of his fate as the warder could grant. He was permitted to carry into his cell the old book, in the perusal of which he found an amusement of his solitude, together with writing materials, and such other helps towards spending his time as were consistent with his abode in the bosom of the rock, and the degree of information with which his minstrel craft had possessed him. He raised his head from the table as the knights entered, while the governor observed to the young knight:—

“As you seem to think yourself possessed of the secret of this prisoner, I leave it to you, Sir Aymer de Valence, to bring it to light in the manner which you shall judge most expedient. If the man or his son have suffered unnecessary hardship, it shall be my duty to make amends—which, I suppose, can be no very important matter.”

Bertram looked up, and fixed his eyes full upon the governor, but read nothing in his looks which indicated his being better acquainted than before with the secret of his imprisonment. Yet, upon turning his eye towards Sir Aymer, his countenance evidently lighted up, and the glance which passed between them was one of intelligence.

“You have my secret, then,” said he, “and you know who it is that passes under the name of Augustine?”

Sir Aymer exchanged with him a look of acquiescence; while the eyes of the governor, glancing wildly from the prisoner to the Knight of Valence, exclaimed,— “Sir Aymer de Valence, as you are belted knight and Christian man, as you have honour to preserve on earth, and a soul to rescue after death, I charge you to tell me the meaning of this mystery! It may be that you conceive, with truth, that you have subject of complaint against me;—If so, I will satisfy you as a knight may.”

The minstrel spoke at the same moment.

“I charge this knight,” he said, “by his vow of chivalry, that he do not divulge any secret belonging to a person of honour and of character, unless he has positive assurance that it is done entirely by that person’s own consent.”

“Let this note remove your scruples,” said Sir Aymer, putting the scroll into the hands of the minstrel; “and for you, Sir John de Walton, far from retaining the least feeling of any misunderstanding which may have existed between us, I am disposed entirely to bury it in forgetfulness, as having arisen out of a series of mistakes which no mortal could have comprehended. And do not be offended, my dear Sir John, when I protest, on my knightly faith, that I pity the pain which I think this scroll is likely to give you, and that if my utmost efforts can be of the least service to you in unravelling this tangled skein, I will contribute them with as much earnestness as ever I did aught in my life. This faithful minstrel will now see that he can have no difficulty in yielding up a secret, which I doubt not, but for the writing I have just put into his hands, he would have continued to keep with unshaken fidelity.”

Sir Aymer now placed in De Walton’s hand a note, in which he had, ere he left Saint Bride’s convent, signified his own interpretation of the mystery; and the governor had scarcely read the name it contained, before the same name was pronounced aloud by Bertram, who, at the same moment, handed to the governor the scroll which he had received from the Knight of Valence.

The white plume which floated over the knight’s cap of maintenance, which was worn as a headpiece within doors, was not more pale in complexion than was the knight himself at the unexpected and surprising information, that the lady who was, in chivalrous phrase, empress of his thoughts, and commander of his actions, and to whom, even in less fantastic times, he must have owed the deepest gratitude for the generous election which she had made in his favour, was the same person whom he had threatened with personal violence, and subjected to hardships and affronts which he would not willingly have bestowed even upon the meanest of her sex.

Yet Sir John de Walton seemed at first scarcely to comprehend the numerous ill consequences which might probably follow this unhappy complication of mistakes. He took the paper from the minstrel's hand, and while his eye, assisted by the lamp, wandered over the characters without apparently their conveying any distinct impression to his understanding, De Valence even became alarmed that he was about to lose his faculties.

"For Heaven's sake, sir," he said, "be a man, and support with manly steadiness these unexpected occurrences—I would fain think they will reach to nothing else—which the wit of man could not have prevented. This fair lady, I would fain hope, cannot be much hurt or deeply offended by a train of circumstances, the natural consequence of your anxiety to discharge perfectly a duty upon which must depend the accomplishment of all the hopes she had permitted you to entertain. In God's name, rouse up, sir; let it not be said, that an apprehended frown of a fair lady hath damped to such a degree the courage of the boldest knight in England; be what men have called you, 'Walton the Unwavering;' in Heaven's name, let us at least see that the lady is indeed offended, before we conclude that she is irreconcilably so. To whose fault are we to ascribe the source of all these errors? Surely, with all due respect, to the caprice of the lady herself, which has engendered such a nest of mistakes. Think of it as a man, and as a soldier. Suppose that you yourself, or I, desirous of proving the fidelity of our sentinels, or for any other reason, good or bad, attempted to enter this Dangerous Castle of Douglas without giving the password to the warders, would we be entitled to blame those upon duty, if, not knowing our persons, they manfully refused us entrance, made us prisoners, and mishandled us while resisting our attempt, in terms of the orders which we ourselves had imposed upon them? What is there that makes a difference between such a sentinel and yourself, John de Walton, in this curious affair, which, by Heaven! would rather form a gay subject for the minstrelsy of this excellent bard, than the theme of a tragic lay? Come! look not thus, Sir John de Walton; be angry, if you will, with the lady who has committed such a piece of folly, or with me who have rode up and down nearly all night on a fool's errand, and spoiled my best horse, in absolute uncertainty how I shall get another till my uncle of Pembroke and I shall be reconciled; or, lastly, if you desire to be totally absurd in your wrath, direct it against this worthy minstrel on account of his rare fidelity, and punish him for that for which he better deserves a chain of gold. Let passion out, if you will; but chase this desponding gloom from the brow of a man and a belted knight."

Sir John de Walton made an effort to speak, and succeeded with some difficulty.

"Aymer de Valence," he said, "in irritating a madman you do but sport with your own life;" and then remained silent.

"I am glad you can say so much," replied his friend; "for I was not jesting when I said I would rather that you were at variance with me, than that you laid the whole blame on yourself. It would be courteous, I think, to set this minstrel instantly at liberty. Meantime, for his lady's sake, I will entreat him, in all honour, to be our guest till the Lady Augusta de Berkely shall do us the same honour, and to assist us in our search after her place of retirement.—Good minstrel," he continued, "you hear what I say, and you will not, I suppose, be surprised, that, in all honour and kind usage, you find yourself detained for a short space in this Castle of Douglas?"

"You seem, Sir Knight," replied the minstrel, "not so much to keep your eye upon the right of doing what you should, as to possess the might of doing what you would. I must necessarily be guided by your advice, since you have the power to make it a command."

"And I trust," continued de Valence, "that when your mistress and you again meet, we shall have the benefit of your intercession for any thing which we may have done to displeasure her, considering that the purpose of our action was exactly the reverse."

"Let me," said Sir John de Walton, "say a single word. I will offer thee a chain of gold, heavy enough to bear down the weight of these shackles, as a sign of regret for having condemned thee to suffer so many indignities."

"Enough said, Sir John," said De Valence; "let us promise no more till this good minstrel shall see some sign of performance. Follow me this way, and I will tell thee in private of other tidings, which it is important that you should know."

So saying, he withdrew De Walton from the dungeon, and sending for the old knight, Sir Philip de Montenay, already mentioned, who acted as seneschal of the castle, he commanded that the minstrel should be enlarged from the dungeon, well looked to in other respects, yet prohibited, though with every mark of civility, from leaving the castle without a trusty attendant.

"And now, Sir John de Walton," he said, "methinks you are a little churlish in not ordering me some breakfast, after I have been all night engaged in your affairs; and a cup of muscadel would, I think, be no bad induction to a full consideration of this perplexed matter."

"Thou knowest," answered De Walton, "that thou mayest call for what thou wilt, provided always thou tellest me, without loss of time, what else thou knowest respecting the will of the lady, against whom we have all sinned so grievously—and I, alas, beyond hope of forgiveness!"

"Trust me, I hope," said the Knight of Valence, "the good lady bears me no malice, as indeed she has expressly renounced any ill-will against me. The words, you see, are as plain as you yourself may read—'The lady pardons poor Aymer de Valence, and willingly, for having been involved in a mistake, to which she herself led the way; she herself will at all times be happy to meet with him as an acquaintance, and never to think farther of these few days' history, except as matter of mirth and ridicule.' So it is expressly written and set down."

"Yes," replied Sir John de Walton, "but see you not that her offending lover is expressly excluded from the amnesty granted to the lesser offender? Mark you not the concluding paragraph?" He took the scroll with a trembling hand, and read with a discomposed voice its closing words. "It is even so: 'All former connexion must henceforth be at an end between him and the supposed Augustine.' Explain to me how the reading of these words is reconcilable to any thing but their plain sense of condemnation and forfeiture of contract, implying destruction of the hopes of Sir John de Walton?"

"You are somewhat an older man than I, Sir Knight," answered De Valence, "and I will grant, by far the wiser and more experienced; yet I will uphold that there is no adopting the interpretation which you seem to have affixed in your mind to this letter, without supposing the preliminary, that the fair writer was distracted in her understanding,—nay, never start, look wildly, or lay your hand on your sword, I do not affirm this is the case. I say again, that no woman in her senses would have pardoned a common acquaintance for his behaving to her with unintentional disrespect and unkindness, during the currency of a certain masquerade, and, at the same time, sternly and irrevocably broke off with the lover to whom her troth was plighted, although his error in joining in the offence was neither grosser nor more protracted than that of the person indifferent to her love."

"Do not blaspheme," said Sir John de Walton; "and forgive me, if, in justice to truth and to the angel whom I fear I have forfeited for ever, I point out to you the difference which a maiden of dignity and of feeling must make between an offence towards her, committed by an ordinary acquaintance, and one of precisely the same kind offered by a person who is bound by the most undeserved preference, by the most generous benefits, and by every thing which can bind human feeling, to think and reflect ere he becomes an actor in any case in which it is possible for her to be concerned."

"Now, by mine honour," said Aymer de Valence, "I am glad to hear thee make some attempt at reason, although it is but an unreasonable kind of reason too, since its object is to destroy thine own hopes, and argue away thine own chance of happiness; but if I have, in the progress of this affair, borne me, sometimes towards thee, as to give not only the governor, but even the friend, some cause of displeasure, I will make it up to thee now, John de Walton, by trying to convince thee in spite of thine own perverse logic. But here comes the muscadel and the breakfast; wilt thou take some refreshment?—or shall we go on without the spirit of muscadel?"

"For Heaven's sake," replied De Walton, "do as thou wilt, so thou make me clear of thy well-intended babble."

"Nay, thou shalt not brawl me out of my powers of argument," said De Valence, laughing, and helping himself to a brimming cup of wine; "if thou acknowledgest thyself conquered, I am contented to give the victory to the inspiring strength of the jovial liquor."

"Do as thou listest," said De Walton, "but make an end of an argument which thou canst not comprehend."

"I deny the charge," answered the younger knight, wiping his lips, after having finished his draught; "and listen, Walton the Warlike, to a chapter in the history of women, in which thou art more unskilled than I would wish thee to be. Thou canst not deny that, be it right or wrong, the Lady Augusta hath ventured more forward with you than is usual upon the sea of affection; she boldly made thee her choice, while thou wert as yet known to her only as a flower of English chivalry,—faith, and I respect her for her frankness—but it was a choice, which the more cold of her own sex might perhaps claim occasion to term rash and precipitate.—Nay, be not, I pray thee, offended—I am far from thinking or saying so; on the contrary, I will uphold with my lance, her selection of John de Walton against the minions of a court, to be a wise and generous choice, and her own behaviour as alike candid and noble. But she herself is not unlikely to dread unjust misconstruction; a fear of which may not improbably induce her, upon any occasion, to seize some opportunity of showing an unwonted and unusual rigour towards her lover, in order to balance her having extended towards him, in the beginning of their intercourse, somewhat of an unusual degree of frank encouragement. Nay, it might be easy for her lover so far to take part against himself, by arguing as thou dost, when out of thy senses, as to make it difficult for her to withdraw from an argument which he himself was foolish enough to strengthen; and thus, like a maiden too soon taken at her first nay-say, she shall perhaps be allowed no opportunity of bearing herself according to her real feelings, or retracting a sentence issued with consent of the party whose hopes it destroys.”

“I have heard thee, De Valence,” answered the governor of Douglas Dale; “nor is it difficult for me to admit, that these thy lessons may serve as a chart to many a female heart, but not to that of Augusta de Berkely. By my life, I say I would much sooner be deprived of the merit of those few deeds of chivalry which thou sayest have procured for me such enviable distinction, than I would act upon them with the insolence, as if I said that my place in the lady’s bosom was too firmly fixed to be shaken even by the success of a worthier man, or by my own gross failure in respect to the object of my attachment. No, herself alone shall have power to persuade me that even goodness equal to that of an interceding saint will restore me to the place in her affections which I have most unworthily forfeited, by a stupidity only to be compared to that of brutes."

"If you are so minded," said Aymer de Valence, "I have only one word more—forgive me if I speak it peremptorily—the lady, as you say, and say truly, must be the final arbitress in this question. My arguments do not extend to insisting that you should claim her hand, whether she herself will or no; but to learn her determination, it is necessary that you should find out where she is, of which I am unfortunately not able to inform you."

"How! what mean you!" exclaimed the governor, who now only began to comprehend the extent of his misfortune; "whither hath she fled? or with whom?"

"She is fled, for what I know," said De Valence, "in search of a more enterprising lover than one who is so willing to interpret every air of frost as a killing blight to his hopes; perhaps she seeks the Black Douglas or some such hero of the Thistle, to reward with her lands, her lordships, and beauty, those virtues of enterprise and courage, of which John de Walton was at one time thought possessed. But, seriously, events are passing around us of strange import. I saw enough last night, on my way to Saint Bride's, to make me suspicious of every one. I sent to you as a prisoner the old sexton of the church of Douglas. I found him contumacious as to some enquiries which I thought it proper to prosecute; but of this more at another time. The escape of this lady adds greatly to the difficulties which encircle this devoted castle."

"Aymer de Valence," replied De Walton, in a solemn and animated tone, "Douglas Castle shall be defended, as we have hitherto been able, with the aid of heaven, to spread from its battlements the broad banner of St. George. Come of me what lists during my life, I will die the faithful lover of Augusta de Berkely, even although I no longer live as her chosen knight. There are cloisters and hermitages"—

"Ay, marry are there," replied Sir Aymer; "and girdles of hemp, moreover, and beads of oak; but all these we omit in our reckonings, till we discover where the Lady Augusta is, and what she purposes to do in this matter."

"You say well," replied De Walton; "let us hold counsel together by what means we shall, if possible, discover the lady's too hasty retreat, by which she has done me great wrong; I mean, if she supposed her commands would not have been fully obeyed, had she honoured with them the governor of Douglas Dale, or any who are under his command."

"Now," replied De Valence, "you again speak like a true son of chivalry. With your permission I would summon this minstrel to our presence. His fidelity to his mistress has been remarkable; and, as matters stand now, we must take instant measures for tracing the place of her retreat."

CHAPTER XIV.

The way is long, my children, long and rough—
The moors are dreary and the woods are dark;
But he that creeps from cradle on to grave,
Unskill'd save in the velvet course of fortune,
Hath miss'd the discipline of noble hearts.

OLD PLAY.

It was yet early in the day, when, after the Governor and De Valence had again summoned Bertram to their councils, the garrison of Douglas was mustered, and a number of small parties in addition to those already dispatched by De Valence from Hazelside, were sent out to scour the woods in pursuit of the fugitives, with strict injunctions to treat them, if overtaken, with the utmost respect, and to obey their commands, keeping an eye, however, on the place where they might take refuge. To facilitate this result, some who were men of discretion were intrusted with the secret who the supposed pilgrim and the fugitive nun really were. The whole ground, whether forest or moorland, within many miles of Douglas Castle, was covered and traversed by parties, whose anxiety to detect the fugitives was equal to the reward for their safe recovery, liberally offered by De Walton and De Valence. They spared not, meantime, to make such enquiries in all directions as might bring to light any machinations of the Scottish insurgents which might be on foot in those wild districts, of which, as we have said before, De Valence, in particular, entertained strong suspicions. Their instructions were, in case of finding such, to proceed against the persons engaged, by arrest and otherwise, in the most rigorous manner, such as had been commanded by De Walton himself at the time when the Black Douglas and his accomplices had been the principal objects of his wakeful suspicions. These various detachments had greatly reduced the strength of the garrison; yet, although numerous, alert, and dispatched in every direction, they had not the fortune either to fall on the trace of the Lady of Berkely, or to encounter any party whatever of the insurgent Scottish.

Meanwhile, our fugitives had, as we have seen, set out from the convent of St. Bride under the guidance of a cavalier, of whom the Lady Augusta knew nothing, save that he was to guide their steps in a direction where they would not be exposed to the risk of being overtaken. At length Margaret de Hautlieu herself spoke upon the subject.

"You have made no enquiry," she said, "Lady Augusta, whither you are travelling, or under whose charge, although methinks it should much concern you to know."

"Is it not enough for me to be aware," answered Lady Augusta, "that I am travelling, kind sister, under the protection of one to whom you yourself trust as to a friend; and why need I be anxious for any further assurance of my safety?"

"Simply," said Margaret de Hautlieu, "because the persons with whom, from national as well as personal circumstances, I stand connected, are perhaps not exactly the protectors to whom you, lady, can with such perfect safety intrust yourself."

"In what sense," said the Lady Augusta, "do you use these words?"

"Because," replied Margaret de Hautlieu, "the Bruce, the Douglas, Malcolm Fleming, and others of that party, although they are incapable of abusing such an advantage to any dishonourable purpose, might nevertheless, under a strong temptation, consider you as an hostage thrown into their hands by Providence, through whom they might meditate the possibility of gaining some benefit to their dispersed and dispirited party."

"They might make me," answered the Lady Augusta, "the subject of such a treaty, when I was dead, but, believe me, never while I drew vital breath. Believe me also that, with whatever pain, shame, or agony, I would again deliver myself up to the power of De Walton, yes, I would rather put myself in his hands—what do I say? his!—I would rather surrender myself to the meanest archer of my native country, than combine with its foes to work mischief to merry England—my own England—that country which is the envy of every other country, and the pride of all who can term themselves her natives!"

"I thought that your choice might prove so," said Lady Margaret; "and since you have honoured me with your confidence, gladly would I provide for your liberty by placing you as nearly in the situation which you yourself desire, as my poor means have the power of accomplishing. In half an hour we shall be in danger of being taken by the English parties, which will be instantly dispersed in every direction in quest of us. Now, take notice, lady, I know a place in which I can take refuge with my friends and countrymen, those gallant Scots, who have never even in this dishonoured age bent the knee to Baal. For their honour, their nicety of honour, I could in other days have answered with my own; but of late, I am bound to tell you, they have been put to those trials by which the most generous affections may be soured, and driven to a species of frenzy, the more wild that it is founded originally on the noblest feelings. A person who feels himself deprived of his natural birthright, denounced, exposed to confiscation and death, because he avouches the rights of his king, the cause of his country, ceases on his part to be nice or precise in estimating the degree of retaliation which it is lawful for him to exercise in the requital of such injuries; and, believe me, bitterly should I lament having guided you into a situation which you might consider afflicting or degrading."

"In a word then," said the English lady, "what is it you apprehend I am like to suffer at the hands of your friends, whom I must be excused for terming rebels?"

"If," said the sister Ursula, "your friends, whom I should term oppressors and tyrants, take our land and our lives, seize our castles, and confiscate our property, you must confess, that the rough laws of war indulge mine with the privilege of retaliation. There can be no fear, that such men, under any circumstances, would ever exercise cruelty or insult upon a lady of your rank; but it is another thing to calculate that they will abstain from such means of extorting advantage from your captivity as are common in warfare. You would not, I think, wish to be delivered up to the English, on consideration of Sir John de Walton surrendering the Castle of Douglas to its natural lord; yet, were you in the hands of the Bruce or Douglas, although I can answer for your being treated with all the respect which they have the means of showing, yet I own, their putting you at such a ransom might be by no means unlikely."

"I would sooner die," said the Lady Berkely, "than have my name mixed up in a treaty so disgraceful; and De Walton's reply to it would, I am certain, be to strike the head from the messenger, and throw it from the highest tower of Douglas Castle."

"Where, then, lady, would you now go," said sister Ursula, "were the choice in your power?"

"To my own castle," answered Lady Augusta, "where, if necessary, I could be defended even against the king himself, until I could place at least my person under the protection of the Church."

"In that case," replied Margaret de Hautlieu, "my power of rendering you assistance is only precarious, yet it comprehends a choice which I will willingly submit to your decision, notwithstanding I thereby subject the secrets of my friends to some risk of being discovered and frustrated. But the confidence which you have placed in me, imposes on me the necessity of committing to you a like trust. It rests with you, whether you will proceed with me to the secret rendezvous of the Douglas and his friends, which I may be blamed for making known, and there take your chance of the reception which you may encounter, since I cannot warrant you of any thing save honourable treatment, so far as your person is concerned; or if you should think this too hazardous, make the best of your way at once for the Border; in which last case I will proceed as far as I can with you towards the English line, and then leave you to pursue your journey, and to obtain a guard and a conductor among your own countrymen. Meantime, it will be well for me if I escape being taken, since the abbot would not shrink at inflicting upon me the death due to an apostate nun."

“Such cruelty, my sister, could hardly be inflicted upon one who had never taken the religious vows, and who still, according to the laws of the Church, had a right to make a choice between the world and the veil.”

“Such choice as they gave their gallant victims,” said Lady Margaret, “who have fallen into English hands during these merciless wars,—such choice as they gave to Wallace, the Champion of Scotland,—such as they gave to Hay, the gentle and the free,—to Sommerville, the flower of chivalry,—and to Athol, the blood relation of King Edward himself—all of whom were as much traitors, under which name they were executed, as Margaret de Hautlieu is an apostate nun, and subject to the rule of the cloister.”

She spoke with some eagerness, for she felt as if the English lady imputed to her more coldness than she was, in such doubtful circumstances, conscious of manifesting.

“And after all,” she proceeded, “you, Lady Augusta de Berkely, what do you venture, if you run the risk of falling into the hands of your lover? What dreadful risk do you incur? You need not, methinks, fear being immured between four walls, with a basket of bread and a cruise of water, which, were I seized, would be the only support allowed to me for the short space that my life would be prolonged. Nay, even were you to be betrayed to the rebel Scots, as you call them, a captivity among the hills, sweetened by the hope of deliverance, and rendered tolerable by all the alleviations which the circumstances of your captors allowed them the means of supplying, were not, I think, a lot so very hard to endure.”

“Nevertheless,” answered the Lady of Berkely, “frightful enough it must have appeared to me, since, to fly from such, I threw myself upon your guidance.”

"And whatever you think or suspect," answered the novice, "I am as true to you as ever was one maiden to another; and as sure as ever sister Ursula was true to her vows, although they were never completed, so will I be faithful to your secret, even at the risk of betraying my own."

"Hearken, lady!" she said, suddenly pausing, "do you hear that?"

The sound to which she alluded was the same imitation of the cry of an owl, which the lady had before heard under the walls of the convent.

"These sounds," said Margaret de Hautlieu, "announce that one is near, more able than I am to direct us in this matter. I must go forward and speak with him; and this man, our guide, will remain by you for a little space; nor, when he quits your bridle, need you wait for any other signal, but ride forward on the woodland path, and obey the advice and directions which will be given you."

"Stay! stay! sister Ursula!" cried the Lady de Berkeley—"abandon me not in this moment of uncertainty and distress!"

"It must be, for the sake of both," returned Margaret de Hautlieu. "I also am in uncertainty—I also am in distress—and patience and obedience are the only virtues which can save us both."

So saying, she struck her horse with the riding rod, and moving briskly forward, disappeared among the boughs of a tangled thicket. The Lady of Berkeley would have followed her companion, but the cavalier who attended them laid a strong hand upon the bridle of her palfrey, with a look which implied that he would not permit her to proceed in that direction. Terrified, therefore, though she could not exactly state a reason why, the Lady of Berkely remained with her eyes fixed upon the thicket, instinctively, as it were, expecting to see a band of English archers, or rugged Scottish insurgents, issue from its tangled skirts, and doubtful which she should have most considered as the objects of her terror. In the distress of her uncertainty, she again attempted to move forward, but the stern check which her attendant again bestowed upon her bridle, proved sufficiently that in restraining her wishes, the stranger was not likely to spare the strength which he certainly possessed. At length, after some ten minutes had elapsed, the cavalier withdrew his hand from her bridle, and pointing with his lance towards the thicket, through which there winded a narrow, scarce visible path, seemed to intimate to the lady that her road lay in that direction, and that he would no longer prevent her following it.

“Do you not go with me?” said the lady, who having been accustomed to this man’s company since they left the convent, had by degrees come to look upon him as a sort of protector. He, however, gravely shook his head, as if to excuse complying with a request, which it was not in his power to grant; and turning his steed in a different direction, retired at a pace which soon carried him from her sight. She had then no alternative but to take the path of the thicket, which had been followed by Margaret de Hautlieu, nor did she pursue it long before coming in sight of a singular spectacle.

The trees grew wider as the lady advanced, and when she entered the thicket, she perceived that, though hedged in as it were by an enclosure of copsewood, it was in the interior altogether occupied by a few of the magnificent trees, such as seemed to have been the ancestors of the forest, and which, though few in number, were sufficient to overshadow all the unoccupied ground, by the great extent of their complicated branches. Beneath one of these lay stretched something of a gray colour, which, as it drew itself together, exhibited the figure of a man sheathed in armour, but strangely accoutred, and in a manner so bizarre, as to indicate some of the wild fancies peculiar to the knights of that period. His armour was ingeniously painted, so as to represent a skeleton; the ribs being constituted by the corselet and its back-piece. The shield represented an owl with its wings spread, a device which was repeated upon the helmet, which appeared to be completely covered by an image of the same bird of ill omen. But that which was particularly calculated to excite surprise in the spectator, was the great height and thinness of the figure, which, as it arose from the ground, and placed itself in an erect posture, seemed rather to resemble an apparition in the act of extricating itself from the grave, than that of an ordinary man rising upon his feet. The horse, too, upon which the lady rode, started back and snorted, either at the sudden change of posture of this ghastly specimen of chivalry, or disagreeably affected by some odour which accompanied his presence. The lady herself manifested some alarm, for although she did not utterly believe she was in the presence of a supernatural being, yet, among all the strange half-frantic disguises of chivalry, this was assuredly the most uncouth which she had ever seen; and considering how often the knights of the period pushed their dreamy fancies to the borders of insanity, it seemed at best no very safe adventure to meet one accoutred in the emblems of the King of Terrors himself, alone, and in the midst of a wild forest. Be the knight's character and purposes what they might, she resolved, however, to accost him in the language and manner observed in romances upon such occasions, in the hope even that if he were a madman he might prove a peaceable one, and accessible to civility.

“Sir Knight,” she said, in as firm a tone as she could assume, “right sorry am I, if, by my hasty approach, I have disturbed your solitary meditations. My horse, sensible I think of the presence of yours, brought me hither, without my being aware whom or what I was to encounter.”

“I am one,” answered the stranger, in a solemn tone, “whom few men seek to meet, till the time comes that they can avoid me no longer.”

“You speak, Sir Knight,” replied the Lady de Berkeley, “according to the dismal character of which it has pleased you to assume the distinction. May I appeal to one whose exterior is so formidable, for the purpose of requesting some directions to guide me through this wild wood; as, for instance, what is the name of the nearest castle, town, or hostelry, and by what course I am best likely to reach such?”

“It is a singular audacity,” answered the Knight of the Tomb, “that would enter into conversation with him who is termed the Inexorable, the Unsparing, and the Pitiless, whom even the most miserable forbears to call to his assistance, lest his prayers should be too soon answered.”

“Sir Knight,” replied the Lady Augusta, “the character which you have assumed, unquestionably for good reasons, dictates to you a peculiar course of speech; but although your part is a sad one, it does not, I should suppose, render it necessary for you to refuse those acts of civility to which you must have bound yourself in taking the high vows of chivalry.”

“If you will trust to my guidance,” replied the ghastly figure, “there is only one condition upon which I can grant you the information which you require; and that is, that you follow my footsteps without any questions asked as to the tendency of our journey.”

“I suppose I must submit to your conditions,” she answered, “if you are indeed pleased to take upon yourself the task of being my guide. In my heart I conceive you to be one of the unhappy gentlemen of Scotland, who are now in arms, as they say, for the defence of their liberties. A rash undertaking has brought me within the sphere of your influence, and now the only favour I have to request of you, against whom I never did, nor planned any evil, is the guidance which your knowledge of the country permits you easily to afford me in my way to the frontiers of England. Believe that what I may see of your haunts or of your practices, shall be to me things invisible, as if they were actually concealed by the sepulchre itself, of the king of which it has pleased you to assume the attributes; and if a sum of money, enough to be the ransom of a wealthy earl, will purchase such a favour at need, such a ransom will be frankly paid, and with as much fidelity as ever it was rendered by a prisoner to the knight by whom he was taken. Do not reject me, princely Bruce—noble Douglas—if indeed it is to either of these that I address myself in this my last extremity—men speak of both as fearful enemies, but generous knights and faithful friends. Let me entreat you to remember how much you would wish your own friends and connexions to meet with compassion under similar circumstances, at the hands of the knights of England.”

“And have they done so?” replied the Knight, in a voice more gloomy than before, “or do you act wisely, while imploring the protection of one whom you believe to be a true Scottish knight, for no other reason than the extreme and extravagant misery of his appearance ;— is it, I say, well or wise to remind him of the mode in which the lords of England have treated the lovely maidens and the high-born dames of Scotland? Have not their prison cages been suspended from the battlements of castles, that their captivity might be kept in view of every base burgher, who should desire to look upon the miseries of the noblest peeresses, yea, even the Queen of Scotland? * Is this a recollection which can inspire a Scottish knight with compassion towards an English lady? or is it a thought which can do aught but swell the deeply sworn hatred of Edward Plantagenet, the author of these evils, that boils in every drop of Scottish blood which still feels the throb of life? No ;—it is all you can expect, if, cold and pitiless as the sepulchre I represent, I leave you unassisted in the helpless condition in which you describe yourself to be.”

“ You will not be so inhuman,” replied the lady ; “ in doing so you must surrender every right to honest fame, which you have won either by sword or lance. You must surrender every pretence to that justice which affects the merit of supporting the weak against the strong. You must make it your principle to avenge the wrongs and tyranny of Edward Plantagenet upon the dames and damosels of England, who have neither access to his councils, nor perhaps give him their approbation in his wars against Scotland.”

“ It would not then,” said the Knight of the Sepulchre,

* The Queen of Robert the Bruce, and the Countess of Buchan, by whom, as one of Macduff's descent, he was crowned at Scone, were secured in the manner described.

“induce you to depart from your request, should I tell you the evils to which you would subject yourself should we fall into the hands of the English troops, and should they find you under such ill-omened protection as my own?”

“Be assured,” said the lady, “the consideration of such an event does not in the least shake my resolution, or desire of confiding in your protection. You may probably know who I am, and may judge how far even Edward would hold himself entitled to extend punishment towards me.”

“How am I to know you,” replied the ghastly cavalier, “or your circumstances? They must be extraordinary indeed, if they could form a check, either of justice or humanity, upon the revengeful feelings of Edward. All who know him are well assured that it is no ordinary motive that will induce him to depart from the indulgence of his evil temper. But be it as it may, you, lady, if a lady you be, throw yourself as a burden upon me, and I must discharge myself of my trust as I best may; for this purpose you must be guided implicitly by my directions, which will be given after the fashion of those of the spiritual world, being intimations, rather than detailed instructions for your conduct, and expressed rather by commands, than by any reason or argument. In this way it is possible that I may be of service to you; in any other case, it is most likely that I may fail you at need, and melt from your side like a phantom which dreads the approach of day.”

“You cannot be so cruel!” answered the lady. “A gentleman, a knight, and a nobleman—and I persuade myself I speak to all—hath duties which he cannot abandon.”

“He has, I grant it, and they are most sacred to me,” answered the Spectral Knight; “but I have also duties whose obligations are doubly binding, and to which I must sacrifice those which would otherwise lead me to devote myself to your rescue. The only question is whether you feel inclined to accept my protection on the limited terms on which alone I can extend it, or whether you deem it better that each go their own way, and limit themselves to their own resources, and trust the rest to Providence?”

“Alas!” replied the lady, “beset and hard pressed as I am, to ask me to form a resolution for myself, is like calling on the wretch in the act of falling from a precipice, to form a calm judgment by what twig he may best gain the chance of breaking his fall. His answer must necessarily be, that he will cling to that which he can easiest lay hold of, and trust the rest to Providence. I accept therefore your offer of protection in the modified way you are pleased to limit it, and I put my faith in Heaven and in you. To aid me effectually, however, you must know my name and my circumstances.”

“All these,” answered the Knight of the Sepulchre, “have already been told me by your late companion; for deem not, young lady, that either beauty, rank, extended domains, unlimited wealth, or the highest accomplishments, can weigh any thing in the consideration of him who wears the trappings of the tomb, and whose affections and desires are long buried in the charnel-house.”

“May your faith,” said the Lady Augusta de Berkely, “be as steady as your words appear severe, and I submit to your guidance, without the least doubt or fear that it will prove otherwise than as I venture to hope.”

CHAPTER XV.

LIKE the dog following its master, when engaged in training him to the sport in which he desires he should excel, the Lady Augusta felt herself occasionally treated with a severity, calculated to impress upon her the most implicit obedience and attention to the Knight of the Tomb, in whom she had speedily persuaded herself she saw a principal man among the retainers of Douglas, if not James of Douglas himself. Still, however, the ideas which the lady had formed of the redoubted Douglas, were those of a knight highly accomplished in the duties of chivalry, devoted in particular to the service of the fair sex, and altogether unlike the personage with whom she found herself so strangely united, or rather for the present enthralled to. Nevertheless, when, as if to abridge farther communication, he turned short into one of the mazes of the wood, and seemed to adopt a pace, which, from the nature of the ground, the horse on which the Lady Augusta was mounted had difficulty to keep up with, she followed him with the alarm and speed of the young spaniel, which from fear rather than fondness, endeavours to keep up with the track of its severe master. The simile, it is true, is not a very polite one, nor entirely becoming an age, when women were worshipped with a certain degree of devotion; but such circumstances as the present were also rare, and the Lady Augusta de Berkely could not but persuade herself that the terrible champion, whose name had been so long the theme of her anxiety, and the terror indeed of the whole country, might be able, some way or other, to accomplish her deliverance. She, therefore, exerted herself to the utmost, so as to keep pace with the phantom-like apparition, and followed the knight, as the evening shadow keeps watch upon the belated rustic.

As the lady obviously suffered under the degree of exertion necessary to keep her palfrey from stumbling in these steep and broken paths, the Knight of the Tomb slackened his pace, looked anxiously around him, and muttered apparently to himself, though probably intended for his companion's ear, "There is no occasion for so much haste."

He proceeded at a slower rate, until they seemed to be on the brink of a ravine, being one of many irregularities on the surface of the ground, effected by the sudden torrents peculiar to that country, and which, winding among the trees and copsewood, formed, as it were, a net of places of concealment, opening into each other, so that there was perhaps no place in the world so fit for the purpose of ambuscade. The spot where the borderer Turnbull had made his escape at the hunting match, was one specimen of this broken country, and perhaps connected itself with the various thickets and passes through which the knight and pilgrim occasionally seemed to take their way, though that ravine was at a considerable distance from their present route.

Meanwhile the knight led the way, as if rather with the purpose of bewildering the Lady Augusta amidst these interminable woods, than following any exact or fixed path. Here they ascended, and anon appeared to descend in the same direction, finding only boundless wildernesses, and varied combinations of tangled woodland scenery. Such part of the country as seemed arable, the knight appeared carefully to avoid; yet he could not direct his course with so much certainty but that he occasionally crossed the path of inhabitants and cultivators, who showed a consciousness of so singular a presence, but never, as the lady observed, evinced any symptoms of recognition. The inference was obvious, that the spectre knight was known in the country, and that he possessed adherents or accomplices there, who were at least so far his friends, as to avoid giving any alarm, which might be the means of his discovery. The well-imitated cry of the night-owl, too frequent a guest in the wilderness that its call should be a subject of surprise, seemed to be a signal generally understood among them; for it was heard in different parts of the wood, and the Lady Augusta, experienced in such journeys by her former travels under the guidance of the minstrel Bertram, was led to observe, that on hearing such wild notes, her guide changed the direction of his course, and betook himself to paths which led through deeper wilds, and more impenetrable thickets. This happened so often, that a new alarm came upon the unfortunate pilgrim, which suggested other motives of terror. Was she not the confidant, and almost the tool of some artful design, laid with a view to an extensive operation, which was destined to terminate, as the efforts of Douglas had before done, in the surprise of his hereditary castle, the massacre of the English garrison—and finally in the dishonour and death of that Sir John de Walton, upon whose fate she had long believed, or taught herself to believe, that her own was dependent?

It no sooner flashed across the mind of the Lady Augusta that she was engaged in some such conspiracy with a Scottish insurgent, than she shuddered at the consequences of the dark transactions in which she had now become involved, and which appeared to have a tendency so very different from what she had at first apprehended.

The hours of the morning of this remarkable day, being that of Palm Sunday, were thus drawn out in wandering from place to place; while the Lady de Berkely occasionally interposed by petitions for liberty, which she endeavoured to express in the most moving and pathetic manner, and by offers of wealth and treasures, to which no answer whatever was returned by her strange guide.

At length, as if worn out by his captive's importunity, the knight, coming close up to the bridle rein of the Lady Augusta, said in a solemn tone—

“I am, as you may well believe, none of those knights who roam through wood and wild, seeking adventures, by which I may obtain grace in the eyes of a fair lady: Yet will I to a certain degree grant the request which thou dost solicit so anxiously, and the arbitration of thy fate shall depend upon the pleasure of him to whose will thou hast expressed thyself ready to submit thine own. I will, on our arrival at the place of our destination, which is now at hand, write to Sir John de Walton, and send my letter, together with thy fair self, by a special messenger. He will, no doubt, speedily attend our summons, and thou shalt thyself be satisfied, that even he who has as yet appeared deaf to entreaty, and insensible to earthly affections, has still some sympathy for beauty and for virtue. I will put the choice of safety, and thy future happiness, into thine own hands, and those of the man whom thou hast chosen; and thou mayst select which thou wilt betwixt those and misery.”

While he thus spoke, one of those ravines or clefts in the earth seemed to yawn before them, and entering it at the upper end, the spectre knight, with an attention which he had not yet shown, guided the lady's courser by the rein down the broken and steep path by which alone the bottom of the tangled dingle was accessible.

When placed on firm ground after the dangers of a descent, in which her palfrey seemed to be sustained by the personal strength and address of the singular being who had hold of the bridle, the lady looked with some astonishment at a place so well adapted for concealment as that which she had now reached. It appeared evident that it was used for this purpose, for more than one stifled answer was given to a very low bugle-note emitted by the Knight of the Tomb; and when the same note was repeated, about half a score of armed men, some wearing the dress of soldiers, others those of shepherds and agriculturists, showed themselves imperfectly, as if acknowledging the summons.

CHAPTER XVI.

“HAIL to you, my gallant friends!” said the Knight of the Tomb to his companions, who seemed to welcome him with the eagerness of men engaged in the same perilous undertaking. “The winter has passed over, the festival of Palm Sunday is come, and as surely as the ice and snow of this season shall not remain to chill the earth through the ensuing summer, so surely we, in a few hours, keep our word to those southern braggarts, who think their language of boasting and malice has as much force over our Scottish bosoms, as the blast possesses over the autumn fruits; but it is not so. While we choose to remain concealed, they may as vainly seek to descry us, as a housewife would search for the needle she has dropped among the withered foliage of yon gigantic oak. Yet a few hours, and the lost needle shall become the exterminating sword of the Genius of Scotland, avenging ten thousand injuries, and especially the life of the gallant Lord Douglas, cruelly done to death as an exile from his native country.”

An exclamation between a yell and a groan burst from the assembled retainers of Douglas, upon being reminded of the recent death of their chieftain; while they seemed at the same time sensible of the necessity of making little noise, lest they should give the alarm to some of the numerous English parties which were then traversing different parts of the forest. The acclamation, so cautiously uttered, had scarce died away in silence, when the Knight of the Tomb, or, to call him by his proper name, Sir James Douglas, again addressed his handful of faithful followers.

“One effort, my friends, may yet be made to end our strife with the Southron without bloodshed. Fate has within a few hours thrown into my power the young heiress of Berkely, for whose sake it is said Sir John de Walton keeps with such obstinacy the castle which is mine by inheritance. Is there one among you who dare go, as the honourable escort of Augusta de Berkely, bearing a letter, explaining the terms on which I am willing to restore her to her lover, to freedom, and to her English lordships?”

“If there is none other,” said a tall man, dressed in the tattered attire of a woodsman, and being, in fact, no other than the very Michael Turnbull, who had already given so extraordinary a proof of his undaunted manhood, “I will gladly be the person who will be the lady’s henchman on this expedition.”

“Thou art never wanting,” said the Douglas, “where a manly deed is to be done; but remember, this lady must pledge to us her word and oath that she will hold herself our faithful prisoner, rescue or no rescue; that she will consider herself as pledged for the life, freedom, and fair usage of Michael Turnbull; and that if Sir John de Walton refuse my terms, she must hold herself obliged to return with Turnbull to our presence, in order to be disposed of at our pleasure.”

There was much in these conditions, which struck the Lady Augusta with natural doubt and horror; nevertheless, strange as it may seem, the declaration of the Douglas gave a species of decision to her situation, which might have otherwise been unattainable; and from the high opinion which she entertained of the Douglas's chivalry, she could not bring herself to think, that any part which he might play in the approaching drama would be other than that which a perfect good knight would, under all circumstances, maintain towards his enemy. Even with respect to De Walton, she felt herself relieved of a painful difficulty. The idea of her being discovered by the knight himself, in a male disguise, had preyed upon her spirits; and she felt as if guilty of a departure from the laws of womanhood, in having extended her favour towards him beyond maidenly limits; a step, too, which might tend to lessen her in the eyes of the lover for whom she had hazarded so much.

“The heart, she said, is lightly prized,
That is but lightly won;
And long shall mourn the heartless man,
That leaves his love too soon.”

On the other hand, to be brought before him as a prisoner, was indeed a circumstance equally perplexing and unpleasing, but it was one which was beyond her control, and the Douglas, into whose hands she had fallen, appeared to her to represent the deity in the play, whose entrance was almost sufficient to bring its perplexities to a conclusion; she therefore not unwillingly submitted to take what oaths and promises were required by the party in whose hands she found herself, and accordingly engaged to be a true prisoner, whatever might occur. Meantime she strictly obeyed the directions of those who had her motions at command, devoutly praying that circumstances, in themselves so adverse, might nevertheless work together for the safety of her lover and her own freedom.

A pause ensued, during which a slight repast was placed before the Lady Augusta, who was well-nigh exhausted with the fatigues of her journey.

Douglas and his partisans, meanwhile, whispered together, as if unwilling she should hear their conference ; while, to purchase their good-will, if possible, she studiously avoided every appearance of listening.

After some conversation, Turnbull, who appeared to consider the lady as peculiarly his charge, said to her in a harsh voice, " Do not fear, lady ; no wrong shall be done you ; nevertheless, you must be content for a space to be blindfolded."

She submitted to this in silent terror ; and the trooper, wrapping part of a mantle round her head, did not assist her to remount her palfrey, but lent her his arm to support her in this blinded state.

CHAPTER XVII.

THE ground which they traversed was, as Lady Augusta could feel, very broken and uneven, and sometimes, as she thought, encumbered with ruins, which were difficult to surmount. The strength of her comrade assisted her forward on such occasions; but his help was so roughly administered, that the lady once or twice, in fear or suffering, was compelled to groan or sigh heavily, whatever was her desire to suppress such evidence of the apprehension which she underwent, or the pain which she endured. Presently, upon an occasion of this kind, she was distinctly sensible that the rough woodsman was removed from her side, and another of the party substituted in his stead, whose voice, more gentle than that of his companions, she thought she had lately heard.

“Noble lady,” were the words, “fear not the slightest injury at our hands, and accept of my ministry instead of that of my henchman, who has gone forward with our letter; do not think me presuming on my situation if I bear you in my arms through ruins where you could not easily move alone and blindfold.”

At the same time the Lady Augusta Berkely felt herself raised from the earth in the strong arms of a man, and borne onward with the utmost gentleness, without the necessity of making those painful exertions which had been formerly required. She was ashamed of her situation ; but, however delicate, it was no time to give vent to complaints, which might have given offence to persons whom it was her interest to conciliate. She, therefore, submitted to necessity, and heard the following words whispered in her ear.

“ Fear nothing ; there is no evil intended you ; nor shall Sir John de Walton, if he loves you as you deserve at his hand, receive any harm on our part. We call on him but to do justice to ourselves and to you ; and be assured you will best accomplish your own happiness by aiding our views, which are equally in favour of your wishes and your freedom.”

The Lady Augusta would have made some answer to this, but her breath, betwixt fear and the speed with which she was transported, refused to permit her to use intelligible accents. Meantime she began to be sensible that she was enclosed within some building, and probably a ruinous one—for although the mode of her transportation no longer permitted her to ascertain the nature of her path in any respect distinctly, yet the absence of the external air—which was, however, sometimes excluded, and sometimes admitted in furious gusts—intimated that she was conducted through buildings partly entire, and in other places admitting the wind through wide rents and gaps. In one place it seemed to the lady as if she passed through a considerable body of people, all of whom observed silence, although there was sometimes heard among them a murmur, to which every one present in some degree contributed, although the general sound did not exceed a whisper. Her situation made her attend to every circumstance, and she did not fail to observe that these persons made way for him who bore her, until at length she became sensible that he descended by the regular steps of a stair, and that she was now alone excepting his company. Arrived, as it appeared to the lady, on more level ground, they proceeded on their singular road by a course which appeared neither direct nor easy, and through an atmosphere which was close to a smothering degree, and felt at the same time damp and disagreeable, as if from the vapours of a new-made grave. Her guide again spoke.

“Bear up, Lady Augusta, for a little longer, and continue to endure that atmosphere which must be one day common to us all. By the necessity of my situation, I must resign my present office to your original guide, and can only give you my assurance, that neither he, nor any one else, shall offer you the least incivility or insult—and on this you may rely, on the faith of a man of honour.”

He placed her, as he said these words, upon the soft turf, and, to her infinite refreshment, made her sensible that she was once more in the open air, and free from the smothering atmosphere which had before oppressed her like that of a charnel-house. At the same time, she breathed in a whisper an anxious wish that she might be permitted to disencumber herself from the folds of the mantle which excluded almost the power of breathing, though intended only to prevent her seeing by what road she travelled. She immediately found it unfolded, agreeably to her request, and hastened, with uncovered eyes, to take note of the scene around her.

It was overshadowed by thick oak trees, among which stood some remnants of buildings, or what might have seemed such, being perhaps the same in which she had been lately wandering. A clear fountain of living water bubbled forth from under the twisted roots of one of those trees, and offered the lady the opportunity of a draught of the pure element, and in which she also bathed her face, which had received more than one scratch in the course of her journey, in spite of the care, and almost the tenderness, with which she had latterly been borne along. The cool water speedily stopt the bleeding of those trifling injuries, and the application served at the same time to recall the scattered senses of the damsel herself. Her first idea was, whether an attempt to escape, if such should appear possible, was not advisable. A moment's reflection, however, satisfied her that such a scheme was not to be thought of; and such second thoughts were confirmed by the approach of the gigantic form of the huntsman Turnbull, the rough tones of whose voice were heard before his figure was obvious to her eye.

"Were you impatient for my return, fair lady? Such as I," he continued in an ironical tone of voice, "who are foremost in the chase of wild stags and silvan cattle, are not in use to lag behind, when fair ladies, like you, are the objects of pursuit; and if I am not so constant in my attendance as you might expect, believe me, it is because I was engaged in another matter, to which I must sacrifice for a little even the duty of attending on you."

"I offer no resistance," said the lady; "forbear, however, in discharging thy duty, to augment my uneasiness by thy conversation, for thy master hath pledged me his word that he will not suffer me to be alarmed or ill-treated."

"Nay, fair one," replied the huntsman, "I ever thought it was fit to make interest by soft words with fair ladies; but if you like it not, I have no such pleasure in hunting for fine holyday terms, but that I can with equal ease hold myself silent. Come, then, since we must wait upon this lover of yours ere morning closes, and learn his last resolution touching a matter which is become so strangely complicated, I will hold no more intercourse with you as a female, but talk to you as a person of sense, although an Englishwoman."

"You will," replied the lady, "best fulfil the intentions of those by whose orders you act, by holding no society with me whatever, otherwise than is necessary in the character of guide."

The man lowered his brows, yet seemed to assent to what the Lady of Berkely proposed, and remained silent as they for some time pursued their course, each pondering over their own share of meditation, which probably turned upon matters essentially different. At length the loud blast of a bugle was heard at no great distance from the unsocial fellow-travellers. "That is the person we seek," said Turnbull; "I know his blast from any other who frequents this forest, and my orders are to bring you to speech of him."

The blood darted rapidly through the lady's veins at the thought of being thus unceremoniously presented to the knight, in whose favour she had confessed a rash preference more agreeable to the manners of those times, when exaggerated sentiments often inspired actions of extravagant generosity, than in our days, when every thing is accounted absurd which does not turn upon a motive connected with the immediate selfish interests of the actor himself. When Turnbull, therefore, winded his horn, as if in answer to the blast which they had heard, the lady was disposed to fly at the first impulse of shame and of fear. Turnbull perceived her intention, and caught hold of her with no very gentle grasp, saying—"Nay, lady, it is to be understood that you play your own part in the drama, which, unless you continue on the stage, will conclude unsatisfactorily to us all, in a combat at outrance between your lover and me, when it will appear which of us is most worthy of your favour."

"I will be patient," said the lady, bethinking her that even this strange man's presence, and the compulsion which he appeared to use towards her, was a sort of excuse to her female scruples, for coming into the presence of her lover, at least at her first appearance before him, in a disguise which her feelings confessed was not extremely decorous, or reconcilable to the dignity of her sex.

The moment after these thoughts had passed through her mind, the tramp of a horse was heard approaching; and Sir John de Walton, pressing through the trees, became aware of the presence of his lady, captive as it seemed, in the grasp of a Scottish outlaw, who was only known to him by his former audacity at the hunting-match.

His surprise and joy only supplied the knight with those hasty expressions—"Caitiff, let go thy hold! or die in thy profane attempt to control the motions of one whom the very sun in heaven should be proud to obey." At the same time, apprehensive that the huntsman might hurry the lady from his sight by means of some entangled path—such as upon a former occasion had served him for escape—Sir John de Walton dropt his cumbrous lance, of which the trees did not permit him the perfect use, and springing from his horse, approached Turnbull with his drawn sword.

The Scotchman, keeping his left hand still upon the lady's mantle, uplifted with his right his battle-axe, or Jedwood staff, for the purpose of parrying and returning the blow of his antagonist, but the lady spoke.

“Sir John de Walton,” she said, “for heaven’s sake, forbear all violence, till you hear upon what pacific object I am brought hither, and by what peaceful means these wars may be put an end to. This man, though an enemy of yours, has been to me a civil and respectful guardian; and I entreat you to forbear him while he speaks the purpose for which he has brought me hither.”

“To speak of compulsion and the Lady de Berkely in the same breath, would itself be cause enough for instant death,” said the Governor of Douglas Castle; “but you command, lady, and I spare his insignificant life, although I have causes of complaint against him, the least of which were good warrant, had he a thousand lives, for the forfeiture of them all.”

“John de Walton,” replied Turnbull, “this lady well knows that no fear of thee operates in my mind to render this a peaceful meeting; and were I not withheld by other circumstances of great consideration to the Douglas as well as thyself, I should have no more fear in facing the utmost thou couldst do, than I have now in levelling that sapling to the earth it grows upon.”

So saying, Michael Turnbull raised his battle-axe, and struck from a neighbouring oak-tree a branch, wellnigh as thick as a man’s arm, which (with all its twigs and leaves) rushed to the ground between De Walton and the Scotchman, giving a singular instance of the keenness of his weapon, and the strength and dexterity with which he used it.

“Let there be truce, then, between us, good fellow,” said Sir John de Walton, “since it is the lady’s pleasure that such should be the case, and let me know what thou hast to say to me respecting her?”

“On that subject,” said Turnbull, “my words are few, but mark them, Sir Englishman. The Lady Augusta Berkely, wandering in this country, has become a prisoner of the noble Lord Douglas, the rightful inheritor of the Castle and lordship, and he finds himself obliged to attach to the liberty of this lady the following conditions, being in all respects such as good and lawful warfare entitles a knight to exact. That is to say, in all honour and safety the Lady Augusta shall be delivered to Sir John de Walton, or those whom he shall name for the purpose of receiving her. On the other hand, the Castle of Douglas itself, together with all outposts or garrisons thereunto belonging, shall be made over and surrendered by Sir John de Walton in the same situation, and containing the same provisions and artillery, as are now within their walls; and the space of a month of truce shall be permitted to Sir James Douglas and Sir John de Walton farther to regulate the terms of surrender on both parts, having first plighted their knightly word and oath, that in the exchange of the honourable lady for the foresaid castle, lies the full import of the present agreement, and that every other subject of dispute shall, at the pleasure of the noble knights foresaid, be honourably compounded and agreed betwixt them; or at their pleasure, settled knightly by single combat according to usage, and in a fair field, before any honourable person, that may possess power enough to preside."

It is not easy to conceive the astonishment of Sir John de Walton at hearing the contents of this extraordinary cartel; he looked towards the Lady of Berkely with that aspect of despair with which a criminal may be supposed to see his guardian angel prepare for departure. Through her mind also similar ideas flowed, as if they contained a concession of what she had considered as the summit of her wishes, but under conditions disgraceful to her lover, like the cherub's fiery sword of yore, which was a barrier between our first parents and the blessings of Paradise. Sir John de Walton, after a moment's hesitation, broke silence in these words:—

“Noble lady, you may be surprised if a condition be imposed upon me, having for its object your freedom; and if Sir John de Walton, already standing under those obligations to you, which he is proud of acknowledging, should yet hesitate on accepting, with the utmost eagerness, what must ensure your restoration to freedom and independence; but so it is, that the words now spoken have thrilled in mine ear without reaching to my understanding, and I must pray the Lady of Berkely for pardon if I take time to reconsider them for a short space.”

“And I,” replied Turnbull, “have only power to allow you half an hour for the consideration of an offer, in accepting which, methinks, you should jump shoulder-height instead of asking any time for reflection. What does this cartel exact, save what your duty as a knight implicitly obliges you to? You have engaged yourself to become the agent of the tyrant Edward, in holding Douglas Castle, as his commander, to the prejudice of the Scottish nation, and of the Knight of Douglas Dale, who never, as a community or as an individual, were guilty of the least injury towards you; you are therefore prosecuting a false path, unworthy of a good knight. On the other hand, the freedom and safety of your lady is now proposed to be pledged to you, with a full assurance of her liberty and honour, on consideration of your withdrawing from the unjust line of conduct, in which you have suffered yourself to be imprudently engaged. If you persevere in it, you place your own honour, and the lady's happiness, in the hands of men whom you have done every thing in your power to render desperate, and whom, thus irritated, it is most probable you may find such."

"It is not from thee at least," said the knight, "that I shall learn to estimate the manner in which Douglas will explain the laws of war, or De Walton receive them at his dictating."

"I am not, then," said Turnbull, "received as a friendly messenger? Farewell, and think of this lady as being in any hands but those which are safe, while you make up at leisure your mind upon the message I have brought you. Come, madam, we must be gone."

So saying, he seized upon the lady's hand, and pulled her, as if to force her to withdraw. The lady had stood motionless, and almost senseless, while these speeches were exchanged between the warriors; but when she felt the grasp of Michael Turnbull, she exclaimed, like one almost beside herself with fear—"Help me, De Walton!"

The knight, stung to instant rage, assaulted the forester with the utmost fury, and dealt him with his long sword, almost at unawares, two or three heavy blows, by which he was so wounded that he sunk backwards in the thicket, and De Walton was about to dispatch him, when he was prevented by the anxious cry of the lady—"Alas! De Walton, what have you done? This man was only an ambassador, and should have passed free from injury, while he confined himself to the delivery of what he was charged with; and if thou hast slain him, who knows how frightful may prove the vengeance exacted!"

The voice of the lady seemed to recover the huntsman from the effects of the blows he had received; he sprung on his feet, saying—"Never mind me, nor think of my becoming the means of making mischief. The knight, in his haste, spoke without giving me warning and defiance, which gave him an advantage which, I think, he would otherwise have scorned to have taken in such a case. I will renew the combat on fairer terms, or call another champion, as the knight pleases." With these words he disappeared.

"Fear not, empress of De Walton's thoughts," answered the knight, "but believe, that if we regain together the shelter of Douglas Castle, and the safeguard of Saint George's Cross, thou mayst laugh at all. And if you can but pardon, what I shall never be able to forgive myself, the mole-like blindness which did not recognise the sun while under a temporary eclipse, the task cannot be named too hard for mortal valour to achieve which I shall not willingly undertake, to wipe out the memory of my grievous fault."

"Mention it no more," said the lady; "it is not at such a time as this, when our lives are for the moment at stake, that quarrels upon slighter topics are to be recurred to. I can tell you, if you do not yet know, that the Scots are in arms in this vicinity, and that even the earth has yawned to conceal them from the sight of your garrison."

"Let it yawn, then," said Sir John de Walton, "and suffer every fiend in the infernal abyss to escape from his prison-house and reinforce our enemies—still, fairest, having received in thee a pearl of matchless price, my spurs shall be hacked from my heels by the basest scullion, if I turn my horse's head to the rear before the utmost force these ruffians can assemble, either upon earth or from underneath it. In thy name I defy them all to instant combat."

As Sir John de Walton pronounced these last words, in something of an exalted tone, a tall cavalier, arrayed in black armour of the simplest form, stepped forth from that part of the thicket where Turnbull had disappeared. "I am," he said, "James of Douglas, and your challenge is accepted. I, the challenged, name the arms our knightly weapons as we now wear them, and our place of combat this field or dingle, called the Bloody Sykes, the time being instant; and the combatants, like true knights, foregoing each advantage on either side." *

"So be it, in God's name," said the English knight, who, though surprised at being called upon to so sudden an encounter with so formidable a warrior as young Douglas, was too proud to dream of avoiding the combat. Making a sign to the lady to retire behind him, that he might not lose the advantage which he had gained by setting her at liberty from the forester, he drew his sword, and with a deliberate and prepared attitude of offence, moved slowly to the encounter. It was a dreadful one, for the courage and skill both of the native Lord of Douglas Dale, and of De Walton, were among the most renowned of the times, and perhaps the world of chivalry could hardly have produced two knights more famous. Their blows fell as if urged by some mighty engine, where they were met and parried with equal strength and dexterity; nor seemed it likely, in the course of ten minutes' encounter, that an advantage would be gained by either combatant over the other. An instant they stopped by mutually implied assent, as it seemed, for the purpose of taking breath, during which Douglas said, "I beg that this noble lady may understand, that her own freedom is no way concerned in the present contest, which entirely regards the injustice done by this Sir John de Walton, and by his nation of England, to the memory of my father, and to my own natural rights."

* The ominous name of Bloodmire-sink or Syke, marks a narrow hollow to the northwest of Douglas Castle, from which it is distant about the third of a mile. Mr. Haddow states, that according to local tradition, the name was given in consequence of Sir James Douglas having at this spot intercepted and slain part of the garrison of the castle, while De Walton was in command.

"You are generous, Sir Knight," replied the lady; "but in what circumstances do you place me, if you deprive me of my protector by death or captivity, and leave me alone in a foreign land?"

"If such should be the event of the combat," replied Sir James, "the Douglas himself, lady, will safely restore thee to thy native land; for never did his sword do an injury for which he was not willing to make amends with the same weapon; and if Sir John de Walton will make the slightest admission that he renounces maintaining the present strife, were it only by yielding up a feather from the plume of his helmet, Douglas will renounce every purpose on his part which can touch the lady's honour or safety, and the combat may be suspended until the national quarrel again brings us together."

Sir John de Walton pondered a moment, and the lady, although she did not speak, looked at him with eyes which plainly expressed how much she wished that he would choose the less hazardous alternative. But the knight's own scruples prevented his bringing the case to so favourable an arbitrament.

"Never shall it be said of Sir John de Walton," he replied, "that he compromised, in the slightest degree, his own honour, or that of his country. This battle may end in my defeat, or rather death, and in that case my earthly prospects are closed, and I resign to Douglas, with my last breath, the charge of the Lady Augusta, trusting that he will defend her with his life, and find the means of replacing her with safety in the halls of her fathers. But while I survive, she may have a better, but will not need another protector than he who is honoured by being her own choice ; nor will I yield up, were it a plume from my helmet, implying that I have maintained an unjust quarrel, either in the cause of England, or of the fairest of her daughters. Thus far alone I will concede to Douglas—an instant truce, provided the lady shall not be interrupted in her retreat to England, and the combat be fought out upon another day. The castle and territory of Douglas is the property of Edward of England, the governor in his name is the rightful governor, and on this point I will fight while my eyelids are unclosed.”

“Time flies,” said Douglas, “without waiting for our resolves ; nor is there any part of his motions of such value as that which is passing with every breath of vital air which we presently draw. Why should we adjourn till to-morrow that which can be as well finished to-day ? Will our swords be sharper, or our arms stronger to wield them, than they are at this moment ? Douglas will do all which knight can do to succour a lady in distress ; but he will not grant to her knight the slightest mark of deference, which Sir John de Walton vainly supposes himself able to extort by force of arms.”

With these words, the knights engaged once more in mortal combat, and the lady felt uncertain whether she should attempt her escape through the devious paths of the wood, or abide the issue of this obstinate fight. It was rather her desire to see the fate of Sir John de Walton, than any other consideration, which induced her to remain, as if fascinated, upon the spot, where one of the fiercest quarrels ever fought was disputed by two of the bravest champions that ever drew sword. At last the lady attempted to put a stop to the combat, by appealing to the bells which began to ring for the service of the day, which was Palm Sunday.

“For Heaven’s sake,” she said—“for your own sakes, and for that of lady’s love, and the duties of chivalry, hold your hands only for an hour, and take chance, that where strength is so equal, means will be found of converting the truce into a solid peace. Think this is Palm Sunday, and will you defile with blood such a peculiar festival of Christianity! Intermit your feud at least so far as to pass to the nearest church, bearing with you branches, not in the ostentatious mode of earthly conquerors, but as rendering due homage to the rules of the blessed Church, and the institutions of our holy religion.”

“I was on my road, fair lady, for that purpose, to the holy church of Douglas,” said the Englishman, “when I was so fortunate as to meet you at this place; nor do I object to proceed thither even now, holding truce for an hour, and I fear not to find there friends to whom I can commit you with assurance of safety, in case I am unfortunate in the combat which is now broken off, to be resumed after the service of the day.”

“I also assent,” said the Douglas, “to a truce for such short space; nor do I fear that there may be good Christians enough at the church, who will not see their master overpowered by odds. Let us go thither, and each take the chance of what Heaven shall please to send us.”

From these words Sir John de Walton little doubted that Douglas had assured himself of a party among those who should there assemble; but he doubted not of so many of the garrison being present as would bridle every attempt at rising; and the risk, he thought, was worth incurring, since he should thereby secure an opportunity to place Lady Augusta de Berkely in safety, at least so far as to make her liberty depend on the event of a general conflict, instead of the precarious issue of a combat between himself and Douglas.

Both these distinguished knights were inwardly of opinion that the proposal of the lady, though it relieved them from their present conflict, by no means bound them to abstain from the consequences which an accession of force might add to their general strength, and each relied upon his superiority, in some degree provided for by their previous proceedings. Sir John de Walton made almost certain of meeting with several of his bands of soldiers, who were scouring the country and traversing the woods by his direction; and Douglas, it may be supposed, had not ventured himself in person, where a price was set upon his head, without being attended by a sufficient number of approved adherents, placed in more or less connexion with each other, and stationed for mutual support. Each, therefore, entertained well-grounded hopes, that by adopting the truce proposed, he would ensure himself an advantage over his antagonist, although neither exactly knew in what manner or to what extent this success was to be obtained.

CHAPTER XVIII.

His talk was of another world—his bodements
Strange, doubtful, and mysterious; those who heard him
Listen'd as to a man in feverish dreams,
Who speaks of other objects than the present,
And mutters like to him who sees a vision.

OLD PLAY.

ON the same Palm Sunday, when De Walton and Douglas measured together their mighty swords, the minstrel Bertram was busied with the ancient Book of Prophecies, which we have already mentioned as the supposed composition of Thomas the Rhymer, but not without many anxieties as to the fate of his lady, and the events which were passing around him. As a minstrel he was desirous of an auditor to enter into the discoveries which he should make in that mystic volume, as well as to assist in passing away the time; Sir John de Walton had furnished him, in Gilbert Greenleaf the archer, with one who was well contented to play the listener "from morn to dewy eve," provided a flask of Gascon wine, or a stoup of good English ale, remained on the board. It may be remembered that De Walton, when he dismissed the minstrel from the dungeon, was sensible that he owed him some compensation for the causeless suspicion which had dictated his imprisonment, more particularly as he was a valued servant, and had shown himself the faithful confidant of the Lady Augusta de Berkely, and the person who was moreover likely to know all the motives and circumstances of her Scottish journey. To secure his good wishes was, therefore, politic; and De Walton had intimated to his faithful archer that he was to lay aside all suspicion of Bertram, but at the same time keep him in sight, and, if possible, in good humour with the governor of the castle, and his adherents. Greenleaf accordingly had no doubt in his own mind, that the only way to please a minstrel was to listen with patience and commendation to the lays which he liked best to sing, or the tales which he most loved to tell; and in order to ensure the execution of his master's commands, he judged it necessary to demand of the butler such store of good liquor, as could not fail to enhance the pleasure of his society.

Having thus fortified himself with the means of bearing a long interview with the minstrel, Gilbert Greenleaf proposed to confer upon him the bounty of an early breakfast, which, if it pleased him, they might wash down with a cup of sack, and, having his master's commands to show the minstrel any thing about the castle which he might wish to see, refresh their overwearied spirits by attending a part of the garrison of Douglas to the service of the day, which, as we have already seen, was of peculiar sanctity. Against such a proposal the minstrel, a good Christian by profession, and, by his connexion with the joyous science, a good fellow, having no objections to offer, the two comrades, who had formerly little good-will towards each other, commenced their morning's repast on that fated Palm Sunday, with all manner of cordiality and good fellowship.

"Do not believe, worthy minstrel," said the archer, "that my master in any respect disparages your worth or rank in referring you for company or conversation to so poor a man as myself. It is true I am no officer of this garrison; yet for an old archer, who, for these thirty years, has lived by bow and bowstring, I do not (Our Lady make me thankful!) hold less share in the grace of Sir John de Walton, the Earl of Pembroke, and other approved good soldiers, than many of those giddy young men on whom commissions are conferred, and to whom confidences are intrusted, not on account of what they have done, but what their ancestors have done before them. I pray you to notice among them one youth placed at our head in De Walton's absence, and who bears the honoured name of Aymer de Valeuce, being the same with that of the Earl of Pembroke, of whom I have spoken; this knight has also a brisk young page, whom men call Fabian Harbothel."

"Is it to these gentlemen that your censure applies?" answered the minstrel; "I should have judged differently, having never, in the course of my experience, seen a young man more courteous and amiable than the young knight you named."

"I nothing dispute that it may be so," said the archer, hastening to amend the false step which he had made; "but in order that it should be so, it will be necessary that he conform to the usages of his uncle, taking the advice of experienced old soldiers in the emergencies which may present themselves; and not believing, that the knowledge which it takes many years of observation to acquire, can be at once conferred by the slap of the flat of a sword, and the magic words, 'Rise up, Sir Arthur'—or however the case may be."

"Doubt not, Sir Archer," replied Bertram, "that I am fully aware of the advantage to be derived from conversing with men of experience like you : it benefiteth men of every persuasion, and I myself am oft reduced to lament my want of sufficient knowledge of armorial bearings, signs, and cognizances, and would right fain have thy assistance, where I am a stranger alike to the names of places, of persons, and description of banners and emblems by which great families are distinguished from each other, so absolutely necessary to the accomplishment of my present task."

"Pennons and banners," answered the archer, "I have seen right many, and can assign, as is a soldier's wont, the name of the leader to the emblem under which he musters his followers; nevertheless, worthy minstrel, I cannot presume to understand what you call prophecies, with or under warranted authority of old painted books, expositions of dreams, oracles, revelations, invocations of damned spirits, judicials, astrologicals, and other gross and palpable offences, whereby men, pretending to have the assistance of the devil, do impose upon the common people, in spite of the warnings of the Privy Council; not however, that I suspect you, worthy minstrel, of busying yourself with these attempts to explain futurity, which are dangerous attempts, and may be truly said to be penal, and part of treason."

"There is something in what you say," replied the minstrel; "yet it applieth not to books and manuscripts such as I have been consulting; part of which things therein written having already come to pass, authorize us surely to expect the completion of the rest; nor would I have much difficulty in showing you from this volume, that enough has been already proved true, to entitle us to look with certainty to the accomplishment of that which remains."

"I should be glad to hear that," answered the archer, who entertained little more than a soldier's belief respecting prophecies and auguries, but yet cared not bluntly to contradict the minstrel upon such subjects, as he had been instructed by Sir John de Walton to comply with his humour. Accordingly the minstrel began to recite verses, which, in our time, the ablest interpreter could not make sense out of.

"When the cock crows, keep well his comb,
 For the fox and the fulmart they are false both.
 When the raven and the rook have rounded together,
 And the kid in his cliff shall accord to the same,
 Then shall they be bold, and soon to battle thereafter.
 Then the birds of the raven rugs and reives,
 And the leal men of Lothian are louping on their horse;
 Then shall the poor people be spoiled full near,
 And the Abbeyes be burnt truly that stand upon Tweed;
 They shall burn and slay, and great reif make;
 There shall no poor man who say whose man he is:
 Then shall the land be lawless, for love there is none.
 Then falsel shall have foot fully five years;
 Then truth surely shall be tint, and none shall lippen to other;
 The one cousing shall not trust the other,
 Not the son the father, nor the father the son;
 For to have his goods he would have him hanged."
 &c. &c. &c.

The archer listened to these mystic prognostications, which were not the less wearisome that they were, in a considerable degree, unintelligible; at the same time subduing his Hotspur-like disposition to tire of the recitation, yet at brief intervals comforting himself with an application to the wine flagon, and enduring as he might what he neither understood nor took interest in. Meanwhile the minstrel proceeded with his explanation of the dubious and imperfect vaticinations of which we have given a sufficient specimen.

“Could you wish,” said he to Greenleaf, “a more exact description of the miseries which have passed over Scotland in these latter days? Have not these the raven and rook, the fox and the fulmart, explained; either because the nature of the birds or beasts bear an individual resemblance to those of the knights who display them on their banners, or otherwise are bodied forth by actual blazonry on their shields, and come openly into the field to ravage and destroy? Is not the total disunion of the land plainly indicated by these words, that connexions of blood shall be broken asunder, that kinsmen shall not trust each other, and that the father and son, instead of putting faith in their natural connexion, shall seek each other’s life, in order to enjoy his inheritance? The leal men of Lothian are distinctly mentioned as taking arms, and there is plainly allusion to the other events of these late Scottish troubles. The death of this last William is obscurely intimated under the type of a hound, which was that good lord’s occasional cognizance.

‘The hound that was harmed then muzzled shall be,
 Who loved him worst shall weep for his wreck;
 Yet shall a whelp rise of the same race,
 That rudely shall roar, and rule the whole north,
 And quit the whole quarrel of old deeds done,
 Though he from his hold be kept back awhile.
 True Thomas told me this in a troublesome time,
 In a harvest morning at Eldoun hills.’

“This hath a meaning, Sir Archer,” continued the minstrel, “and which flies as directly to its mark as one of your own arrows, although there may be some want of wisdom in making the direct explication. Being, however, upon assurance with you, I do not hesitate to tell you, that in my opinion this lion’s whelp that waits its time, means this same celebrated Scottish prince, Robert the Bruce, who, though repeatedly defeated, has still, while hunted with bloodhounds, and surrounded by enemies of every sort, maintained his pretensions to the crown of Scotland, in despite of King Edward, now reigning."

"Minstrel," answered the soldier, "you are my guest, and we have sat down together as friends to this simple meal in good comradeship. I must tell thee, however, though I am loth to disturb our harmony, that thou art the first who hast adventured to speak a word before Gilbert Greenleaf in favour of that outlawed traitor, Robert Bruce, who has by his seditious so long disturbed the peace of this realm. Take my advice, and be silent on this topic; for, believe me, the sword of a true English archer will spring from its scabbard without consent of its master, should it hear aught said to the disparagement of bonny St. George and his ruddy cross; nor shall the authority of Thomas the Rhymer, or any other prophet in Scotland, England, or Wales, be considered as an apology for such unbecoming predictions."

"I were loth to give offence at any time," said the minstrel, "much more to provoke you to anger, when I am in the very act of experiencing your hospitality. I trust, however, you will remember that I do not come your uninvited guest, and that if I speak to you of future events, I do so without having the least intention to add my endeavour to bring them to pass; for, God knows, it is many years since my sincere prayer has been for peace and happiness to all men, and particularly honour and happiness to the land of Bowmen, in which I was born, and which I am bound to remember in my prayers beyond all other nations in the world."

"It is well that you do so," said the archer; "for so you shall best maintain your bounden duty to the fair land of your birth, which is the richest that the sun shines upon. Something, however, I would know, if it suits with your pleasure to tell me, and that is, whether you find any thing in these rude rhymes appearing to affect the safety of the Castle of Douglas, where we now are?—for, mark me, Sir Minstrel, I have observed that these mouldering parchments, when or by whomsoever composed, have so far a certain coincidence with the truth, that when such predictions which they contain are spread abroad in the country, and create rumors of plots, conspiracies, and bloody wars, they are very apt to cause the very mischances which they would be thought only to predict.”

“It were not very cautious in me,” said the minstrel, “to choose a prophecy for my theme, which had reference to any attack on this garrison; for in such case I should, according to your ideas, lay myself under suspicion of endeavouring to forward what no person could more heartily regret than myself.”

“Take my word for it, good friend,” said the archer, “that it shall not be thus with thee; for I neither will myself conceive ill of thee, nor report thee to Sir John de Walton as meditating harm against him or his garrison—nor, to speak truth, would Sir John de Walton be willing to believe any one who did. He thinks highly, and no doubt deservedly, of thy good faith towards thy lady, and would conceive it unjust to suspect the fidelity of one who has given evidence of his willingness to meet death rather than betray the least secret of his mistress.”

“In preserving her secret,” said Bertram, “I only discharged the duty of a faithful servant, leaving it to her to judge how long such a secret ought to be preserved; for a faithful servant ought to think as little of the issue towards himself of the commission which he bears, as the band of flock silk concerns itself with the secret of the letter which it secures. And, touching your question—I have no objections, although merely to satisfy your curiosity, to unfold to you that these old prophecies do contain some intimations of wars befalling in Douglas Dale, between an haggard, or wild hawk, which I take to be the cognizance of Sir John de Walton, and the three stars, or martlets, which is the cognizance of the Douglas; and more particulars I could tell of these onslaughts, did I know whereabouts is a place in these woods termed Bloody Sykes, the scene also, as I comprehend, of slaughter and death, between the followers of the three stars and those who hold the part of the Saxon, or King of England.”

“Such a place,” replied Gilbert Greenleaf, “I have heard often mentioned by that name among the natives of these parts; nevertheless it is in vain to seek to discover the precise spot, as these wily Scots conceal from us with care every thing respecting the geography of their country, as it is called by learned men; but we may here mention the Bloody Sykes, Bottomless Myre, and other places, as portentous names, to which their traditions attach some signification of war and slaughter. If it suits your wish, however, we can, on our way to the church, try to find this place called Bloody Sykes, which I doubt not we shall trace out long before the traitors who meditate an attack upon us will find a power sufficient for the attempt.”

Accordingly the minstrel and archer, the latter of whom was by this time reasonably well refreshed with wine, marched out of the castle of Douglas, without waiting for others of the garrison, resolving to seek the dingle bearing the ominous name of Bloody Sykes, concerning which the archer only knew that by mere accident he had heard of a place bearing such a name, at the hunting match made under the auspices of Sir John de Walton, and knew that it lay in the woods somewhere near the town of Douglas, and in the vicinage of the castle.

CHAPTER XIX.

Hotspur. I cannot choose; sometimes he angers me
With telling me of the moldwarp and the ant,
Of the dreamer Merlin, and his prophecies;
And of a dragon and a finless fish,
A clipt-wing'd griffin and a moulted raven,
A couching lion, and a ramping cat.
And such a deal of skimble-skamble stuff,
As puts me from my faith.

KING HENRY IV.

THE conversation between the minstrel and the ancient archer naturally pursued a train somewhat resembling that of Hotspur and Glendower, in which Gilbert Greenleaf by degrees took a larger share than was apparently consistent with his habits and education; but the truth was, that as he exerted himself to recall the recognisances of military chieftains, their war-cries, emblems, and other types by which they distinguished themselves in battle, and might undoubtedly be indicated in prophetic rhymes, he began to experience the pleasure which most men entertain when they find themselves unexpectedly possessed of a faculty which the moment calls upon them to employ, and renders them important in the possession of. The minstrel's sound good sense was certainly somewhat surprised at the inconsistencies sometimes displayed by his companion, as he was carried off by the willingness to make show of his newly discovered faculty on the one hand, and, on the other, to call to mind the prejudices which he had nourished during his whole life against minstrels, who, with the whole train of legends and fables, were the more likely to be false, as being generally derived from the "North Countrie."

As they strolled from one glade of the forest to another, the minstrel began to be surprised at the number of Scottish votaries whom they met, and who seemed to be hastening to the church, and, as it appeared by the boughs which they carried, to assist in the ceremony of the day. To each of these the archer put a question respecting the existence of a place called Bloody Sykes, and where it was to be found—but all seemed either to be ignorant on the subject, or desirous of evading it, for which they found some pretext in the jolly archer's manner of interrogation, which savoured a good deal of the genial breakfast. The general answer was, that they knew no such place, or had other matters to attend to upon the morn of a holy-tide than answering frivolous questions. At last, when, in one or two instances, the answer of the Scottish almost approached to sullenness, the minstrel remarked it, observing that there was ever some mischief on foot when the people of this country could not find a civil answer to their betters, which is usually so ready among them, and that they appeared to be making a strong muster for the service of Palm Sunday.

"You will doubtless, Sir Archer," continued the minstrel, "make your report to your knight accordingly; for I promise you, that if you do not, I myself, whose lady's freedom is also concerned, will feel it my duty to place before Sir John de Walton the circumstances which make me entertain suspicion of this extraordinary confluence of Scottish men, and the surliness which has replaced their wonted courtesy of manners."

"Tush, Sir Minstrel," replied the archer, displeased at Bertram's interference, "believe me, that armies have ere now depended on my report to the general, which has always been perspicuous and clear, according to the duties of war. Your walk, my worthy friend, has been in a separate department, such as affairs of peace, old songs, prophecies, and the like, in which it is far from my thoughts to contend with you; but credit me, it will be most for the reputation of both, that we do not attempt to interfere with what concerns each other."

"It is far from my wish to do so," replied the minstrel; "but I would wish that a speedy return should be made to the castle, in order to ask Sir John de Walton's opinion of that which we have but just seen."

"To this," replied Greenleaf, "there can be no objection; but, would you seek the governor at the hour which now is, you will find him most readily by going to the church of Douglas, to which he regularly wends on occasions such as the present, with the principal part of his officers, to ensure, by his presence, that no tumult arise (of which there is no little dread) between the English and the Scottish. Let us therefore hold to our original intention of attending the service of the day, and we shall rid ourselves of these entangled woods, and gain the shortest road to the church of Douglas."

"Let us go, then, with all dispatch," said the minstrel; "and with the greater haste, that it appears to me that something has passed on this very spot this morning, which argues that the Christian peace due to the day has not been inviolably observed. What mean these drops of blood?" alluding to those which had flowed from the wounds of Turnbull—"Wherefore is the earth impressed with these deep tints, the footsteps of armed men advancing and retreating, doubtless, according to the chances of a fierce and heady conflict?"

"By Our Lady," returned Greenleaf, "I must own that thou seest clear. What were my eyes made of when they permitted thee to be the first discoverer of these signs of conflict? Here are feathers of a blue plume, which I ought to remember, seeing my knight assumed it, or at least permitted me to place it in his helmet, this morning, in sign of returning hope, from the liveliness of its colour. But here it lies, shorn from his head, and, if I may guess, by no friendly hand. Come, friend, to the church—to the church—and thou shalt have my example of the manner in which De Walton ought to be supported when in danger."

He led the way through the town of Douglas, entering at the southern gate, and up the very street in which Sir Aymer de Valence had charged the Phantom Knight.

We can now say more fully, that the church of Douglas had originally been a stately Gothic building, whose towers, arising high above the walls of the town, bore witness to the grandeur of its original construction. It was now partly ruinous, and the small portion of open space which was retained for public worship was fitted up in the family aisle, where its deceased lords rested from worldly labours and the strife of war. From the open ground in the front of the building, their eye could pursue a considerable part of the course of the river Douglas, which approached the town from the southwest, bordered by a line of hills fantastically diversified in their appearance, and in many places covered with copsewood, which descended towards the valley, and formed a part of the tangled and intricate woodland by which the town was surrounded. The river itself, sweeping round the west side of the town, and from thence northward, supplied that large inundation or artificial piece of water which we have already mentioned. Several of the Scottish people, bearing willow branches, or those of yew, to represent the palms which were the symbol of the day, seemed wandering in the churchyard as if to attend the approach of some person of peculiar sanctity, or procession of monks and friars, come to render the homage due to the solemnity. At the moment almost that Bertram and his companion entered the churchyard, the Lady of Berkely, who was in the act of following Sir John de Walton into the church, after having witnessed his conflict with the young Knight of Douglas, caught a glimpse of her faithful minstrel, and instantly determined to regain the company of that old servant of her house and confidant of her fortunes, and trust to the chance afterwards of being rejoined by Sir John de Walton, with a sufficient party to provide for her safety, which she in no respect doubted it would be his care to collect. She darted away accordingly from the path in which she was advancing, and reached the place where Bertram, with his new acquaintance Greenleaf, were making some inquiries of the soldiers of the English garrison, whom the service of the day had brought there.

Lady Augusta Berkely, in the meantime, had an opportunity to say privately to her faithful attendant and guide, "Take no notice of me, friend Bertram, but take heed, if possible, that we be not again separated from each other." Having given him this hint, she observed that it was adopted by the minstrel, and that he presently afterwards looked round and set his eye upon her, as, muffled in her pilgrim's cloak, she slowly withdrew to another part of the cemetery, and seemed to halt until, detaching himself from Greenleaf, he should find an opportunity of joining her.

Nothing, in truth, could have more sensibly affected the faithful minstrel than the singular mode of communication which acquainted him that his mistress was safe, and at liberty to choose her own motions, and, as he might hope, disposed to extricate herself from the dangers which surrounded her in Scotland, by an immediate retreat to her own country and domain. He would gladly have approached and joined her, but she took an opportunity by a sign to caution him against doing so, while at the same time he remained somewhat apprehensive of the consequences of bringing her under the notice of his new friend, Greenleaf, who might perhaps think it proper to busy himself so as to gain some favour with the knight who was at the head of the garrison. Meantime the old archer continued his conversation with Bertram, while the minstrel, like many other men similarly situated, heartily wished that his well-meaning companion had been a hundred fathoms under ground, so his evanishment had given him license to join his mistress; but all he had in his power was to approach her as near as he could, without creating any suspicion.

"I would pray you, worthy minstrel," said Greenleaf, after looking carefully round, "that we may prosecute together the theme which we were agitating before we came hither; is it not your opinion, that the Scottish natives have fixed this very morning for some of those dangerous attempts which they have repeatedly made, and which are so carefully guarded against by the governors placed in this district of Douglas by our good King Edward, our rightful sovereign?"

"I cannot see," replied the minstrel, "on what grounds you found such an apprehension, or what you see here in the churchyard different from that you talked of as we approached it, when you held me rather in scorn, for giving way to some suspicions of the same kind."

"Do you not see," added the archer, "the numbers of men with strange faces, and in various disguisements, who are thronging about these ancient ruins, which are usually so solitary? Yonder, for example, sits a boy who seems to shun observation, and whose dress, I will be sworn, has never been shaped in Scotland."

"And if he is an English pilgrim," replied the minstrel, observing that the archer pointed towards the Lady of Berkely, "he surely affords less matter of suspicion."

"I know not that," said old Greenleaf, "but I think it will be my duty to inform Sir John de Walton, if I can reach him, that there are many persons here, who in outward appearance neither belong to the garrison, nor to this part of the country."

"Consider," said Bertram, "before you harass with accusation a poor young man, and subject him to the consequences which must necessarily attend upon suspicions of this nature, how many circumstances call forth men peculiarly to devotion at this period. Not only is this the time of the triumphal entrance of the founder of the Christian religion into Jerusalem, but the day itself is called Dominica Confitentium, or the Sunday of Confessors, and the palm-tree, or the box and yew, which are used as its substitutes, and which are distributed to the priests, are burnt solemnly to ashes, and those ashes distributed among the pious, by the priests, upon the Ash-Wednesday of the succeeding year, all which rites and ceremonies in our country are observed, by order of the Christian Church; nor ought you, gentle archer, nor can you without a crime, persecute those as guilty of designs upon your garrison, who can ascribe their presence here to their desire to discharge the duties of the day; and look ye at yon numerous procession approaching with banner and cross, and, as it appears, consisting of some churchman of rank and his attendants; let us first inquire who he is, and it is probable we shall find in his name and rank sufficient security for the peaceable and orderly behaviour of those whom piety has this day assembled at the church of Douglas."

Greenleaf accordingly made the investigation recommended by his companion, and received information that the holy man who headed the procession, was no other than the diocesan of the district, the Bishop of Glasgow, who had come to give his countenance to the rites with which the day was to be sanctified.

The prelate accordingly entered the walls of the dilapidated churchyard, preceded by his cross-bearers, and attended by numbers, with boughs of yew and other evergreens, used on the festivity instead of palms. Among them the holy father showered his blessing, accompanied by signs of the cross, which were met with devout exclamations by such of the worshippers as crowded around him:—"To thee, reverend father, we apply for pardon for our offences, which we humbly desire to confess to thee, in order that we may obtain pardon from heaven."

In this manner the congregation and the dignified clergyman met together, exchanging pious greeting, and seemingly intent upon nothing but the rites of the day. The acclamations of the congregation, mingled with the deep voice of the officiating priest, dispensing the sacred ritual; the whole forming a scene which, conducted with the Catholic skill and ceremonial, was at once imposing and affecting.

The archer, on seeing the zeal with which the people in the churchyard, as well as a number who issued from the church, hastened proudly to salute the bishop of the diocese, was rather ashamed of the suspicions which he had entertained of the sincerity of the good man's purpose in coming hither. Taking advantage of a fit of devotion, not perhaps very common with old Greenleaf, who at this moment thrust himself forward to share in those spiritual advantages which the prelate was dispensing, Bertram slipped clear of his English friend, and, gliding to the side of the Lady Augusta, exchanged, by the pressure of the hand, a mutual congratulation upon having rejoined company. On a sign by the minstrel, they withdrew to the inside of the church, so as to remain unobserved amidst the crowd, in which they were favoured by the dark shadows of some parts of the building.

The body of the church, broken as it was, and hung round with the armorial trophies of the last Lords of Douglas, furnished rather the appearance of a sacrilegiously desecrated ruin, than the inside of a holy place; yet some care appeared to have been taken to prepare it for the service of the day. At the lower end hung the great escutcheon of William Lord of Douglas, who had lately died a prisoner in England; around that escutcheon were placed the smaller shields of his sixteen ancestors, and a deep black shadow was diffused by the whole mass, unless where relieved by the glance of the coronets, or the glimmer of bearings particularly gay in emblazonry. I need not say that in other respects the interior of the church was much dismantled, it being the very same place in which Sir Aymer de Valence held an interview with the old sexton ; and who now, drawing into a separate corner some of the straggling parties whom he had collected and brought to the church, kept on the alert, and appeared ready for an attack as well at mid-day as at the witching hour of midnight. This was the more necessary, as the eye of Sir John de Walton seemed busied in searching from one place to another, as if unable to find the object he was in quest of, which the reader will easily understand to be the Lady Augusta de Berkely, of whom he had lost sight in the pressure of the multitude. At the eastern part of the church was fitted up a temporary altar, by the side of which, arrayed in his robes, the Bishop of Glasgow had taken his place, with such priests and attendants as composed his episcopal retinue. His suite was neither numerous nor richly attired, nor did his own appearance present a splendid specimen of the wealth and dignity of the episcopal order. When he laid down, however, his golden cross, at the stern command of the King of England, that of simple wood, which he assumed instead thereof, did not possess less authority, nor command less awe among the clergy and people of the diocese.

The various persons, natives of Scotland, now gathered around, seemed to watch his motions, as those of a descended saint, and the English waited in mute astonishment, apprehensive that at some unexpected signal an attack would be made upon them, either by the powers of earth or heaven, or perhaps by both in combination. The truth is, that so great was the devotion of the Scottish clergy of the higher ranks to the interests of the party of Bruce, that the English had become jealous of permitting them to interfere even with those ceremonies of the Church which were placed under their proper management, and thence the presence of the Bishop of Glasgow, officiating at a high festival in the church of Douglas, was a circumstance of rare occurrence, and not unattended both with wonder and suspicion. A council of the Church, however, had lately called the distinguished prelates of Scotland to the discharge of their duty on the festivity of Palm Sunday, and neither English nor Scottish saw the ceremony with indifference. An unwonted silence which prevailed in the Church, filled, as it appeared, with persons of different views, hopes, wishes, and expectations, resembled one of those solemn pauses which often take place before a strife of the elements, and are well understood to be the forerunners of some dreadful concussion of nature. All animals, according to their various nature, express their sense of the approaching tempest; the cattle, the deer, and other inhabitants of the walks of the forest, withdraw to the inmost recesses of their pastures; the sheep crowd into their fold; and the dull stupor of universal nature, whether animate or inanimate, presages its speedily awaking into general convulsion and disturbance, when the lurid lightning shall hiss at command of the diapason of the thunder.

It was thus that, in deep suspense, those who had come to the church in arms, at the summons of Douglas, awaited and expected every moment a signal to attack, while the soldiers of the English garrison, aware of the evil disposition of the natives towards them, were reckoning every moment when the well-known shout of "Bows and bills!" should give signal for a general conflict, and both parties, gazing fiercely upon each other, seemed to expect the fatal onset.

Notwithstanding the tempest, which appeared every moment ready to burst, the Bishop of Glasgow proceeded with the utmost solemnity to perform the ceremonies proper to the day; he paused from time to time to survey the throng, as if to calculate whether the turbulent passions of those around him would be so long kept under as to admit of his duties being brought to a close in a manner becoming the time and place.

The prelate had just concluded the service, when a person advanced towards him with a solemn and mournful aspect, and asked if the reverend father could devote a few moments to administer comfort to a dying man, who was lying wounded close by.

The churchman signified a ready acquiescence, amidst a stillness which, when he surveyed the lowering brows of one party, at least of those who were in the church, boded no peaceable termination to this fated day. The father motioned to the messenger to show him the way, and proceeded on his mission, attended by some of those who were understood to be followers of the Douglas.

There was something peculiarly striking, if not suspicious, in the interview which followed. In a subterranean vault was deposited the person of a large tall man, whose blood flowed copiously through two or three ghastly wounds, and streamed amongst the trusses of straw on which he lay; while his features exhibited a mixture of sternness and ferocity, which seemed prompt to kindle into a still more savage expression.

The reader will probably conjecture that the person in question was no other than Michael Turnbull, who, wounded in the rencounter of the morning, had been left by some of his friends upon the straw, which was arranged for him by way of couch, to live or die as he best could. The prelate, on entering the vault, lost no time in calling the attention of the wounded man to the state of his spiritual affairs, and assisting him to such comfort as the doctrine of the Church directed should be administered to departing sinners. The words exchanged between them were of that grave and severe character which passes between the ghostly father and his pupil, when one world is rolling away from the view of the sinner, and another is displaying itself in all its terrors, and thundering in the ear of the penitent that retribution which the deeds done in the flesh must needs prepare him to expect. This is one of the most solemn meetings which can take place between earthly beings; and the courageous character of the Jedwood forester, as well as the benevolent and pious expression of the old churchman, considerably enhanced the pathos of the scene.

“Turnbull,” said the churchman, “I trust you will believe me when I say that it grieves my heart to see thee brought to this situation by wounds which it is my duty to tell you, you must consider mortal.”

“Is the chase ended, then?” said the Jedwood man with a sigh. “I care not, good father, for I think I have borne me as becomes a gallant quarry, and that the old forest has lost no credit by me, whether in pursuit or in bringing to bay; and even in this last matter, methinks this gay English knight would not have come off with such advantage had the ground on which we stood been alike indifferent to both, or had I been aware of his onset; but it will be seen, by any one who takes the trouble to examine, that poor Michael Turnbull’s foot slipped twice in the mêlée, otherwise it had not been his fate to be lying here in the dead-thraw; * while yonder southron would probably have died like a dog, upon this bloody straw, in his place."

* Or death agony.

The bishop replied, advising his penitent to turn from vindictive thoughts respecting the death of others, and endeavour to fix his attention upon his own departure from existence, which seemed shortly about to take place.

"Nay," replied the wounded man, "you, father, undoubtedly know best what is fit for me to do; yet methinks it would not be very well with me if I had prolonged to this time of day the task of revising my life, and I am not the man to deny that mine has been a bloody and a desperate one. But you will grant me I never bore malice to a brave enemy for having done me an injury, and show me the man, being a Scotchman born, and having a natural love for his own country, who hath not, in these times, rather preferred a steel cap to a hat and feather, or who hath not been more conversant with drawn blades than with prayer-book; and you yourself know, father, whether, in our proceedings against the English interest, we have not uniformly had the countenance of the sincere fathers of the Scottish Church, and whether we have not been exhorted to take arms and make use of them for the honour of the King of Scotland, and the defence of our own rights."

"Undoubtedly," said the prelate, "such have been our exhortations towards our oppressed countrymen, nor do I now teach you a different doctrine; nevertheless, having now blood around me, and a dying man before me, I have need to pray that I have not been misled from the true path, and thus become the means of misdirecting others. May Heaven forgive me if I have done so, since I have only to plead my sincere and honest intention in excuse for the erroneous counsel which I may have given to you and others touching these wars. I am conscious that encouraging you so to stain your swords in blood, I have departed in some degree from the character of my profession, which enjoins that we neither shed blood, nor are the occasion of its being shed. May Heaven enable us to obey our duties, and to repent of our errors, especially such as have occasioned the death or distress of our fellow-creatures. And, above all, may this dying Christian become aware of his errors, and repent with sincerity of having done to others that which he would not willingly have suffered at their hand !”

“For that matter,” answered Turnbull, “the time has never been when I would not exchange a blow with the best man who ever lived ; and if I was not in constant practice of the sword, it was because I have been brought up to the use of the Jedwood-axe, which the English call a partisan, and which makes little difference, I understand, from the sword and poniard.”

“The distinction is not great,” said the bishop ; “but I fear, my friend, that life taken with what you call a Jedwood-axe, gives you no privilege over him who commits the same deed, and inflicts the same injury, with any other weapon.”

“Nay, worthy father,” said the penitent, “I must own that the effect of the weapons is the same, as far as concerns the man who suffers ; but I would pray of you information, why a Jedwood man ought not to use, as is the custom of his country, a Jedwood-axe, being, as is implied in the name, the offensive weapon proper to his country ?”

“The crime of murder,” said the bishop, “consists not in the weapon with which the crime is inflicted, but in the pain which the murderer inflicts upon his fellow-creature, and the breach of good order which he introduces into heaven's lovely and peaceable creation; and it is by turning your repentance upon this crime that you may fairly expect to propitiate Heaven for your offences, and at the same time to escape the consequences which are denounced in Holy Writ against those by whom man's blood shall be shed."

"But, good father," said the wounded man, "you know as well as any one, that in this company, and in this very church, there are upon the watch scores of both Scotchmen and Englishmen, who come here not so much to discharge the religious duties of the day, as literally to bereave each other of their lives, and give a new example of the horror of those feuds which the two extremities of Britain nourish against each other. What conduct, then, is a poor man like me to hold? Am I not to raise this hand against the English, which methinks I still can make a tolerably efficient one—or am I, for the first time in my life, to hear the war-cry when it is raised, and hold back my sword from the slaughter? Methinks it will be difficult, perhaps altogether impossible, for me to do so; but if such is the pleasure of Heaven, and your advice, most reverend father, unquestionably I must do my best to be governed by your directions, as of one who has a right and title to direct us in every dilemma, or case, as they term it, of troubled conscience."

"Unquestionably," said the bishop, "it is my duty, as I have already said, to give no occasion this day for the shedding of blood, or the breach of peace; and I must charge you, as my penitent, that upon your soul's safety, you do not minister any occasion to affray or bloodshed, either by maintaining such in your own person, or inciting others to the same; for by following a different course of advice, I am certain that you, as well as myself, would act sinfully and out of character."

"So I will endeavour to think, reverend father," answered the huntsman; "nevertheless, I hope it will be remembered in my favour that I am the first person bearing the surname of Turnbull, together with the proper name of the Prince of Archangels himself, who has at any time been able to sustain the affront occasioned by the presence of a southron with a drawn sword, and was not thereby provoked to pluck forth his own weapon and to lay about him."

"Take care, my son," returned the Prelate of Glasgow, "and observe, that even now thou art departing from those resolutions which, but a few minutes since, thou didst adopt upon serious and just consideration; wherefore do not be, O my son! like the sow that has wallowed in the mire, and, having been washed, repeats its act of pollution, and becomes again yet fouler than it was before."

"Well, reverend father," replied the wounded man, "although it seems almost unnatural for Scottishmen and English to meet and part without a buffet, yet I will endeavour most faithfully not to minister any occasion of strife, nor, if possible, to snatch at any such occasion as shall be ministered to me."

"In doing so," returned the bishop, "thou wilt best atone for the injury which thou hast done to the law of Heaven upon former occasions, and thou shalt prevent the causes for strife betwixt thee and thy brethren of the southern land, and shalt eschew the temptation towards that blood-guiltiness which is so rife in this our day and generation. And do not think that I am imposing upon thee, by these admonitions, a duty more difficult than it is in thy covenant to bear, as a man and as a Christian. I myself am a man and a Scotchman, and, as such, I feel offended at the unjust conduct of the English towards our country and sovereign; and thinking as you do yourself, I know what you must suffer when you are obliged to submit to national insults, unretaliated and unrevenged. But let us not conceive ourselves the agents of that retributive vengeance which Heaven has, in a peculiar degree, declared to be its own attribute. Let us, while we see and feel the injuries inflicted on our own country, not forget that our own raids, ambuscades, and surprisals, have been at least equally fatal to the English as their attacks and forays have been to us; and, in short, let the mutual injuries of the crosses of Saint Andrew and of Saint George be no longer considered as hostile to the inhabitants of the opposite district, at least during the festivals of religion; but as they are mutually signs of redemption, let them be, in like manner, intimations of forbearance and peace on both sides."

"I am contented," answered Turnbull, "to abstain from all offences towards others, and shall even endeavour to keep myself from resenting those of others towards me, in the hope of bringing to pass such a quiet and godly state of things as your words, reverend father, induce me to expect." Turning his face to the wall, the Borderer lay in stern expectation of approaching death, which the bishop left him to contemplate.

The peaceful disposition which the prelate had inspired into Michael Turnbull, had in some degree diffused itself among those present, who heard with awe the spiritual admonition to suspend the national antipathy, and remain in truce and amity with each other. Heaven had, however, decreed that the national quarrel, in which so much blood had been sacrificed, should that day again be the occasion of deadly strife.

A loud flourish of trumpets, seeming to proceed from beneath the earth, now rung through the church, and roused the attention of the soldiers and worshippers then assembled. Most of those who heard these warlike sounds betook themselves to their weapons, as if they considered it useless to wait any longer for the signal of conflict. Hoarse voices, rude exclamations, the rattle of swords against their sheaths, or their clashing against other pieces of armour, gave an awful presage of an onset, which, however, was for a time averted by the exhortations of the bishop. A second flourish of trumpets having taken place, the voice of a herald made proclamation to the following purpose:—

“That whereas there were many noble pursuivants of chivalry presently assembled in the Kirk of Douglas, and whereas there existed among them the usual causes of quarrel and points of debate for their advancement in chivalry, therefore the Scottish knights were ready to fight any number of the English who might be agreed, either upon the superior beauty of their ladies, or upon the national quarrel in any of its branches, or upon whatever point might be at issue between them, which should be deemed satisfactory ground of quarrel by both; and the knights who should chance to be worsted in such dispute should renounce the prosecution thereof, or the bearing arms therein thereafter, with such other conditions to ensue upon their defeat as might be agreed upon by a council of the knights present at the Kirk of Douglas aforesaid. But foremost of all, any number of Scottish knights, from one to twenty, will defend the quarrel which has already drawn blood, touching the freedom of Lady Augusta de Berkely, and the rendition of Douglas Castle to the owner here present. Wherefore it is required that the English knights do intimate their consent that such trial of valour take place, which, according to the rules of chivalry, they cannot refuse, without losing utterly the reputation of valour, and incurring the diminution of such other degree of estimation as a courageous pursuivant of arms would willingly be held in, both by the good knights of his own country, and those of others."

This unexpected gage of battle realized the worst fears of those who had looked with suspicion on the extraordinary assemblage this day of the dependents of the House of Douglas. After a short pause, the trumpets again flourished lustily, when the reply of the English knights was made in the following terms:—

"That God forbid the rights and privileges of England's knights, and the beauty of her damsels, should not be asserted by her children, or that such English knights as were here assembled, should show the least backwardness to accept the combat offered, whether grounded upon the superior beauty of their ladies, or whether upon the causes of dispute between the countries, for either or all of which the knights of England here present were willing to do battle in the terms of the indenture aforesaid, while sword and lance shall endure. Saving and excepting the surrender of the Castle of Douglas, which can be rendered to no one but England's king, or those acting under his orders."

CHAPTER XX.

Cry the wild war-note, let the champions pass,
 Do bravely each, and God defend the right;
 Upon Saint Andrew thrice can they thus cry,
 And thrice they shout on height,
 And then marked them on the Englishmen,
 As I have told you right.
 Saint George the bright, our ladies' knight,
 To name they were full fain;
 Our Englishmen they cried on height,
 And thrice they shout again.

OLD BALLAD.

THE extraordinary crisis mentioned in the preceding chapter, was the cause, as may be supposed, of the leaders on both sides now throwing aside all concealment, and displaying their utmost strength, by marshalling their respective adherents; the renowned Knight of Douglas, with Sir Malcolm Fleming and other distinguished cavaliers, were seen in close consultation.

Sir John de Walton, startled by the first flourish of trumpets, while anxiously endeavouring to secure a retreat for the Lady Augusta, was in a moment seen collecting his followers, in which he was assisted by the active friendship of the Knight of Valence.

The Lady of Berkely showed no craven spirit at these warlike preparations; she advanced, closely followed by the faithful Bertram, and a female in a riding-hood, whose face, though carefully concealed, was no other than that of the unfortunate Margaret de Hautlieu, whose worst fears had been realized as to the faithlessness of her betrothed knight.

A pause ensued, which for some time no one present thought himself of authority sufficient to break.

At last the Knight of Douglas stepped forward and said, loudly, "I wait to know whether Sir John de Walton requests leave of James of Douglas to evacuate his castle without further wasting that daylight which might show us to judge a fair field, and whether he craves Douglas's protection in doing so?"

The Knight of Walton drew his sword. "I hold the Castle of Douglas," he said, "in spite of all deadly,—and never will I ask the protection from any one which my own sword is competent to afford me!"

"I stand by you, Sir John," said Aymer de Valence, "as your true comrade, against whatever odds may oppose themselves to us."

"Courage, noble English," said the voice of Greenleaf; "take your weapons in God's name. Bows and bills! bows and bills!—A messenger brings us notice that Pembroke is in full march hither from the borders of Ayrshire, and will be with us in half an hour. Fight on, gallant English! Valence to the rescue! and long life to the gallant Earl of Pembroke!"

Those English within and around the church no longer delayed to take arms, and De Walton, crying out at the height of his voice, "I implore the Douglas to look nearly to the safety of the ladies," fought his way to the church door; the Scottish, finding themselves unable to resist the impression of terror which affected them at the sight of this renowned knight, seconded by his brother-in-arms, both of whom had been so long the terror of the district.

In the meantime, it is possible that De Walton might altogether have forced his way out of the church, had he not been met boldly by the young son of Thomas Dickson of Hazelside, while his father was receiving from Douglas the charge of preserving the stranger ladies from all harm from the fight, which, so long suspended, was now on the point of taking place.

De Walton cast his eye upon the Lady Augusta, with a desire of rushing to the rescue; but was forced to conclude, that he provided best for her safety by leaving her under the protection of Douglas's honour.

Young Dickson, in the meantime, heaped blow on blow, seconding with all his juvenile courage every effort he could make, in order to attain the prize due to the conqueror of the renowned De Walton.

"Silly boy," at length said Sir John, who had for some time forborne the stripling, "take, then, thy death from a noble hand, since thou preferrest that to peace and length of days."

"I care not," said the Scottish youth, with his dying breath; "I have lived long enough, since I have kept you so long in the place where you now stand."

And the youth said truly, for as he fell never again to rise, the Douglas stood in his place, and without a word spoken, again engaged with De Walton in the same formidable single combat, by which they had already been distinguished, but with even additional fury. Aymer de Valence drew up to his friend De Walton's left hand, and seemed but to desire the apology of one of Douglas's people attempting to second him, to join in the fray; but as he saw no person who seemed disposed to give him such opportunity, he repressed the inclination, and remained an unwilling spectator. At length it seemed as if

Fleming, who stood foremost among the Scottish knights, was desirous to measure his sword with De Valence. Aymer himself, burning with the desire of combat, at last called out, "Faithless Knight of Boghall! step forth and defend yourself against the imputation of having deserted your lady love, and of being a mansworn disgrace to the rolls of chivalry!"

"My answer," said Fleming, "even to a less gross taunt, hangs by my side." In an instant his sword was in his hand, and even the practised warriors who looked on felt difficulty in discovering the progress of the strife, which rather resembled a thunder-storm in a mountainous country than the stroke and parry of two swords, offending on the one side, and keeping the defensive on the other.

Their blows were exchanged with surprising rapidity; and although the two combatants did not equal Douglas and De Walton in maintaining a certain degree of reserve, founded upon a respect which these knights mutually entertained for each other, yet the want of art was supplied by a degree of fury, which gave chance at least an equal share in the issue.

Seeing their superiors thus desperately engaged, the partisans, as they were accustomed, stood still on either side, and looked on with the reverence which they instinctively paid to their commanders and leaders in arms. One or two of the women were in the meanwhile attracted, according to the nature of the sex, by compassion for those who had already experienced the casualties of war. Young Dickson, breathing his last among the feet of the combatants,* was in some sort rescued from the tumult by the Lady of Berkely, in whom the action seemed less strange, owing to the pilgrim's dress which she still retained, and who in vain endeavoured to solicit the attention of the boy's father to the task in which she was engaged.

* [The fall of this brave stripling by the hand of the English governor, and the stern heroism of the father in turning from the spot where he lay, "a model of beauty and strength," that he might not be

"Cumber yourself not, lady, about that which is bootless," said old Dickson, "and distract not your own attention and mine from preserving you, whom it is the Douglas's wish to rescue, and whom, so please God and St. Bride, I consider as placed by my chieftain under my charge. Believe me, this youth's death is in no way forgotten, though this be not the time to remember it. A time will come for recollection, and an hour for revenge."

So said the stern old man, reverting his eyes from the bloody corpse which lay at his feet, a model of beauty and strength. Having taken one more anxious look, he turned round, and placed himself where he could best protect the Lady of Berkely, not again turning his eyes on his son's body.

In the interim the combat continued, without the least withdrawn from the duty which Douglas had assigned him of protecting the Lady of Berkely, excites an interest for both, with which it is almost to be regretted that history interferes. It was the old man, Thomas Dickson, not his son, who fell. The slogan, "a Douglas, a Douglas," having been prematurely raised, Dickson, who was within the church, thinking that his young Lord with his armed band was at hand, drew his sword, and with only one man to assist him, opposed the English, who now rushed to the door. Cut across the middle by an English sword, he still continued his opposition, till he fell lifeless at the threshold. Such is the tradition, and it is supported by a memorial of some authority—a tombstone, still to be seen in the churchyard of Douglas, on which is sculptured a figure of Dickson, supporting with his left arm his protruding entrails, and raising his sword with the other in the attitude of combat.]—Note by the Rev. Mr. STEWART of Douglas.

cessation on either side, and without a decided advantage. At length, however, fate seemed disposed to interfere; the Knight of Fleming, pushing fiercely forward, and brought by chance almost close to the person of the Lady Margaret de Hautlieu, missed his blow, and his foot sliding in the blood of the young victim, Dickson, he fell before his antagonist and was in imminent danger of being at his mercy, when Margaret de Hautlieu, who inherited the soul of a warrior, and besides, was a very strong, as well as an undaunted person, seeing a mace of no great weight lying on the floor, where it had been dropped by the fallen Dickson, it, at the same instant, caught her eye, armed her hand, and intercepted, or struck down the sword of Sir Aymer de Valence, who would otherwise have remained the master of the day at that interesting moment. Fleming had more to do to avail himself of an unexpected chance of recovery, than to make a commentary upon the manner in which it had been so singularly brought about; he instantly recovered the advantage he had lost, and was able in the ensuing close to trip up the feet of his antagonist, who fell on the pavement, while the voice of his conqueror, if he could properly be termed such, resounded through the church with the fatal words, "Yield thee, Aymer de Valence—rescue or no rescue—yield thee!—yield ye!" he added, as he placed his sword to the throat of the fallen knight, "not to me, but to this noble lady—rescue or no rescue."

With a heavy heart the English knight perceived that he had fairly lost so favourable an opportunity of acquiring fame, and was obliged to submit to his destiny, or be slain upon the spot. There was only one consolation, that no battle was ever more honourably sustained, being gained as much by accident as by valour.

The fate of the protracted and desperate combat between Douglas and De Walton did not much longer remain in suspense; indeed, the number of conquests in single combat achieved by the Douglas in these wars, was so great, as to make it doubtful whether he was not, in personal strength and skill, even a superior knight to Bruce himself, and he was at least acknowledged nearly his equal in the art of war.

So however it was, that when three quarters of an hour had passed in hard contest, Douglas and De Walton, whose nerves were not actually of iron, began to show some signs that their human bodies were feeling the effect of the dreadful exertion. Their blows began to be drawn more slowly, and were parried with less celerity. Douglas, seeing that the combat must soon come to an end, generously made a signal, intimating to his antagonist to hold his hand for an instant.

“ Brave De Walton,” he said, “ there is no mortal quarrel between us, and you must be sensible that in this passage of arms, Douglas, though he is only worth his sword and his cloak, has abstained from taking a decisive advantage when the chance of arms has more than once offered it. My father’s house, the broad domains around it, the dwelling, and the graves of my ancestors, form a reasonable reward for a knight to fight for, and call upon me in an imperative voice to prosecute the strife which has such an object, while you are as welcome to the noble lady, in all honour and safety, as if you had received her from the hands of King Edward himself; and I give you my word, that the utmost honours which can attend a prisoner, and a careful absence of every thing like injury or insult, shall attend De Walton when he yields up the castle, as well as his sword, to James of Douglas.”

"It is the fate to which I am perhaps doomed," replied Sir John de Walton; "but never will I voluntarily embrace it, and never shall it be said that my own tongue, saving in the last extremity, pronounced upon me the fatal sentence to sink the point of my own sword. Pembroke is upon the march with his whole army, to rescue the garrison of Douglas. I hear the tramp of his horse's feet even now; and I will maintain my ground while I am within reach of support; nor do I fear that the breath which now begins to fail will not last long enough to uphold the struggle till the arrival of the expected succour. Come on, then, and treat me not as a child, but as one who, whether I stand or fall, fears not to encounter the utmost force of my knightly antagonist."

"So be it then," said Douglas, a darksome hue, like the lurid colour of the thunder-cloud, changing his brow as he spoke, intimating that he meditated a speedy end to the contest, when, just as the noise of horses' feet drew nigh, a Welsh knight, known as such by the diminutive size of his steed, his naked limbs, and his bloody spear, called out loudly to the combatants to hold their hands.

"Is Pembroke near?" said De Walton.

"No nearer than Loudon Hill," said the Prestantin; "but I bring his commands to John de Walton."

"I stand ready to obey them through every danger," answered the knight.

"Woe is me," said the Welshman, "that my mouth should bring to the ears of so brave a man tidings so unwelcome! The Earl of Pembroke yesterday received information that the Castle of Douglas was attacked by the son of the deceased Earl, and the whole inhabitants of the district. Pembroke on hearing this, resolved to march to your support, noble knight, with all the forces he had at his disposal. He did so, and accordingly entertained every assurance of relieving the castle, when unexpectedly he met, on Loudon Hill, a body of men of no very inferior force to his own, and having at their head that famous Bruce whom the Scottish rebels acknowledge as their king. He marched instantly to the attack, swearing he would not even draw a comb through his gray beard until he had rid England of this recurring plague. But the fate of war was against us."

He stopt here for lack of breath.

"I thought so!" exclaimed Douglas. "Robert Bruce will now sleep at night, since he has paid home Pembroke for the slaughter of his friends and the dispersion of his army at Methuen Wood. His men are, indeed, accustomed to meet with dangers, and to conquer them; those who follow him have been trained under Wallace, besides being partakers of the perils of Bruce himself. It was thought that the waves had swallowed them when they shipped themselves from the west; but know, that the Bruce was determined with the present reviving spring to awaken his pretensions, and that he retires not from Scotland again while he lives, and while a single lord remains to set his foot by his sovereign, in spite of all the power which has been so feloniously employed against him."

"It is even too true," said the Welshman Meredith, "although it is said by a proud Scotchman.—The Earl of Pembroke, completely defeated, is unable to stir from Ayr, towards which he has retreated with great loss; and he sends his instructions to Sir John de Walton, to make the best terms he can for the surrender of the Castle of Douglas, and trust nothing to his support."

The Scottish, who heard this unexpected news, joined in a shout so loud and energetic, that the ruins of the ancient church seemed actually to rock, and threaten to fall on the heads of those who were crowded within it.

The brow of De Walton was overclouded at the news of Pembroke's defeat, although in some respects it placed him at liberty to take measures for the safety of the Lady of Berkely. He could not, however, claim the same honourable terms which had been offered to him by Douglas before the news of the battle of Loudon Hill had arrived.

"Noble knight," he said, "it is entirely at your pleasure to dictate the terms of surrender of your paternal castle; nor have I a right to claim from you those conditions which, a little while since, your generosity put in my offer. But I submit to my fate; and upon whatever terms you think fit to grant me, I must be content to offer to surrender to you the weapon, of which I now put the point in the earth, in evidence that I will never more direct it against you until a fair ransom shall place it once more at my own disposal."

"God forbid," answered the noble James of Douglas, "that I should take such advantage of the bravest knight out of not a few who have found me work in battle! I will take example from the Knight of Fleming, who has gallantly bestowed his captive in guerdon upon a noble damsel here present; and in like manner I transfer my claim upon the person of the redoubted Knight of Walton, to the high and noble Lady Augusta Berkely, who, I hope, will not scorn to accept from the Douglas a gift which the chance of war has thrown into his hands."

Sir John de Walton, on hearing this unexpected decision, looked up like the traveller who discovers the beams of the sun breaking through and dispersing the tempest which has accompanied him for a whole morning. The Lady of Berkely recollected what became her rank, and showed her sense of the Douglas's chivalry. Hastily wiping off the tears which had unwillingly flowed to her eyes, while her lover's safety and her own were resting on the precarious issue of a desperate combat, she assumed the look proper to a heroine of that age, who did not feel averse to accept the importance which was conceded to her by the general voice of the chivalry of the period. Stepping forward, bearing her person gracefully, yet modestly, in the attitude of a lady accustomed to be looked to in difficulties like the present, she addressed the audience in a tone which might not have misbecome the Goddess of Battle dispersing her influence at the close of a field covered with the dead and the dying.

"The noble Douglas," she said, "shall not pass without a prize from the field which he has so nobly won. This rich string of brilliants, which my ancestor won from the Sultan of Trebisond, itself a prize of battle, will be honoured by sustaining, under the Douglas's armour, a lock of hair of the fortunate lady whom the victorious lord has adopted for his guide in chivalry; and if the Douglas, till he shall adorn it with that lock, will permit the honoured lock of hair which it now bears to retain its station, she on whose head it grew will hold it as a signal that poor Augusta de Berkely is pardoned for having gaged any mortal man in strife with the Knight of Douglas."

"Woman's love," replied the Douglas, "shall not divorce this locket from my bosom, which I will keep till the last day of my life, as emblematic of female worth and female virtue. And, not to encroach upon the valued and honoured province of Sir John de Walton, be it known to all men, that whoever shall say that the Lady Augusta of Berkely has, in this entangled matter, acted otherwise than becomes the noblest of her sex, he will do well to be ready to maintain such a proposition with his lance, against James of Douglas, in a fair field."

This speech was heard with approbation on all sides; and the news brought by Meredith of the defeat of the Earl of Pembroke, and his subsequent retreat, reconciled the fiercest of the English soldiers to the surrender of Douglas Castle. The necessary conditions were speedily agreed on, which put the Scottish in possession of this stronghold, together with the stores, both of arms and ammunition, of every kind, which it contained. The garrison had it to boast, that they obtained a free passage, with their horses and arms, to return by the shortest and safest route to the marches of England, without either suffering or inflicting damage.

Margaret of Hautlieu was not behind in acting a generous part; the gallant Knight of Valence was allowed to accompany his friend De Walton and the Lady Augusta to England, and without ransom.

The venerable prelate of Glasgow, seeing what appeared at one time likely to end in a general conflict, terminate so auspiciously for his country, contented himself with bestowing his blessing on the assembled multitude, and retiring with those who came to assist in the service of the day.

This surrender of Douglas Castle upon the Palm Sunday of 19th March, 1306-7, was the beginning of a career of conquest which was uninterrupted, in which the greater part of the strengths and fortresses of Scotland were yielded to those who asserted the liberty of their country, until the crowning mercy was gained in the celebrated field of Bannockburn, where the English sustained a defeat more disastrous than is mentioned upon any other occasion in their annals.

Little need be said of the fate of the persons of this story. King Edward was greatly enraged at Sir John de Walton for having surrendered the Castle of Douglas, securing at the same time his own object, the envied hand of the heiress of Berkely. The knights, to whom he referred the matter as a subject of inquiry, gave it nevertheless as their opinion that De Walton was void of all censure, having discharged his duty in its fullest extent, till the commands of his superior officer obliged him to surrender the Dangerous Castle.

A singular renewal of intercourse took place, many months afterwards, between Margaret of Hautlieu and her lover, Sir Malcolm Fleming. The use which the lady made of her freedom, and of the doom of the Scottish Parliament, which put her in possession of her father's inheritance, was to follow her adventurous spirit through dangers not usually encountered by those of her sex; and the Lady of Hautlieu was not only a daring follower of the chase, but it was said that she was even not daunted in the battle-field. She remained faithful to the political principles which she had adopted at an early period; and it seemed as if she had formed the gallant resolution of shaking the god Cupid from her horse's mane, if not treading him beneath her horse's feet.

The Fleming, although he had vanished from the neighbourhood of the counties of Lanark and Ayr, made an attempt to state his apology to the Lady de Hautlieu herself, who returned his letter unopened, and remained to all appearance resolved never again to enter upon the topic of their original engagement. It chanced, however, at a later period of the war with England, while Fleming was one night travelling upon the Border, after the ordinary fashion of one who sought adventures, a waiting-maid, equipped in a fantastic habit, asked the protection of his arm in the name of her lady, who, late in the evening, had been made captive, she said, by certain ill-disposed caitiffs, who were carrying her by force through the forest. The Fleming's lance was, of course, in its rest, and woe betide the faitour whose lot it was to encounter its thrust; the first fell, incapable of further combat, and another of the felons encountered the same fate with little more resistance. The lady, released from the discourteous cord which restrained her liberty, did not hesitate to join company with the brave knight by whom she had been rescued; and although the darkness did not permit her to recognise her old lover in her liberator, yet she could not but lend a willing ear to the conversation with which he entertained her, as they proceeded on the way. He spoke of the fallen caitiffs as being Englishmen, who found a pleasure in exercising oppression and barbarities upon the wandering damsels of Scotland, and whose cause, therefore, the champions of that country were bound to avenge while the blood throbbed in their veins. He spoke of the injustice of the national quarrel which had afforded a pretence for such deliberate oppression; and the lady, who herself had suffered so much by the interference of the English in the affairs of Scotland, readily acquiesced in the sentiments which he expressed on a subject which she had so much reason for regarding as an afflicting one. Her answer was given in the spirit of a person who would not hesitate, if the times should call for such an example, to defend even with her hand the rights which she asserted with her tongue.

Pleased with the sentiments which she expressed, and recognising in her voice that secret charm, which, once impressed upon the human heart, is rarely wrought out of the remembrance by a long train of subsequent events, he almost persuaded himself that the tones were familiar to him, and had at one time formed the key to his innermost affections. In proceeding on their journey, the knight's troubled state of mind was augmented instead of being diminished. The scenes of his earliest youth were recalled by circumstances so slight, as would in ordinary cases have produced no effect whatever; the sentiments appeared similar to those which his life had been devoted to enforce, and he half persuaded himself that the dawn of day was to be to him the beginning of a fortune equally singular and extraordinary.

In the midst of this anxiety, Sir Malcolm Fleming had no anticipation that the lady whom he had heretofore rejected was again thrown into his path, after years of absence; still less, when daylight gave him a partial view of his fair companion's countenance, was he prepared to believe that he was once again to term himself the champion of Margaret de Hautlieu, but it was so. The lady on that direful morning when she retired from the church of Douglas, had not resolved (indeed what lady ever did?) to renounce, without some struggle, the beauties which she had once possessed. A long process of time, employed under skilful hands, had succeeded in obliterating the scars which remained as the marks of her fall. These were now considerably effaced, and the lost organ of sight no longer appeared so great a blemish, concealed, as it was, by a black ribbon, and the arts of the tire-woman, who made it her business to shadow it over by a lock of hair. In a word, he saw the same Margaret de Hautlieu, with no very different style of expression from that which her face, partaking of the high and passionate character of her soul, had always presented. It seemed to both, therefore, that their fate, by bringing them together after a separation which appeared so decisive, had intimated its fiat that their fortunes were inseparable from each other. By the time that the summer sun had climbed high in the heavens, the two travellers rode apart from their retinue, conversing together with an eagerness which marked the important matters in discussion between them; and in a short time it was made generally known through Scotland, that Sir Malcolm Fleming and the Lady Margaret de Hautlieu were to be united at the court of the good King Robert, and the husband invested with the honours of Biggar and Cumbernauld, an earldom so long known in the family of Fleming.

THE gentle reader is acquainted, that these are, in all probability, the last tales which it will be the lot of the Author to submit to the public. He is now on the eve of visiting foreign parts; a ship of war is commissioned by its Royal Master to carry the Author of Waverley to climates in which he may possibly obtain such a restoration of health as may serve him to spin his thread to an end in his own country. Had he continued to prosecute his usual literary labours, it seems indeed probable, that at the term of years he has already attained, the bowl, to use the pathetic language of Scripture, would have been broken at the fountain; and little can one, who has enjoyed on the whole an uncommon share of the most inestimable of worldly blessings, be entitled to complain, that life, advancing to its period, should be attended with its usual proportions of shadows and storms. They have affected him at least in no more painful manner than is inseparable from the discharge of this part of the debt of humanity. Of those whose relation to him in the ranks of life might have ensured him their sympathy under indisposition, many are now no more; and those who may yet follow in his wake, are entitled to expect, in bearing inevitable evils, an example of firmness and patience more especially on the part of one who has enjoyed no small good fortune during the course of his pilgrimage.

The public have claims on his gratitude, for which the Author of Waverley has no adequate means of expression; but he may be permitted to hope, that the powers of his mind, such as they are, may not have a different date from those of his body; and that he may again meet his patronising friends, if not exactly in his old fashion of literature, at least in some branch, which may not call forth the remark, that—

“ Superfluus lags the veteran on the stage.”

ABBOTSFORD, September 1831.

INDEX AND GLOSSARY.

CHARACTERS INTRODUCED

AND

PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

ALPHABETICAL ORDER
OF THE WAVERLEY NOVELS.

ABBOT, THE.
ANNE OF GEIERSTEIN.
ANTIQUARY, THE.
AUNT MARGARET'S MIRROR, MY.
BETROTHED, THE.
BLACK DWARF, THE.
BRIDE OF LAMMERMOOR, THE.
CASTLE DANGEROUS.
COUNT ROBERT OF PARIS.
FAIR MAID OF PERTH, THE.
FORTUNES OF NIGEL, THE.
GUY MANNERING.
HEART OF MID-LOTHIAN, THE.
HIGHLAND WIDOW, THE.
IVANHOE.
KENILWORTH.
LAIRD'S JOCK, THE.
LEGEND OF MONTROSE, A.
MONASTERY, THE.
OLD MORTALITY.
PEVERIL OF THE PEAK.
PIRATE, THE.
QUENTIN DURWARD.
REDGAUNTLET.
ROB ROY.
ST. RONAN'S WELL.
SURGEON'S DAUGHTER, THE.
TALISMAN, THE.
TAPESTRIED CHAMBER, THE.
TWO DROVERS, THE.
WAVERLEY.
WOODSTOCK.

CHRONOLOGICAL ORDER OF THE WAVERLEY NOVELS.

COUNT ROBERT OF PARIS	1090.	WILLIAM RUFUS.
THE BETROTHED	1187.	HENRY II.
THE TALISMAN	1198.	RICHARD I.
IVANHOE	1194.	EDWARD I.
CASTLE DANGEROUS	1206-7.	HENRY I.
THE FAIR MAID OF PERTH	1402.	HENRY IV.
QUENTIN DURWARD	1470.	EDWARD IV.
ANNE OF GEIERSTEIN.	1474-7.	EDWARD IV.
THE MONASTERY	1559, &c.	ELIZABETH.
THE ABBOT	1568, &c.	ELIZABETH.
KENILWORTH	1575.	ELIZABETH.
THE LAIRD'S JOCK	1600.	ELIZABETH.
THE FORTUNES OF NIGEL	1620.	JAMES I.
A LEGEND OF MONTROSE.	1645-6.	CHARLES I.
WOODSTOCK	1652.	COMMONWEALTH.
PEVERIL OF THE PEAK	1680, &c.	CHARLES II.
OLD MORTALITY	1679-90.	{ CHARLES II. & WIL- LIAM & MARY.
THE PIRATE	about 1700.	WILL. III. OR ANNE.
MY AUNT MARGARET'S MIRROR	1700.	WILLIAM III.
THE BRIDE OF LAMMERMOOR	1700.	WILLIAM III.
THE BLACK DWARF	1708.	ANNE.
ROB ROY	1715.	GEORGE I.
THE HEART OF MID-LOTHIAN	1736-51.	GEORGE II.
WAVERLEY	1745.	GEORGE II.
THE HIGHLAND WIDOW	1755.	GEORGE II.
THE SURGEON'S DAUGHTER	1750-70.	GEO. II. & GEO. III.
GUY MANNERING	1760-70.	GEO. II. & GEO. III.
THE TWO DROVERS	1765.	GEORGE III.
REDGAUNTLET	1770.	GEORGE III.
THE TAPESTRIED CHAMBER	1780.	GEORGE III.
THE ANTIQUARY	1798.	GEORGE III.
ST. RONAN'S WELL	1800.	GEORGE III.

WAVERLEY.

CHARACTERS INTRODUCED.

- | | |
|--|---|
| Edward Waverley, or Captain Waverley. | Old Ballenkeiroch, a Highland chief, a friend of MacIvor's. |
| Mr. Richard Waverley, his father. | MacMurrough, "Nann Fonn," the family bard at Glennaquoich. |
| Sir Everard Waverley, Edward's uncle. | Shemus an Snachad, or, James of the Needle, MacIvor's tailor at Edinburgh. |
| Mrs. Rachel Waverley, Sir Everard's sister. | Donald Bean Lean, a Highland robber chief; alias , Will Ruthven or Rufin; as the pedlar, on the road towards Stirling. |
| Mr. Pembroke, the chaplain at Waverley Honour. | Alice Bean, his daughter. |
| Lawyer Chippurse, at ditto. | Callum Beg, MacIvor's page. |
| Mr. Hookem, his partner. | Duncan Duroch, a follower of Bean Lean. |
| Miss Sissly, or Cecilia Stubbs, Squire Stubbs' daughter. | Ebenezer Cruikshanks, landlord of the Golden Candlestick Inn. |
| Lady Emily Blandeville. | John Mucklewrath, the smith at Cairn-vreckan village. |
| Mr. Cosmo Comyne Bradwardine, Baron of Bradwardine and Tully Veolan. | Mrs. Mucklewrath, his wife, a virago. |
| Rose Bradwardine, his daughter. | Major Melville, the Magistrate at Cairn-vreckan village. |
| Mr. Falconer, Laird of Balmawhapple, | Mr. Morton, the Presbyterian pastor at ditto. |
| Mr. Bullsegg, Laird of Killaneureit. | Habakkuk Gillilan, or "Gifted Gillilan," a Cameronian officer. |
| The Laird of Duchran. | Colonel Stewart, governor of the Castle of Doune. |
| Mr. Rubrick, Chaplain to the Old Baron. | Lieutenant Jamie Jinker, at Doune, (and a horse-dealer.) |
| Duncan Macwheebie, the bailie at Tully Veolan. | THE CHEVALIER PRINCE CHARLES EDWARD. |
| Jock Scriver, his apprentice. | Le Compte de Beaujeau, an officer in the Chevalier's army. |
| Saunders Sanderson, the butler at Tully Veolan. | Widow Flockhart, landlady at Waverley's lodgings in the Canongate. |
| John Heatherblutter, the gamekeeper at ditto. | Colonel Gardiner, in Waverley's regiment. |
| Davie Gellatly, the simpleton, at Tully Veolan. | Sergeant Houghton, ditto. |
| Old Janet Gellatly, his mother. | Job and Elspat, his father and mother. |
| Malcolm Bradwardine, of Inch-Grabbit, a relation of the Old Baron. | Corporal Tims, in Waverley's regiment. |
| Jamie Howie, his bailie. | Johu Hodges, } servants of Waverley. |
| Widow Macleary, landlady of the Tully Veolan change-house. | Alick Polwarth, } |
| Fergas MacIvor, "Vich Ian Vohr," the Chief of Glennaquoich. | Jacob Jopson the farmer, at the hamlet near Clifton. |
| Flora MacIvor, his sister. | Cicely, his daughter. |
| Una and Cathleen, her attendants. | |
| Evan Dhu Maccombich, MacIvor's foster-brother. | |
| Dugald Mahony, Evan Dhu's attendant. | |

Ned Williams, her sweetheart.	Frank Stanley, his nephew.
Farmer Williams, his father, at Fast-walts Farm.	Old Spontoon, Colonel Talbot's confidential servant.
Rev. M. Twigtythe, the clergyman, near ditto.	Captain Foster, a guard at Tully Veolan House.
Mrs. Nosebag, Waverley's travelling companion.	Sister Theresa, and the Priest, with the MacIvors at Carlisle.
Corporal Bridoon, in Lieut. Nosebag's regiment.	The Judge, and the High-Sheriff, at Carlisle.
The Duke of Cumberland, commander-in-chief.	Officers, Soldiers, Highland Chiefs, Villagers, Domestic, &c.
Colonel Talbot, an English officer, a friend of Waverley's.

PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

VOLUME I.

Description of Waverley Honour, 93; Old Sir Everard making his will in the library there, 129. Edward Waverley leaves home for head-quarters at Dundee, 140. Arrives at the manor-house of Tully Veolan, 150; sees Davie Gellatly in the garden, 155; and is introduced to Rose Bradwardine and her father, 162. The banquet in the old hall, 169. The old baron takes him to the change-house in the village, 173; where the company quarrel and draw swords, 179. Waverley discovers that the Baron had afterwards fought a duel on his account, 203. A party of robbers drive away the Baron's cattle, 213. Evan Dhu Maccombich arrives at the manor-house from Fergus MacIvor, proposing a treaty, 224. Waverley goes with him to MacIvor, 227; and is rowed to Donald Bean Lean the robber's cave, where he remains a night, 234-5. He is introduced to Fergus MacIvor, 253. The feast in MacIvor's banqueting hall, 266. His introduction to Flora MacIvor, 279. He meets her and her two attendants by the cascade, and she sings to him, 289. The grand stag-hunt, 298. Waverley thrown down and gored by a stag, 302. He receives letters from home, 311; and resigns his commission, 318. He proposes love to Flora MacIvor, 327. Meets her again by the cascade, when she declines his proposal, 334. He hears from Rose Bradwardine that soldiers had taken possession of their house, and that her father had escaped, 348. He leaves MacIvor's house for Edinburgh, with Callum Beg as his page, 350. They arrive at the Golden Candlestick Inn, at —, 353; where they part, and Waverley proceeds with the landlord for his guide, 361.

VOLUME II.

Waverley's horse loses a shoe on the road, 5. The quarrel between the smith and his wife, 9. Waverley suspected, is threatened with arrest, and attacked by the smith, whom he shoots, 12. He is taken before Major Melville, a magistrate, detained, and examined, 14. He explains his circumstances to the Rev. Mr. Morton, 38. The arrival of Gifted Gilfillan in the village with his volunteer troop, 46. Waverley leaves the village in their custody, 50. Donald Bean Lean, disguised as a pedlar, overtakes the party, and Waverley is rescued, 53. He is carried to a hovel in a glen, 59; has a fever, and is attended by Bean Lean's daughter, 61. He leaves the hovel with some Highlanders privately, 67. They creep past a guard of soldiers at night, 70. He arrives at the Castle of Doune, 72. They approach Edinburgh during the insurrection, 84. Waverley meets Fergus MacIvor there, 86; who introduces him to the Chevalier Prince Charles Edward Stuart, 87. He enters the Chevalier's service, 89. Waverley and MacIvor dine with the Baron of Bradwardine at Widow Flockhart's, 105. The Chevalier's ball in Holyrood Palace, 118.

The Chevalier's troops begin their march from Edinburgh, 122. Death of Sergeant Houghton in a hovel on Carberry Hill, 135. The King's troops and the Chevalier's drawn up near Preston,—the eve of battle, 140. The Battle of Preston, 149. Waverley saves Colonel Talbot's life, 151. Colonel Gardiner killed, 152. The Chevalier's party victorious, 153. The Baron insists on his right of taking off the Prince's boots, 159. Waverley's interview with Colonel Talbot, 163; who is released upon parole, 177. They arrive together in Edinburgh, 181. Fergus MacIvor in a passion tells Waverley of his disappointment by the Chevalier as to his title and marriage, &c. 197-202. Waverley presents Colonel Talbot with the Chevalier's passport to embark for England, 216. The Chevalier's army leave Edinburgh, 221. Waverley and MacIvor on the march exchange angry words about Flora MacIvor, 223. Waverley is shot at by Callum Beg, 230; who denies it, and is struck down by MacIvor, 231. MacIvor and Waverley draw swords on each other, 233; the Chevalier comes up and reconciles them, 234. The Chevalier's troops retreat, 244. The Skirmish near Clifton village, 251. Waverley in the dark is mistaken by a farmer's daughter for her lover, and admitted into a cottage, 257. He hears of his father's death, 264. He travels towards London by stage with Mrs. Nosebag, who is inquisitive about his name, 266. He arrives at Colonel Talbot's house in town, 270. Leaves town as Frank Stanley, nephew of Colonel Talbot, 282; arrives in Edinburgh, and receives intelligence of MacIvor and the Baron, 284. He goes to Tully Veolan and finds the Manor house in ruins, 287. David Gellatly takes him to the hut where the Baron had taken refuge, 292. Waverley goes with him to his cave in the rock, 299. He goes to Bailie Macwheoble's house, 311, where he receives, in a letter from Colonel Talbot, pardon of himself and the Baron, 316. They go to the Duchran, where Rose Bradwardine is staying, 324; and Waverley is received as her accepted suitor, 325. Waverley returns to Edinburgh, 327. The trial of Fergus MacIvor, and Evan Dhu Maccombich, at Carlisle, they are both sentenced to death, 331. Waverley visits Flora MacIvor; 334, she faints, 336. He visits Fergus in prison, 338. Fergus is carried out to execution, 344. Waverley returns home to Waverley Honour, 347, is married to Rose Bradwardine, 352. Tully Veolan House rebuilt by Colonel Talbot, and restored to the Baron, 356-359.

GUY MANNERING.

CHARACTERS INTRODUCED.

- | | |
|--|---|
| Guy Mannering, or Colonel Manner-
ing. | Lewis Bertram, his son, father of Mr.
Godfrey Bertram. |
| Mrs. Col. Mannering, (formerly Sophia
Wellwood.) | The Laird of Balruddery, a relation of ditto. |
| Julia Mannering, their daughter. | Sir Thomas Kittlecourt, M.P., a neighbour of Ellangowan. |
| Sir Paul Mannering, Colonel Manner-ing's uncle. | John Featherhead, Esq., his opponent; |
| Mr. Arthur Mervyn, Julia Mannering's guardian. | Deacon MacCrosskie, of Creechstone, a neighbour of Ellangowan. |
| Miss Matilda Marchmont, her confidante. | Macle, the Laird of Gudgeonford, ditto; |
| Mrs. Allan, Colonel Mannering's housekeeper at Woodbourne. | Luckie Finnieston, his tenant. |
| Barnes, his servant at Woodbourne. | Duncan Finnieston, her husband. |
| Peggy, his laundry maid at Woodbourne. | Duncan Robb, the grocer. |
| Auld Willie Johnstone, a fisherman, her father. | John Hay, the fisherman. |
| Young Johnstone, his son. | Luckie Howatson, the midwife. |
| Mr. Godfrey Bertram, the Laird of Ellangowan. | Sandie MacGruther, a beggar imprisoned by Ellangowan. |
| Mrs. Bertram. | Snail, the Collector of Customs. |
| Harry Bertram, their son, the heir of Ellangowan, or Captain Vanbeest
Brown, alias Dawson, alias Dudley. | Captain Philip Delacorre, a friend of
Harry Bertram. |
| Lucy Bertram, his sister. | Dudley, a young artist, ditto. |
| Abel Sampson, or Dominic Sampson,
the tutor at Ellangowan. | Joe Hodges, Bertram's landlord, near
Mervyn Hall. |
| John Wilson, the groom at Ellan-
gowan. | Mrs. Margaret Bertram, of Si glesde,
Lucy Bertram's maiden aunt. |
| Andrew, the gardener at Ellangowan. | Janet Gibson, her young companion. |
| Godfrey Bertram Hewit, a natural son of Mr. Godfrey Bertram. | Mrs. Rebecca, her waiting woman. |
| Janet Lightheel, his mother. | Mr. MacCasquill, of Drum-quag, } her
Mr. Quid, the tobacconist. } relations. |
| Sir Allan Bertram, of Ellangowan, an ancestor of Mr. Godfrey Bertram. | Lieut. O'Kean, her former admirer. |
| Dennis Bertram, his son. | Captain Andrew Bertram, one of her ancestors. |
| Donohoe Bertram, his son. | Mr. Peter Protocol, her attorney. |
| | Mr. Mortcloke, the undertaker. } at her funeral. |
| | Jamie Duff, an idiot, } |
| | Sir Robert Hazlewood, of Hazlewood. |

Charles Hazlewood, his son, in love with Lucy Bertram.	Tib Mumps, landlady of the Mumps' Ha' Ale-house.
Lady Jane Devorgoil, a friend of the Hazlewoods	Jockie Grieve, landlord of another ale-house.
Mr. MacMorlan, the Sheriff Substitute, Lucy Bertram's guardian.	Mrs. MacCandlish, landlady of the Golden Arms Inn, Kippletringan.
Mrs. MacMorlan.	Grizzle the chambermaid at ditto.
Mr. Corsaud, a magistrate.	Jock Jabos, the postilion at ditto.
Mr. Gilbert Glossin, a lawyer, purchaser of the Ellangowan estate.	Master MacGrauner, a Dissenting minister.
Scrow, his clerk.	Deacon Bearelliff, at the Gordon Arms.
Mr. Paulus Pleydell, an advocate in Edinburgh, formerly the Sheriff at Ellangowan.	Mr. Skreigh, the precentor, at ditto.
Driver, his clerk.	Meg Merrilies, the gipsy.
The Rev. Dr. Erskine, of the Greyfriars Church, Edinburgh.	Gabriel Faa, her nephew, one of the huntmen.
Luckie Finlayson, landlady of the lodgings in the Canongate.	Giles Bailie, a gipsy, his father.
Miles Macfin, the cadie there.	Dirk Hatteraick, (alias Jans Janson,) a Dutch smuggler captain.
Andrew or Dandie Dinmont, a store farmer at Charlie's-Hope.	Vanbeest Brown, his Lieutenant.
Allie, his wife.	Soles, a shoemaker, the witness at Hatteraick's examination.
Auld Elspeth, their old servant.	William Pritchard, Commander of H. M. sloop "The Shark."
Nelly, their servant girl.	Frank Kennedy, the excise officer, murdered by the Smugglers.
Jock o' Dawston Cleuch, their quarrelsome neighbour.	David MacGuffog, the jailer at Portanferry.
Tawo' Todshaw, } huntmen near	Mrs. MacGuffog, his wife.
Will o' the Flat, } Charlie's-Hope.	Slounging Jock, and Dick Spur'em, MacGuffog's men.
Hobbie o' Sorbietrees.	Donald Laidler, and Sam Silverquill, prisoners at Portanferry.
Sawney Culloch, a pedlar.	Gipsies, Smugglers, Huntmen, Soldiers, Domestic, &c.
Rowley Overdees, } highwaymen.
Jock Penny,
Johnnie Goodstire, the weaver.
Tam Hudson, a gamekeeper.

PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

VOLUME I.

Guy Mannering on horseback inquiring his road to Ellangowan House, where he is introduced, 55. He hears the family history of the Lairds of Ellangowan, 59. Meg Merrilies comes to the house during Mrs Bertram's confinement, 70. Mannering consults the stars for the destiny of young Harry Bertram, 79, he gives to Ellangowan the scheme he had prepared for the child's nativity, 97, which is enclosed in a velvet bag, and fastened round the child's neck, 98. Ellangowan is made a magistrate, 100, and prosecutes the gipsies, who retaliate, and annoy him, 110, he turns them off his estate, and destroys their huts, 116. Meg Merrilies meets him on the road side, and threatens his family with ruin, 119. Frank Kennedy shows Ellangowan the smuggler's vessel chased by a sloop of war, 126. Young Harry Bertram is lost, and Frank Kennedy is found among the rocks at Warroch Point, murdered, 132. Mrs. Bertram dies in her confinement, 134.

Mr. Pleydell, the Sheriff Depute, investigates the circumstances, and suspicion falls on the smugglers and the gipsies, 139. Meg Merrilies is apprehended on suspicion, and examined, but discharged, 144. Colonel Mannering on his return to England stops at the Gordon Arms, and hears of Mr. Bertram's illness and distress, 150; he writes to Mr. Mervyn of his adventures in India, a duel, and the death of his wife, 161. Mr. MacMorlan consults with the Colonel about the sale of the Ellangowan estate, 167. The Colonel goes to the house during the sale, and sees Mr. Bertram sitting in the garden, paralytic, 171. Mr. Bertram is annoyed by Glossin, and dies in his chair there, 176. Glossin purchases the estate, 182. Lucy Bertram leaves Ellangowan to stay in Mr. MacMorlan's family, 184. The Dominie insists upon going with her, 186. Mr. Mervyn writes to the Colonel about Julia and her lover's serenades on the lake, 192. Extracts from her letters to her friend about her lover Vanbeest Brown, and her father's intention of removing her from Westmoreland, 199-216. Mr. MacMorlan's contrivance to give Dominie Sampson new clothes, 221. Colonel Mannering settles at Woodbourne, near Ellangowan House, with Julia, Lucy Bertram, and the Dominie, 224. The Dominie's delight at having the arrangement of the library, 229. Captain Brown returns to England, 232; he writes to his friend Captain Delasserre an account of his proceedings, and of his love for Julia Mannering, 233-40; he meets Dinmont at an ale-house, on his way into Scotland, 245. Meg Merrilies is there, and is told of Mr. Bertram's death, &c. 249; she appears to recollect Brown, but lets him pass on, 252. Dinmont and Brown, attacked by gipsies on their way across a morass, beat them off, 256; Dinmont wounded, ib.; they arrive at Charlie's-Hope farm, 260. Dinmont's wounds are dressed by his wife, 265. Brown attends a fox-hunt and a salmon-spearing with him, 269-80. One of the huntsmen, (the gipsy Gabriel Faa,) seems to avoid Brown, 275. Brown takes leave of the little family at Charlie's-Hope, 283. On his road to Kippletringan he leaves his post-chaise in a snow-storm at night, 288; and enters a gipsy's hut, where he finds Meg Merrilies watching over a dying man, 293. Five other gipsies come in, and she hides Brown all night among some straw, 294; they bring in his portmanteau and rifle it, 300. In the morning she lets him escape, 302, gives him a purse, makes him promise secrecy, and also to follow her whenever she may call him, 305. Julia Mannering writes to her friend about Lucy Bertram, and domestic affairs, at Woodbourne, 310-20.

VOLUME II.

Also an account of Woodbourne House, attacked by smugglers, who are beat off, 5-12, and that Captain Brown had accidentally wounded young Hazlewood and escaped, 13-19. Glossin learns that Brown had slept at the inn of Kippletringan the night before the affray, 25, and bribes the landlady to produce a packet he had left there, 28. Dirk Hattersack is brought handcuffed before Glossin, 35; Glossin, afraid of his telling about the stealing away of Harry Bertram, gives him means of escape, 39. He escapes at night, and gets off in a boat, 44. Glossin meets him in a cavern on the shore, 47. He tells Glossin about young Bertram having been sent to India, and that he was now in England, 52. They lay a plan for securing him, and carrying him away from Scotland, 53. Glossin, hearing of the death of Lucy Bertram's aunt, goes to Woodbourne to consult with Lucy, who refuses to see him, 64. He gives Colonel Mannering a deed by which the old lady had settled her estate upon Lucy, 67. Mr. MacMorlan advises the Colonel to go to Edinburgh with the Dominie, who was a witness to the deed, 68. They arrive in Edinburgh and go to Mr. Pleydell, the advocate, where they meet Dinmont, 74. They find Mr. Pleydell at a tavern with some friends at "High Jinks," 76-7; he advises Dinmont upon his case, and dismisses him, 84, and appoints the Colonel to talk about Miss Bertram's affairs the next day, (Sunday,) 87. He and the Colonel attend Divine Service together in the Greyfriars' Church, 89. They attend old Mrs. Bertram's funeral, 93. Her friends search the house for a will, 98. Mr. Protocol, her attorney, produces a deed later than that in favour of Lucy, by which the estate is left to him in trust for Harry Bertram, should he reappear, 103. Mr. Pleydell dines with the Colonel and the Dominie, 113. Mrs. Bertram's waiting woman tells Mr. Pleydell that Meg Merrilies had said that Harry Bertram was not dead, 121-2. Pleydell promises to visit the Colonel and examine Meg Merrilies, 123. Brown, after the accident with Hazlewood, escapes to a sea-port, where he remains concealed, 128. A boat lands him at Warroch Point, the spot where Kennedy was murdered, 134. He converses with Glossin, whom he meets about the ruins, 138. Glossin has him arrested for shooting Hazlewood, 143, and taken before Sir Robert Hazlewood, 149. His examination there, 155. He is committed to the Bridewell at Portanferry, 164. Dinmont comes to see him there, 177, and says that the huntsman, Gabriel Faa, had warned him to ride there, and not leave Brown until he should be liberated, 181. The Dominie wanders out one morning towards the gipsies' cave, and sees Meg Merrilies there, who gives him a letter to the Colonel, 194; and makes the Dominie eat and drink in the cave, 196-7. She afterwards meets Charles Hazlewood, and tells him to get the soldiers that Glossin had removed from Portanferry sent back there immediately, 207. Mr. MacMorlan comes to Hazlewood House, and orders the soldiers back to Portanferry, 213. The smugglers attack the bridewell at Portanferry at night, and fire the Custom House adjoining, 218. Two men under Dirk Hatteraick seize on Brown and Dinmont, and one of them whispers to them to escape when they come to the street, 221. The soldiers come up under Mr. MacMorlan, 222. Brown and Dinmont are led by one of the gipsies to a post-chaise and four, and escape, 223. Mr. Pleydell comes on a visit to the Colonel, 225. The Colonel shows him Meg Merrilies' letter advising him to send a carriage that night to Portanferry, 229. Brown and Dinmont arrive at Woodbourne in the post-chaise, 238. Brown is recognised by the Dominie as Harry Bertram the heir of Ellangowan, 245. Lucy Bertram embraces her brother, 255-6. The Colonel and Mr. Pleydell go to Sir Robert Hazlewood and give bail for Bertram, 268. Bertram, walking with the young ladies near Ellangowan, is suddenly summoned by Meg Merrilies to follow her according to his promise, 274; she conducts him and Dinmont to the ruined hovels where she used to live, 281; she gives them arms, 282; and takes them to the smugglers' cave, where they creep in after her, 284. Young Hazlewood enters after them. They find Dirk Hatteraick there, 286-7. She gives the signal, and Hatteraick shoots her, 291. They rush upon and secure him, 292. She and Hatteraick are carried to the ruined hut, where she declares Bertram to be the heir of Ellangowan, 297. The neighbours who are present recognise him, 299. Meg Merrilies dies, 300. The examination before the magistrates at Kippletringan, 306. Glossin takes his seat upon the bench, 309. He says that Bertram is only the natural son of Mr. Godfrey Bertram, 311, but the natural son is produced, ib. Mr. Pleydell produces evidence from Hatteraick's pocket-book of Glossin being implicated in carrying off Henry Bertram, 312. Glossin and Hatteraick are committed to prison, 313. Bertram produces a small velvet bag which he had always worn round his neck, and the Colonel recognises it as containing the scheme he had formerly prepared of the child's nativity, 315. In the prison at Portanferry Glossin gains admission to Hatteraick's cell at night, 320. Hatteraick warns him off, ib. They quarrel, and Hatteraick strangles him, 321. Hatteraick is found in the morning hung in his cell, 323. Captain Bertram takes possession of the old house of Ellangowan, and is married to Julia Mannering, 325. Charles Hazlewood marries Lucy Bertram, 329.

THE ANTIQUARY.

CHARACTERS INTRODUCED.

- Mr. Jonathan Oldenbuck, or Oldbuck, the Antiquary, Laird of Monkbarons.
 Miss Griselda Oldbuck, his sister.
 Maria M'Intyre, his niece.
 Captain Hector M'Intyre, his nephew.
 Jenny Rintherout, a servant at Monkbarons.
 David Dibble, the Gardener at ditto.
 Old Jacob Caxon, the hairdresser at ditto.
 Jenny Caxon, his daughter, a milliner.
 Lieutenant Taffril of the gun-brig "Search."
 The Rev. Mr. Bhattergowl, minister of Troctosey, near Monkbarons.
 Edie Ochiltree, an old Scottish mendicant, a King's bedesman, or blue gown.
 Saunders Mucklebacket, the fisherman at Mæselorag.
 Old Elspeth of the Craighurnfoot, his mother, formerly servant to Lady Glenallan.
 Maggie Mucklebacket, his wife.
 Steenie Mucklebacket, their eldest son.
 Little Jenny, their child.
 Alison Breck, a Fishwoman, near Monkbarons.
 Captain Lesley, a friend of Captain M'Intyre.
 Mrs. Mailsetter, keeper of the Fairport post-office.
 Davie Mailsetter, her son.
 Mrs. Shortcake, a baker's wife.
 Mrs. Haukbase, a butcher's wife, } her friends.
 Sir Arthur Wardour, of Knockwinnock Castle.
 Sir Richard of the Redhand, one of his ancestors.
 Sybil Knockwinnock, married to Sir Richard.
 Malcolm Miebegot, their son.
 Sir Gamelyn de Guardover, an ancestor of Sir Arthur.
 Isabella Wardour, daughter of Sir Arthur. afterwards married to Lord Geraldin.
 Captain Reginald Wardour, her brother.
- Robert, a servant at Knockwinnock Castle.
 Herman Dousterswivel, a German schemer.
 Ringan Alkwood, the Knockwinnock forester.
 Saunders Sweepclean, a King's messenger, at the Castle.
 Bailie Littlejohn, a magistrate at Fairport.
 Puggie Orrock, } sheriff's officers at Joek Ormston, } ditto.
 Mr. Gilbert Greenhorn, } attorneys.
 Mr. Gabriel Grinderson, }
 Mr. Ghrnigo Greenhorn, Mr. Gilbert Greenhorn's father.
 Messrs. Goldiebirds, creditors of Sir Arthur Wardour.
 The Earl of Glenallan.
 Joscilind, Countess of Glenallan.
 Lord Geraldin, the Earl's son, first as Mr. William Lovel, then as Major Neville.
 Sir Aymer de Geraldin, an ancestor of Lord Geraldin.
 Teresa d'Acunha, the Countess's lady's-maid.
 Mr. Geraldin Neville, uncle to Lord Geraldin.
 Miss Eveline Neville, married to the Earl of Glenallan, mother of Lord Geraldin.
 Mr. Gladsmoor, the almoner at Glenallan House.
 Calvert, the groom at ditto.
 Ailshie Gourlay, a jester.
 Francis Macraw, an old domestic at Glenallan.
 Mrs. Hadoway, Lovel's landlady at Fairport.
 Mr. Crabtree, a gardener at ditto.
 The town-clerk of Fairport.
 Mackitchinson, the landlord of the inn at Queensferry.
 John, the driver of the Queensferry diligence.
 Mrs. Macleuchar, the bookkeeper at the coach office in Edinburgh.
 Martin Waldeck, the Miner, the subject of an introduced story.
 Volunteer Troops, Fishermen, Sheriff's Officers, Villagers, Domestic, &c.

PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

VOLUME I.

The Antiquary meets Mr. Lovel at the coach-office in High Street, Edinburgh, 21. They travel together to the Hawes Inn, Queensferry, 26. Lovel visits the Antiquary at Monkbarns, 41. Description of the Antiquary's museum, 46. He shows Lovel the supposed ruins of a Roman camp, 57. Edie Ochiltree explains that it was no such thing, 61. The Antiquary quarrels with Sir Arthur Wardour after dinner, 90. Sir Arthur and his daughter on the sands at Halkethead are overtaken by a spring-tide, 108. They are joined by Edie Ochiltree and Lovel, 104-8. They are all raised to the cliff by ropes, and saved, 109. Lovel sleeps in the haunted chamber at Monkbarns, 137. Edie Ochiltree has an interview with Miss Wardour, 164-9. The Antiquary and Lovel visit her, 171. The postmaster's wife at Fairport peeps into the letters, 195. The post-boy, whose pony runs away with him, brings an express to Lovel, who leaves Monkbarns, 204. The Antiquary pays Lovel a visit at Fairport, 212. The picnic party at the ruins of St. Ruth's Priory, 222. Lovel reads them the story of Martin Waldeok, the Miner, 239. Captain M'Intyre joins the party, 255; and quarrels with Lovel, 264. Lovel receives a challenge from him, 270. He engages Lieutenant Taffril as his second, 274. The parties meet on the ground, and are interrupted by Edie Ochiltree, 281. They fire, and Captain M'Intyre is wounded, 282. Lovel escapes into the wood with Edie Ochiltree, 283. They hide in the Hermit's Cave, near St. Ruth's Priory, 285. From the secret gallery they overhear Dousterswivel and Sir Arthur Wardour in the ruins searching for treasure, 292-3. Lovel embarks in Lieutenant Taffril's brig, 306.

VOLUME II.

Sir Arthur and his daughter breakfast at Monkbarns, 10. The Antiquary threatens Dousterswivel with imprisonment for fraud, 23. They proceed to the ruins, 26. They dig and find a box of coins in a grave, 30. Edie Ochiltree persuades Dousterswivel to search again at midnight, 35-43. The German digs, is laughed at by Edie, and thrashed by the fisherman's son, 50-51. Funeral of the Countess Glenallan in the Catholic chapel by torchlight, 54. Edie and the fisherman's son escape to Mucklebucket's hut, 69. Old Elspeth gives Edie a ring, and sends him to the Earl of Glenallan, 74. Edie arrives at Glenallan House, and finds an old friend at the gate, 80. His interview with the Earl, who promises to visit old Elspeth, 86. Edie is arrested at the ale-house for the supposed murder of Dousterswivel,

99. Captain M'Intyre's dog breaks the Antiquary's Lachrymatory,
 104. M'Intyre attacks a seal on the sands, and is thrown down by it, 114-15. The Antiquary attends the funeral of the fisherman's son, 117-27. Lord Glenallan visits old Elspeth in the hut, 180. She tells him the history of his son's birth and preservation from destruction, 138. The Antiquary relieves the old fisherman in distress, 153. Lord Glenallan consults with the Antiquary about his son, 154. They dine together at Monkbarne, 166. Edie Ochiltree is brought before the Magistrates at Fairport and examined, 193. The Antiquary visits him in prison, 203; and gets him released, 212. The Antiquary and his nephew visit Old Elspeth, 223. She raves and dies, 230-31. Sir Arthur Wardour receives lawyers' letters pressing for payment of debts, 243. The sheriff's officers take possession of the castle, 252.
 The Antiquary arrives at the castle to assist Sir Arthur, 255. Edie Ochiltree brings letters, and the sheriff's officers leave the castle, 264.
 Edie explains to the Antiquary the cheat about the hidden treasure, 279-80. The alarm of an invasion, 283. Old Jacob Caxon on the beacon-tower gives the signal by mistake, 286. The Yeomanry muster at Fairport, 291. The Glenallan volunteers, headed by the Earl, come up, 293. Major Neville enters the town as a stranger, and is discovered to be Lovel, 294; and is recognised by the Earl of Glenallan as his son, Lord Geraldin, 295. He is afterwards married to Miss Wardour, 300.

ROB ROY.

CHARACTERS INTRODUCED.

The elder Mr. Osbaldistone, a London merchant. Mr. Owen, his confidential clerk. Frank Osbaldistone, his son. Mons. Dubourg, Mr. O.'s agent at Bourdeaux. Clement Dubourg, his son, one of Mr. O.'s clerks. Mr. Tresham, Mr. Osbaldistone's partner. Mabel Rickets, Frank's old nurse. Sir Hildebrand Osbaldistone, of Osbaldistone Hall, Frank's uncle.	Percival, "the Sot," Thorncliff, "the Bully," John, "the Gamekeeper," Richard, "the Horse-jockey," Wilfred, "the Fool," Rashleigh, "the Scholar," Diana Vernon, Sir Hildebrand's niece. Sir Frederick Vernon, her father, a political intriguer, called his Excellency the Earl of Beauchamp, first in disguise as Father Vaughan. Andrew Fairservice, the gardener at Osbaldistone Hall.	} Sons of Sir Hilde- brand.
---	---	--------------------------------------

Pate Macready, a pedlar, his friend.	Mrs. Flyter, the landlady of Frank's lodging in Glasgow.
Anthony Syddal, the house steward at Osbaldistone Hall.	Mr. Hammorgaw, the precentor at Glasgow.
Wardlaw, the land steward at ditto.	Mr. Christopher Neilson, a surgeon at ditto.
Old Martha, the housekeeper at ditto.	Mr. Ephraim MacVittle, a Glasgow merchant, one of Osbaldistone's creditors.
Ambrose Wingfield, } men employed at	Jeanie Macalpine, landlady at the Clachan of Aberfoyle.
Lan:ie Wingfield, } Osbaldistone Hall.	Major Duncan Galbraith, of Garschattachin, a militia officer.
Ned Shafton, one of the prisoners at Newgate with Old Sir Hildebrand.	Allan Iverach, or { with Galbraith, Stewart Inverashal- } at the Clachan loch, and others, } of Aberfoyle.
Squire Inglewood, a magistrate.	Mr. Morris, Frank's travelling companion with the portmanteau.
Joseph Johnson, his clerk.	Jonathan Brown, landlord of the "Black Bear," at Darlington.
Mr. Touthope, clerk of the peace.	Mr. Quitam, the lawyer, } at the Black Latherum, the Barber, } Bear Inn.
Mr. Justice Standish, a magistrate.	The Curate, } "MacCallum More."
Baillie Trumbull.	The Duke of Argyle, commander-in-chief of the King's forces.
Archie Rutledge, a constable.	Captain Thornton, an English officer.
Rob Roy MacGregor, the outlaw, or Robert Campbell.	Corporal Cramp, with him.
Heleen MacGregor, his wife.	Ewan of Brigglads, a soldier in Montrose's army.
Hamish MacGregor, } their sons.	Officers, Soldiers, Highlanders, Citizens, Travellers, Domestics, &c.
Robert Oig MacGregor, } their sons.
Euchin MacAnaleister, a follower of Rob Roy.
Angus Breck, ditto.
Baillie Nicol Jarvie, a magistrate of Glasgow, and kinsman of Rob Roy.
Mattie, his maid-servant, (and afterwards his wife.)
Andrew Wylie, the Baillie's former clerk.
Stanchells, head jailer at the Tolbooth of Glasgow.
Dougal, the turnkey at ditto, an adherent of Rob Roy.

PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

VOLUME I.

Frank Osbaldistone declines entering into partnership with his father, 116. He starts from London for his uncle's house, in the north of England, 129. He joins and jokes with the timid traveller with the portmanteau, on the road, 133. They meet Rob Roy at dinner in the Black Bear Inn of Darlington, 140. Frank meets Diana Vernon at fox-hunting near Osbaldistone Hall, 153. He is introduced to all his cousins there, 164. Diana Vernon tells him he has been accused of robbing the traveller of his portmanteau, 187. She goes with him to Mr. Justice Inglewood's, where he is in danger of being committed to prison, 190. Rob Roy comes in and gets him cleared of the charge, 209. He dines with Diana Vernon in the library, 227. Old Sir Hildebrand will not believe that Frank is innocent, 244. Rashleigh tells Frank that Diana Vernon is betrothed to her cousin Thorncliff, and insinuates his own pretensions, 253-55. Frank, at dinner the next day, is piqued with her, 256. He gets intoxicated, strikes Rashleigh, and draws the sword with one of the brothers, 258-60. Rashleigh next morning pretends to be reconciled, 263. Diana Vernon calls Frank into the library, 266; and makes him repeat what Rashleigh had said about her, 272. She tells him of Rashleigh's perfidious character, 273. Frank privately writes to his father's confidential clerk in London, cautioning him against Rashleigh, 278. Rashleigh sets off for London to take Frank's place in Mr. Osbaldistone's counting-house, 279. The gardener tells Frank that the robbery of the traveller's portmanteau had been spoken of in the Houses of Parliament, 289. From the garden Frank sees the shadow of some person with Diana Vernon in the library, 296. He writes to his father for leave to go to London to refute the calumnies against him about the robbery, and the same day receives a letter from Owen inclosing £100, and finds that his former letter to Owen had been suppressed, 301. Diana Vernon advises Frank to go to London instantly to keep watch over Rashleigh, 312. He watches her proceedings, and one evening discovers a man's glove in the library, 323. She confesses that it belonged to a friend, 324. She shows him a letter from his father's partner, saying his father is ruined, and that Rashleigh had absconded, 328. She gives him a sealed packet to be opened only in case of necessity, and they part, 330.

VOLUME II.

Frank goes to the gardener, who offers to be his guide to Glasgow, 8. They start early next morning, 13. He finds that the gardener has stolen Thorncliff's mare, 17. He says he has a lien on it for money lent, 18. They arrive in Glasgow, 22; and attend service in the Laigh Kirk under the Cathedral Church, 25. During the service Frank is warned by an unseen person (Rob Roy) that he is in danger in Glasgow, 37-8. He meets him by appointment that night at the bridge, 49. They proceed to the prison, 51, where Frank finds Owen confined, 57. Bailie Nicol Jarvie comes to the jail, 64; and promises to become bail for Owen, 69. He discovers Rob Roy there, 70. Frank opens the sealed packet given to him by Diana Vernon, 75. Rob Roy reads it and promises assistance, 77-8. Rob Roy, Frank, and the Bailie leave the prison together, 80. Frank and Owen breakfast next day with the Bailie, 89. Frank meets Rashleigh in the College grounds, and upbraids him, 95. They draw swords and fight, 98; are parted by Rob Roy, 99. The Bailie at dinner gives Frank and Owen a history of Rob Roy's circumstances, 115. Frank, the Bailie, and Andrew Fairservice start for the Highlands, at Rob Roy's appointment, 128. They arrive at the Clachan of Aberfoyle, 144; and fight with some Highlanders there, the Bailie's weapon a red-hot poker, 151-2. The landlady afterwards privately gives Frank a letter from Rob Roy, 159. The Highlanders prove to be part of a force sent out against Rob Roy, 165. A body of infantry come up and join them, 167. The officer places the Bailie and Frank under arrest on suspicion, 169. Dougal is brought in in custody, and promises to guide the soldiers to Rob Roy's retreat, 174. The party proceed, taking with them Frank and the Bailie, 178. They are stopped and attacked by a band under Helen MacGregor, 186. The Bailie in his escape is accidentally suspended from a tree by the skirts of his coat, 189. The soldiers are defeated and disarmed, 190. Dougal prevents the Highlanders from injuring the Bailie and Frank, 197. Helen MacGregor commands Dougal to throw them into the lake, 201. Rob Roy's sons arrive and tell their mother that he is taken prisoner, 204; and they bring in Morris, the traveller, who was hostage for Rob Roy, 207. He is bound and thrown into the lake, 209. Helen MacGregor sends Frank to the enemy's camp with a message of defiance, unless they release her husband, 212-13. The Duke of Montrose refuses to liberate him, 217. Rob Roy sends a message to his wife to protect the Bailie, 225. The Duke's troops retire with Rob Roy in custody, mounted behind one of the soldiers, 227. While crossing a ford in the evening, he gets loose, swims down the river, and escapes, 230. In the confusion and darkness, Frank also escapes, 232-3. He is overtaken on the moor by Diana Vernon on horseback, accompanied by a stranger, whom he supposes her husband, 236. She gives Frank a small packet containing his father's papers, and bids him farewell, 238. He is afterwards joined by Rob Roy, 241. The villagers' joy in finding Rob Roy at liberty, 250. The Bailie remonstrates with Rob Roy on his way of bringing up his sons, 255. Frank suggests to get them into some foreign service, and their father weeps, 264. Rob Roy and a small party escort Frank and the Bailie on their way from the village, 267. Rob Roy tells Frank he cannot send his sons abroad, 269. Helen MacGregor receives the party to a morning repast, 275. She gives Frank a ring from Diana Vernon, with her last farewell, 277. Rob Roy parts from Frank and the Bailie at Lochlomond, 279. They return to Glasgow, where Frank meets his father, whose affairs have been prosperously settled, 283. On the eve of their departure for London Frank receives intelligence of the great Rebellion, 290. On arrival in London he obtains a commission under Government, 292. The death of Sir Hildebrand's sons, 293-4. Old Sir Hildebrand is imprisoned in Newgate, 295; and dies, leaving Frank his heir, 296. Frank goes to Northumberland, and learns from Justice Inglewood that Diana Vernon is unmarried, 301. He goes to Osbaldistone Hall, 305; and takes possession, 307. Diana Vernon and her father (a political intriguer, and formerly disguised as Father Vaughan) appear to him in the library, and claim his secrecy and protection, 311. They and Frank are arrested for treason, and Rashleigh claims possession of the estate, 324. On their way to prison in a coach, attended by Rashleigh, they are rescued by Rob Roy and a party of Highlanders, 327. Rob Roy kills Rashleigh, who dies cursing Frank, 328-31. Frank is married to Diana Vernon, 333.

OLD MORTALITY.

CHARACTERS INTRODUCED.

Old Mortality, a religious itinerant.	Gabriel Kettle drummle, a Covenanting preacher.
Lady Margaret Bellenden, of the Tower of Tilletudlem.	Ephraim Macbriar, an enthusiast preacher.
Major Miles Bellenden, her brother.	Habakkuk Mucklewrath, a fanatic ditto.
Miss Edith Bellenden, her granddaughter.	Peter Poundtext, an "Indulged Pastor."
Gilbertsleugh, Lady Bellenden's cousin.	The Laird of Langcaie, a leader of the Covenanters.
Basil Ollfant, her distant relation.	Elizabeth Maclure, an old widow, a Covenanter.
Harrison, her old steward.	Peggy, her grandchild.
Old John Gudyill, her butler.	Niel Blane, the town piper.
Mysie, her female attendant.	Jenny, his daughter.
Jenny Dennison, Miss Bellenden's attendant.	The Laird of Lickitup, his friend.
Cuthbert (or Cuddle) Headrigg, a ploughman in Lady Bellenden's service.	The Right Rev. James Sharpe, Archbishop of St. Andrews, murdered by Balfour.
Goose Gibbie, a half-witted lad, in Lady Bellenden's service.	The Duke of Lauderdale, President of the Privy Council.
Old Mause, Cuddle's mother, an enthusiastic Covenanter.	The Duke of Monmouth, commander-in-chief of the Royal army.	In the Royal army.
Gideon Pike, Major Bellenden's valet.	General Thomas Dalzell.
The Hon. William Maxwell, Lord Evandale, an officer in the King's army.	Colonel John Grahame, of Claverhouse, Viscount Dundee.
Lady Emily Hamilton, his sister.	Lord Ross.
Henry Morton, a leader in the Covenanters' army, alias Major-General Melville, while abroad.	Major Allan.
Old Ralph Morton, of Milnwood, his uncle.	Wittenbold, a Dutch commandant.
Colonel Silas Morton, of Milnwood, Henry Morton's father.	Captain Lumley.
Alison Wilson, the old housekeeper at Milnwood.	Cornet Richard Grahame, nephew of Col. Grahame.
Old Robln, the butler there.	Sergeant Bothwell, or Francis Stewart.
John Balfour, of Burley, a leader in the Covenanters' army, afterwards disguised as Quentin Mackell, of Irongray.	Corporal Inglis.
	Tom Halliday, a private.
	Andrews, ditto.
	The public executioner.
	Officers, Soldiers, Insurgents, Enthusiasts, Domestic, &c.

PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

VOLUME I.

Old Mortality discovered in the burial-ground of Gandercleugh, 84-5. The muster of the King's troops at Clydesdale, 47. The shooting at the Popinjay, 56. Goose Gibbie thrown from his horse, 64. The brawl in the ale-house between Balfour and Sergeant Bothwell, 73. Henry Morton leaving the ale-house is accompanied by Balfour, whom he shelters in the hay-loft at Milnwood House, 77. A party of soldiers come at night in search of Balfour, charged with the murder of Archbishop Sharpe, but draw off without searching the house, 98. Lady Bellenden goes to Old Mause's cottage, and orders her to quit, 110. Mause and her son Cuddie enter service at Milnwood, 121. Morton is arrested by a party of the King's troops there, 140. Mause and Cuddie are turned away from Milnwood, 145. Morton is brought prisoner to the Tower of Tillietudlem, 151; and visited in the turret by Edith Bellenden and her attendant, 169. The arrival of Colonel Grahame with troops, 188. Morton is brought before him, and ordered for instant execution, 215. Reprieved at the intercession of Lord Evandale, 221. Morton and the other prisoners removed, 223. The skirmish at Drumclog between the King's troops and the Covenanters, 240. Cornet Grahame, sent as a truce-bearer, is shot by Balfour, 253. Deadly combat with Balfour and Bothwell, in which the latter is killed, 257-8. The King's troops retreat, 264. Lord Evandale's life saved by Morton, 273. The old tower prepared for defence by Major Bellenden, 295. Morton persuaded by Balfour to join the Covenanters' army, 312-13.

VOLUME II.

Attends a disorderly meeting of their Council, 5. Lord Evandale comes on horseback, wounded, to the tower, 28. The tower besieged by the Covenanters, under Balfour, Morton, &c. and nearly taken by accident, 40-56. A party of the Covenanters, under Morton, attack and enter Glasgow, 66. Morton returns, and saves Lord Evandale from being executed by Balfour, who had taken him prisoner, 75-9. Jenny Dennison comes to the camp, and informs Morton that the party in the tower are almost reduced by famine and mutiny, 81. The tower is evacuated by night, and ceded to the Covenanters, 92-3. Balfour seizes the family records, and the title-deeds of the Tillietudlem estate, 110. Morton bears an embassy to the Duke of Monmouth, 115. He returns to the Camp, and finds the Covenanters' army all in disorder, 127. Battle of Bothwell-bridge, and dispersion of the Cove-ers, 187. Balfour is wounded, 148. Morton and Cuddie quit the e-field, and take refuge in a farm-house, where Morton's life is stened by some of the Covenanters, 145. His murder prevented the arrival of some of the King's troops, under Col. Grahame, 154. arition of the dying fanatic preacher, 161-2. Morton is brought ner to Edinburgh, 165. Procession of the prisoners to execution,

The examination before the Privy Council, 178. Morton sent to banishment, 179. Cuddie Headrigg is pardoned, 181. The re applied to Macbriar the enthusiast, who, refusing to say where our has fled to, is carried out to execution, 184-5. Morton sails lolland, 191. Morton, on his return to Scotland, goes to Cuddie's ge, 195-6. Cuddie's wife gets him a lodging at Lord Evandale's e, 206. Edith Bellenden comes to the house with Lord Evandale, whom she was then betrothed,) and while she is about to consent to immediate marriage with him, she sees Morton through a win- and faints, 222. Morton escapes from the house in despair, and the old housekeeper at Milnwood, 239. He goes to Balfour's to recover the family records belonging to Lady Bellenden, 273, narrowly escapes being murdered by him, 287. He overhears a piracy to waylay and kill Lord Evandale, 288; and goes to Glas- for military assistance, 290. Lord Evandale is shot by a party y Balfour, 298; and Basil Olifant, by Cuddie, from behind a e, ib. Balfour is pursued by a party under Morton, and killed, and Henry Morton is married to Edith Bellenden, 305.

THE BLACK DWARF,
AND
A LEGEND OF MONTROSE.

CHARACTERS INTRODUCED.

THE BLACK DWARF.		Mrs. Elliot, his grandmother.
Jedediah Clefshboth- Landlord of the Wal- e Inn. stie Wilson, Farmer, Baldie, his Shepherd, ert, or Hobbie Elliot, of the Heugh- t, a farmer. e Armstrong, his bride-elect.	} who intro- duce the story.	John Elliot, Harry Elliot, Lillias Elliot, Jean Elliot, Annot Elliot, Annuple, his old nurse. Simon of Hackburn, Old Dick of the Dingle, Davie of Stenhouse, Hugh of Ringleburn, the blacksmith,	} his brothers and sisters. } his friends.

218 THE BLACK DWARF—PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

Young Patrick Earnscliff, the Laird of Earnscliff.	Sibbald, an attendant on the Earl of Menteith.
Mr. Richard Vere, the Laird of Ellieslaw.	M'Ilday, or Mhich-Connel Dhu,	} Highland chiefs in Montrose's army.
Miss Isabella Vere, his daughter.	Sir Hector M'Lean,
Miss Nancy Ilderton, } her cousins.	Young Cokitto, or Vich Alister More, or Alaster M'Donald,	} Highland chiefs in Montrose's army.
Miss Lucy Ilderton, }	Evan Dhu, of Lochiel,
Dixon, a servant of Mr. Vere.	MacDougal, of Lorn,	} Highland chiefs in Montrose's army.
The Black Dwarf, or Sir Edward Mauley, called Elshender the Recluse, or Cannie Elshie, or the Wise Wight of Mucklestane Moor.	John of Meidart, Captain of the Clan Ranald,
Mr. Hubert Ratcliffe, a friend of Sir Edward Mauley.	The Rev. Dr. Wisheart, chaplain to the Earl of Montrose.	} Royalists.
Sir Frederick Langley, a suitor of Miss Vere,	Prince Rupert,
Young Mareschal of Mareschal-Wells,	The Marquis of Newcastle,	} Royalists.
Old John Rewcastle, a Jedburgh smuggler,	The Earl of Antrim,
The Laird of Broken-girth-flow,	The Earl of Seaforth,	} Royalists.
William Willieson, a Brig-owner,	The Marquis of Huntly,
Dr. Hobbler, the clergyman at Ellieslaw Castle,	Colonel Hay,	} Royalists.
William Graeme, the Red Reiver of Westburnflat.	The Earl of Airlie,
"The Old Hag," his mother.	The Marquis of Argyle, commander of the Parliamentary forces, "MacCalum More," called "Gillespie Grumach," disguised in the dungeon as Murdoch Campbell.	} Royalists.
Farmers, Conspirators, Attendants, &c.	Sir Duncan Campbell, of Ardenvoehr, in Argyle's army.
	Lady Campbell, his wife.	} Royalists.
	Annot Lyle, their daughter, brought up by the M'Aulays, and married to the Earl of Menteith.
	The Rev. Mr. Graneangowl, chaplain of Ardenvoehr Castle.	} Royalists.
	Lorimer, one of the guard at ditto.
	Sir Duncan Campbell, of Auchencbreck, in Argyle's army.	} Parliamentary leaders.
	Lord Burleigh,
	The Earl of Leven,	} Parliamentary leaders.
	General Leslie,
	General Baillie,	} Parliamentary leaders.
	Sir John Urrie,
	Ranald MacEagh, a "Son of the Mist," an outlaw.	} Parliamentary leaders.
	Kenneth, his grandson.
	Hector of the Mist, an outlaw, killed by Allan M'Aulay.	} Parliamentary leaders.
	Children of the Mist.
	Officers, Soldiers, Highland Chiefs, Domestics, &c.	} Parliamentary leaders.

A LEGEND OF MONTROSE.

The Earl of Montrose, the King's Lieutenant in Scotland, first disguised as Anderson, a servant of the Earl of Menteith.

The Earl of Menteith, a kinsman of the Earl of Montrose.

Sir Miles Musgrave, } officers in Montrose's army.

Sir Christopher Hall, }

Captain Dugald Dalgetty, a soldier of Fortune, afterwards knighted.

Angus M'Aulay, a Highland chief in Montrose's army.

Allan M'Aulay, "Allan of the Red Hand," his brother, a lunatic.

Donald, an old domestic of the M'Aulays.

PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

VOLUME I.

The Black Dwarf discovered on Mucklestane Moor, 32. He builds a stone hut on the Moor, 45. Miss Vere and two other young ladies visit him, 58. Westburnflat, the robber, calls there on his way to the farm house, 68. Hobbie Elliot's greyhound kills the Black Dwarf's goat, 74. Elliot goes home, finds his house on fire, and Grace Armstrong carried off, 84. His friends pursue Westburnflat, 87. They attack Westburnflat Tower, and rescue Miss Vere instead of Grace Armstrong, 97. Grace Armstrong is restored to her family, 109. The Black Dwarf gives Elliot money to rebuild his farm, 118. Miss Vere, seized and carried off her father's grounds, is restored by young Earnscliff and others who had rescued her from Westburnflat, 138. The rendezvous of the Jacobite conspirators at Ellieslaw Castle, 141-55. Vere compels his daughter to promise instant marriage with Sir Frederick Langley, 163. Ratcliffe takes her to consult with the Black Dwarf, 165-76. She enters the hut, 178; and he promises to prevent the marriage, 182. The Black Dwarf suddenly appears in the chapel among the wedding preparations—declares himself Sir Edward Mauley—and breaks off the marriage, 189. Conclusion, 195. The Earl of Menteith meets Captain Dalgetty on the road from the Lowlands, 245.

VOLUME II.

They arrive at Darnlinvarach Castle, 11. Allan M'Aulay the seer joins them in the large stone hall there, and seems mad, 15. The supper and Highland candlesticks, 24. The Earl of Menteith relates to Dalgetty Allan M'Aulay's history, 33, and retains Dalgetty in his service, 46. Annot Lyle sings to Allan and quiets him, 51. Arrival of the Highland chiefs at Darnlinvarach, 59. The Earl of Montrose throws off his disguise, and declares himself to the assembled Chiefs as the King's Lieutenant, 67. Sir Duncan Campbell arrives as ambassador from the Marquis of Argyle, 74. Appears affected at Annot Lyle's singing, 93. Leaves Darnlinvarach with Dalgetty, and they arrive at the castle of Ardenvohr, 97. Dalgetty examines the fortifications of Drumsnab, 105. Dines with Sir Duncan and his Lady, 107. Proceeds with an escort to Inverary, 115. Observes the gibbet in front of the castle, 118. Is introduced to the Marquis of Argyle in the castle, 122. Arrested and confined in a dungeon, 128; there he finds Ranald MacEagh the outlaw, 130. They are visited by the Marquis in disguise, 136, who obtains from Ranald the history of Annot Lyle, 140, and endeavours to tamper with Dalgetty, who suddenly seizes upon the Marquis, throws him down, and makes him sign a passport for himself and the outlaw, 146. They bind the Marquis, lock him in a dungeon, and escape, 149-50. They pass through the chapel during service, 152, leave Inverary, 155, and are pursued by soldiers and bloodhounds through the woods, 161-2. A skirmish among the rocks between the soldiers and the Children of the Mist, 166. Dalgetty is wounded and faints, 167. He and Ranald arrive in Montrose's tent, 185. Allan M'Aulay prophesies that he will kill the Earl of Menteith, 200. Montrose receives intelligence at night of the approach of Argyle's forces, 211; the eve of battle, 215. Argyle leaves the field, and gets on board a vessel, 219. The battle, 222. Montrose is victorious. Allan M'Aulay and Ranald MacEagh turn upon each other and fight, 226. MacEagh is desperately wounded, 227. Dalgetty is knighted, 228. Allan M'Aulay declares to Annot Lyle his passion for her, and then leaves the neighbourhood, 241. She dresses Sir Duncan Campbell's wounds, 247. Ranald carried into the room wounded, declares himself to Sir Duncan the murderer of his children, that Annot Lyle is Sir Duncan's only daughter, and had been preserved by the M'Aulays, 252. Ranald's grandson is sent after Allan, 255-6. Ranald MacEagh dies, 259. Allan returns and stabs the Earl of Menteith in his wedding dress on the eve of his marriage, and escapes, 270. The Earl recovers, and is married to Annot Lyle, 272.

THE HEART OF MID-LOTHIAN.

CHARACTERS INTRODUCED.

Mr. Peter Pattieson,	} who introduce the Story.	Mrs. Dalton, the housekeeper at Willingham rectory.
Mr. Halkitt and Mr. Hardie,		Douce Davie Deans, the cowfeeder.
Mr. Dunover, a poor elderly gentleman,		Jeanie Deans, his daughter.
Queen Caroline, Queen Consort of George II.		Mistress Rebecca, his second wife.
Lady Suffolk, her lady in waiting.		Euphemia or Effie Deans, their daughter.
The Duke of Argyle.		May Hettly, an old servant of Davie Deans.
The Duchess of Argyle.		Reuben Butler, a Church probationer.
The Lady Mary Campbell,	} their daughters.	Benjamin Butler, his father.
The Lady Caroline Campbell,		Stephen, or Bible Butler, his grandfather.
John Archibald, the Duke's attendant.		Widow Judith Butler, his grandmother.
Mrs. Dorothy Dutton, the dairymaid.		Euphemia or Femie Butler, } his child.
Captain Duncan of Knockdunder, the Duke's agent at Roseneath.		David Butler, } dren.
Donald, the Duke's gamekeeper at Roseneath.		Reuben Butler,
George Staunton, afterwards Sir George Staunton, first as George or Geordie Robertson, a felon; disguised as Madge Wildfire in the Porteous Mob; the seducer of Effie Deans.		Mr. Whackbairn, the schoolmaster at Libberton.
The Rev. Mr. Staunton, his father, Rector of Willingham.		The old Laird of Dumbledikes.
Stubbs, the beadle at Willingham.		Nichil Novit, his lawyer.
Thomas Ditton, the Rev. Mr. Staunton's footman.		Mrs. Balchristie, his housekeeper.
		The young Laird of Dumbledikes.
		Mr. Bartoline Saddletree, the learned saddler.
		Mrs. Saddletree, his wife.
		Grizie, their maidservant.
		Mr. Peter Plumdamas, the grocer.

Mrs Howden, the saleswoman.	Donacha dhu na Dunaigh, a highland robber, near Roseneath.
Miss Grizel Damahoy, the seamstress.	"The Whistler," the young thief, son of Staunton and Effie Deans.
Mr. Crossmyloof, the lawyer.	Mr. James Middleburgh, an Edinburgh magistrate.
Mrs. Glass, the tobacconist in London, Jeanie Deans's friend.	Mr. Fairscrieve, his clerk.
Mrs. Bickerton, landlady of "The Seven Stars" Inn, York.	Gideon Sharpitlaw, a police officer.
Dick, the hostler at ditto.	George Poinder, a city officer.
Gaffer Tramp, } peasants at the execution of Meg Murdockson.	Captain John Porteous, of the City Guard, hanged by the mob.
Dame Hluchup, }	Mrs. Porteous, his widow.
Saunders Broadfoot, a messenger.	The Judge, at the trial of Effie Deans.
Isaac Melklehose, one of the Elders at Roseneath.	Mr. Fairbrother, her counsel.
Andrew Wilson, the smuggler, who was hanged (Robertson's companion.)	The Doomster, or hangman, at the trial.
James Ratcliffe, a notorious thief.	Mr. John Kirk, foreman of the jury.
Old Meg Murdockson, a gipsy thief.	Archdeacon Fleming, to whom old Meg Murdockson confessed.
Madge Wildfire, her insane daughter.	City Officers, Soldiers, Smugglers, Highwaymen, Citizens, Villagers, Domestic, &c.
Annapie Bailzou, the nurse with Effie Deans in her confinement.
Frank Levitt,
Tom Lawrence, (or Tuck,) } two high-alias Tyburn Tom, }	waymen.

PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

VOLUME I.

The escape of Robertson, the condemned smuggler, from the Tolbooth Church, 50-1. Execution of Wilson, his comrade, 59. Captain Porteous of the City Guard is sentenced for execution, 62; but reprieved, 67. The disappointed mob, ib. Reuben Butler hears of Effie Deans being in prison, charged with child-murder, 82. He goes to see her, but is refused admittance, 90. He meets the rioters, who compel him to join them, 91. The mob attack the Tolbooth, 96; and fire the door, 105. They seize Captain Porteous in his prison room, 106; drag him out and hang him, 118. Death of the old Laird of Dumbiedikes, 136-7. Butler's early acquaintance with Jeanie Deans, 140. The young Laird of Dumbiedikes's gazing visits to her, 144. Effie Deans returns home late one night from a dance, 163-4. She leaves her home and enters into the service of Mrs. Saddletree, where she is seduced, 173. She returns home, is arrested on a charge of child-murder, and conveyed to prison, 176. Butler meets a stranger in the Park, who gives him a message to Jeanie, 181. He has an interview with her and her father, 190. He goes to see Effie in prison, and is arrested for having joined the rioters, 218. Ratcliffe the thief is examined before the magistrates, 223. Butler is examined and remanded to prison, 226. Jeanie goes out by moonlight to her appointment with the stranger, 240. Meets him at midnight at Muschat's Cairn, 248. He tells her to give false evidence to save her sister's life, and threatens to shoot her, 250. They are disturbed, 256. Examination of Madge Wildfire in the jail, 266. The officers go with her and Ratcliffe to surprise Jeanie and the stranger at Muschat's Cairn, 279; they both escape, 285-91. Madge Wildfire's mother comes before the magistrates to find her daughter, 298. Jeanie Deans cited as a witness at her sister's trial, 320. Her interview with Effie in prison, 328. The trial proceeds, 348. Jeanie is examined, 368. Old Davie Deans swoons in Court, 372. Effie is sentenced to death, 382. Jeanie visits her in prison, 396; and promises to go to London for her pardon from the King, 397. Ratcliffe gives a passport to his comrades on the road, 399.

222 HEART OF MID-LOTHIAN—PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

VOLUME II.

She goes to the Laird of Dumbiedikes for money for her journey, 7. His old housekeeper turns her away from the door, 11. He offers her marriage and shows his treasures, but she refuses him, 15-16. He rides after her and gives her his purse, 18. She goes to Reuben Butler, who is ill, and puts money in his Bible, 29. He gives her credentials to the Duke of Argyle, 34. She writes to her father and to Butler from York, 39-41. She is overtaken on Gunnerby Hill by Madge Wildfire and her mother, 53; and afterwards stopped by two highwaymen, to whom she shows Ratcliffe's passport, 55; and is taken to their haunt, 57. At night, feigning to be asleep, she overhears them talking, 72. Madge Wildfire takes her for a walk into the woods, 74. They enter a village church during service, 93. Madge is sent away by the beadle, 99; and Jeanie taken to the rector's house, 100, where she sees his son, George Staunton, an invalid, 115. He confesses himself her sister's seducer, 121. She leaves the rectory with a guide to Stamford, 142. She arrives in London, 149; has an interview with the Duke of Argyle in his study, 154; and delivers to him Butler's credentials, 158. He takes her in his carriage to the Queen's palace at Richmond, 169. She has an audience with the Queen in the garden, 179. The Queen gives her a present, and promises to intercede with the King for Effie's pardon, 190. The Duke goes to the house of Mrs. Glass, where Jeanie was lodged, and tells her that a pardon is transmitted to Edinburgh, 207. Jeanie takes leave of the Duke and his family, 215. On the road to Edinburgh with the Duke's servants, she sees the execution of Old Meg Murdockson, 220. Madge Wildfire recognises Jeanie in the carriage, and is ill-treated by the mob, 223. Jeanie goes to see her in the hospital, where Madge dies, 226. The travellers cross the firth of Clyde to the Duke's residence on Rose-neath Island, 243; where Jeanie meets her father, 247, and Reuben Butler, 255. She hears that Dumbiedikes is to be married, 258; and that Effie, after being liberated, had left her father's house, 277. Butler is ordained minister of Knocktarlitie, 285. Jeanie meets her sister with George Staunton, who had married her, 306. Jeanie is married to Reuben Butler, 312. She receives a letter with money from her sister, now Lady Staunton, 322. The Duke of Argyle visits them at the Manse, and speaks highly of a Lady Staunton in London, 331. The Duke dies, 336. Davie Deans dies, 337. Jeanie gives her husband the bank notes she had hoarded in her Bible, 340. She meets with the Confession of Old Meg Murdockson, that her sister's son was not killed, 345. She sends it to her sister, who visits her incognito, 350. Lady Staunton walks to the waterfall with Jeanie's son, and climbs the gipsy robber's cave, 360. Sir George Staunton meets Mr. Butler in Edinburgh, 373; and while inquiring about his son, is nearly recognised by Ratcliffe, 378. He travels towards Knocktarlitie with Mr. Butler, 380. They are waylaid by robbers near the Manse, 394. Sir George Staunton is shot by a gipsy boy called "The Whistler," who proves to be his own son, ib. The boy is imprisoned, and about to be hanged, 400; but escapes by means of Jeanie, 401. Lady Staunton retires to a convent on the Continent, 405.

THE BRIDE OF LAMMERMOOR.

CHARACTERS INTRODUCED.

Mr. Peter Pattison.	} who introduce the Story.	Luckie Lightbody, (or Marian Loup-
Dick Tinto, his friend, the painter,		the-Dyke,) her mother.
Allan, Lord of Ravenswood, a decayed Scottish nobleman.		Will Giles, the cooper's apprentice.
Edgar, the Master of Ravenswood, his son.		Mr. Peter Bide-the-Bent, the minister at Wolf's-Hope.
The Marquis of A——, a kinsman of Ravenswood.		Saunders Moonshine, a smuggler.
Caleb Balderstone, the old butler at Wolf's Crag Tower.		Old Alice Gray, a former tenant of the Ravenswoods.
Mysie, the old housekeeper at ditto.		Babie, her servant girl.
Eppie Sma'trash, the alewoman, at Wolf's-Hope village.		Annie Winnie, } two old sybils at Alice Ailsie Gourlay, } Gray's death.
Luckie Chrinside, the poulterer, at ditto.		Johnie Mortsheugh, the old sexton.
Davie Dingwall, the attorney, at ditto.		Sir William Ashton, the Lord Keeper of Scotland.
Gilbert, or Gibbie Girder, the cooper, at ditto.		Lady Eleanor Ashton, his wife.
Jean Girder, his wife.		Colonel Sholto Douglas Ashton, their eldest son.
		Lucy Ashton, their daughter.
		Henry Ashton, her younger brother.
		Norman, the forester.

224 BRIDE OF LAMMERMOOR—PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

Bob Wilson, the groom.	Lord Bittlebrains, } friends of Sir Wil-
Mrs. Patullo, Lady Ashton's waiting-woman.
Frank Hayston, the Laird of Bucklaw, afterwards the Laird of Girlington.	Old Lord Turntippet, one of the Privy Council.
Captain Craiggelt, his companion, an adventurer.	Villagers, Domestic. &c

PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

VOLUME I.

The funeral obsequies of the old Lord Ravenswood, at Wolf's Crag, interrupted by the Lord Keeper's bailiffs, 52. Lucy Ashton and her father go to see old Alice Gray in the forest, 71. She warns them of the Ravenswoods, 77. On returning home they are attacked by a wild bull, which Edgar Ravenswood shoots, 81-2. Ravenswood takes Lucy to the Mermaid's Fountain, 84; he refuses the acknowledgments of her father, 91; goes to the two adventurers at the ale-house, and refuses to go abroad with them to join the Chevalier's party, 107. The Laird of Bucklaw follows him out, and they fight, 111. On an alarm they ride off, 114, and go to the ruinous old tower of Wolf's Crag, 117. The old Butler's contrivances for supper, &c. 125. Ravenswood receives a letter from the Marquis of A——, 138. He joins the hunt with Bucklaw, 147. Sir William Ashton accosts Ravenswood after the hunt, 155; and with his daughter accompanies him during a storm to Wolf's Crag, 159. Old Caleb shuts the gate against Bucklaw and the huntsmen, 164; and pretends that his grand dinner is spoiled by a thunderbolt, 176. He is sent with Sir William Ashton's servant to the village for provisions, 185; and steals from the cooper's wife part of her hot christening supper, 199. Sir William Ashton proposes to Ravenswood conciliation of their family disputes, 218.

VOLUME II.

Captain Craiggelt brings Ravenswood a challenge from Bucklaw, and is turned out of the tower, 10. Ravenswood is reconciled to Sir William Ashton, 20. Caleb warns his master with an ancient prophecy not to go to Ravenswood Castle, 25. Ravenswood goes there with Sir William Ashton, 32. Young Ashton is afraid of him, 38. He and Lucy visit Old Alice Gray, 42, who warns him to quit the Ashton family, 44. He afterwards meets Lucy at the Mermaid's Fountain, where they plight their mutual troth and exchange love tokens, 52. Bucklaw sends Craiggelt to Lady Ashton about his intended marriage with Lucy, 78. The state arrivals of the Marquis of A—— and Lady Ashton at the castle, 85. Lady Ashton writes a billet to Ravenswood, which compels him to leave the castle, 98. He sees an apparition of old Alice at the Mermaiden's Fountain, 106; goes to the cottage and finds her dead, 107. He gives the old sexton orders for her funeral, 114. Is joined by the Marquis, 124. They proceed towards Wolf's Crag, but Caleb pretends that the tower is burnt down, 135. Ravenswood goes to see the ruins, and finds the tower unscathed, 144. A grand party sup at the cooper's house, 150. Ravenswood arrives in Edinburgh with the Marquis, 157. Sir William Ashton deprived of his office of Lord Keeper, 160. Ravenswood writes letters to the Ashtons, ib., and proceeds to the continent on state affairs, 165. Bucklaw's interview with Lucy Ashton before their marriage, 171. Lady Ashton employs the old witch Ailsie as Lucy's nurse during her illness, 189. Lucy sends a letter privately to Ravenswood, 196. She is compelled to sign the articles of marriage with Bucklaw, and Ravenswood appears suddenly at the castle, 208. His last interview with Lucy, when they give back their love tokens, 209. The wedding of Lucy Ashton and Bucklaw, 217. The old portrait in the ball-room mysteriously removed, 223. The bridegroom is found in the bridal chamber wounded, and the bride hidden in the chimney corner, insane, 224. She dies in convulsions, 226. Bucklaw recovers, and goes abroad, 227. Colonel Ashton sees Ravenswood at his sister's funeral, and appoints a hostile meeting, 232. Ravenswood, going to the appointment in the morning, is lost in the quicksands at Kelpie's-Flow, in accordance with an ancient prophecy, 238.

IVANHOE.

CHARACTERS INTRODUCED.

Cedric of Rotherwood, the Saxon. Sir Wilfred, Knight of Ivanhoe, his disinherited son, a favourite follower of King Richard I., first disguised as the Palmer at Rotherwood; afterwards as "Desdichado," or "The Disinherited Knight," at the Tournament. The Lady Rowena, a ward of Cedric.	Elgitha, her female attendant, Hundebert, the steward, Oswald, the cupbearer, Anwold, the torchbearer, Wamba, the jester, Gurth, the swineherd, Athelstane, thane of Coningsburgh, "The Unready," a kinsman of Cedric.	} at Rotherwood.
---	--	-------------------------

The Lady Edith, his mother.	Sir Maurice de Bracy, a follower of
The Prior Aymer, of Jorvaulx Abbey.	Prince John, (the leader of a free
Brother Ambrose, a monk attending	company.)
him.	Louis Winkelbrand, his lieutenant.
The Prior of St. Botolph.	De Bigot, Prince John's seneschal.
Father Diggory, one of the monks at	Sir Reginald Front de Beauf, a follower
St. Botolph's Priory.	of Prince John.
The Abbot Waltheof, at St. Withold's	Engelred, his squire.
Priory.	Giles, his jailer at Torquillstone Castle.
Isaac of York, the Jew.	Clement,
Rebecca, his daughter.	Eustace,
Nathan Ben Israel, (or Ben Samuel),	Saint Maur, } his attendants.
their friend, the physician.	Stephen.
Reuben, Seth, servants of the Jew at	Robin Hood, introduced as Locksley
Ashby.	the Archer.
Higg, "the Son of Smell," the lame	Dame Urfried, an old sybil at Torquill-witness at the trial of Rebecca.	stone Castle, or Ulrica, a daughter of
Father Dennes.	the late Thane of Torquillstone.
Richard Cœur de Lion, King of Eng-	Sir Philip de Malvoisin, } Knights, land; first as "the Black Knight"	Sir Hugh de Grantmesnil, } Challengers at the Tournament, called "Le Noir	Sir Ralph de Vipont, } at the Tour-Faineant," or "the Black Sluggard," and afterwards known as "the	William de Wyvil, } Stewards of the Knight of the Fetterlock."	Stephen de Martival, } Tournament.
The Earl of Essex, Lord High Con-	Hubert, an Archer, in Philip de Mal-stable of England.	voisin's service.
Prince John of Anjou, brother of King	Sir Lucas de Beaumanoir, Grand Mas-
Richard.	ter of the Knights Templars.
Lord Waldemar Fitzurse, a Baron fol-	Damian, his esquire.
lowing Prince John.	Sir Brian de Bois Guilbert, a Preceptor
The Lady Alicia, his daughter.	of the Knights Templars.
Friar Tuck, the Holy Clerk of Copman-	Baldwin de Oyley, his esquire.
hurst.	Hamlet and Abdalla, his slaves.
Stephen Wetheral, "Stephen Steel	Sir Conrade Mont-Fitchet, } Preceptors heart."	Sir Albert de Malvoisin, } of the Broad Thoresby,	Sir Herman of Goodalricke, } Knights
The Three Spears of Spying-
how,	Knights, Soldiers, Retainers, Archers,
Hugh Bardon, the Scout-	Priests, Villagers, Domestic, Slaves, master,	&c.

PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

VOLUME I.

Gurth, the swineherd, and Wamba, the fool, discovered together in Sherwood Forest, 40. Brian de Bois Guilbert and the Prior Aymer inquire of them their road to Rotherwood, 57. They meet with a pilgrim, Ivanhoe in disguise, who conducts them there, 63. Cedric the Saxon in the old hall, waiting supper, 66. Brian, the Prior, and their attendants, are introduced, 77. Isaac, the Jew, is also introduced, 88. At supper Brian offers to challenge Ivanhoe, then supposed abroad, 96. The Lady Rowena at night sends for the pilgrim to her apartment, 101; and inquires concerning Ivanhoe, 103. The pilgrim next morning privately leaves Rotherwood with the Jew, 112. On the road the Jew gives him means to procure a horse and armour for the Tournament, 117-18. The lists at Ashby prepared for the Tournament, 122. Prince John and his retinue enter the lists, 128. He commands Cedric's party to make room for the Jew in their gallery, 132. Wamba frightens the Jew down stairs with a piece of pork, 135. The Knights Challengers tilt with several parties of champions, 143. The Disinherited Knight challenges Brian, 147; vanquishes him, 150; and the other Knights Challengers one by one, 151. He receives from Prince John the prize, 156; selects Rowena as the Queen of Love and Beauty, to preside at next day's Tournament, 161; and refuses to accept of Brian's horse and armour, but receives ransom from the other knights, 168-9. He sends Gurth to pay the Jew for the horse and armour lent him, 171. Rebecca privately repays Gurth the money, 180. Gurth is waylaid on his return from the Jew's dwelling, 182. The robbers let him pass free, after wrestling with one of them, 189. The general Tournament on the second day, 193. The Black Knight rides up to the rescue of the Disinherited Knight who unhorsed Brian, 203. The Disinherited Knight, on receiving the chaplet of victory from the Lady Rowena, swoons from the effect of his wounds, and is discovered to be Ivanhoe, Cedric's son, 206. Prince John receives intelligence from France of King Richard's return to England, 211. Locksley's feats of archery, 214. Prince John holds a sumptuous banquet at Ashley Castle, at which Cedric and Athelstane are present, 221. De Bracy tells Fitzurse of his plan for carrying off the Lady Rowena, 238. The Black Knight, having lost his way in the forest, arrives at the Chapel of Copmanhurst, Friar Tuck's cell, 245. The Friar gives him venison and wine, 258. They sing and carouse together, 259-65. Cedric has Gurth fettered for desertion, 269. Cedric's party proceed on their way home through the forest, ib. They overtake the Jew and his daughter, with Ivanhoe wounded in a litter, abandoned in the forest by their guides, 279. They all proceed together. Gurth escapes, 282. The party are attacked and all made prisoners, except Wamba, who escapes, 283. He and Gurth meet Locksley in the forest, and tell him what has happened, 285. Locksley summons his foresters, 286; goes to Friar Tuck's cell, and finds him and the Black Knight carousing, 289-90. The Black Knight promises them assistance for the rescue of Cedric's party, 296. Cedric and his party are hurried forward prisoners to Front de Bœuf's Castle, 301. Cedric and Athelstane are confined by themselves in the guard-room, 303. Athelstane's impatience for his dinner, 306. They are startled by the sound of a bugle outside the castle, 310. The Jew is imprisoned in the dungeon, 312; Front de Bœuf comes to extort money from him, 313; and orders two slaves to chain him to the bars of a slow fire, 316. They are disturbed by the bugle's sound, 328. The Lady Rowena is detained alone in the state apartment, 329. De Bracy sues her to become his bride, 331; and threatens to kill Cedric and Ivanhoe if she refuses, 335. He is interrupted by the bugle's sound, 337.

VOLUME II.

Rebecca is taken to the turret chamber, and left with the old sybil there, 5. Brian de Bois Guilbert comes and offers her insult, 13. She spurns him, and rushing to the verge of the battlements, threatens to throw herself over if he touches her, 14. He changes his purpose, and offers her an honourable alliance, 16. Is disturbed by the sound of the bugle, 19. The knights assemble and read the challenge sent them from without the castle, 22. They return a message of defiance, and in irony recommend the besiegers sending a priest to confess the prisoners before death, 27. The Black Knight sends Wamba to the castle, disguised as a priest, 31. Wamba admitted, he and Cedric exchange dresses, 33. Cedric thus leaving the castle, is met by the old sybil, who tells him her history, 42; and promises to fire the castle on giving the besiegers her signal, 49. Front de Bœuf intrusts him with a letter to some Crusaders, to come to his rescue, 51. Dismisses him by the postern door, 53; and too late discovers the imposture, 55. Father Ambrose comes for assistance of Prior Aymer, made prisoner in the forest, 59. Preparations for defence of the castle, 63. Ivanhoe tended in the Jew's house at York by Rebecca, 70; and afterwards at Torquilstone castle, 84. She watches from a lattice window, and reports to him the progress of the conflict, 87-8. The besiegers win the barriers, and the Black Knight wounds Front de Bœuf, who is dragged back insensible into the castle, 93. The Sybil mocks him on his death-bed, 107. Upbraids him with his father's murder, 108. Tells him she has set fire to the castle, and locks him in his chamber, raving and blaspheming, 111. She gives the signal of fire from the turret, and the besiegers renew the attack, 118. De Bracy made prisoner by the Black Knight, 121. The besiegers enter the castle, now in flames, and Brian seizes Rebecca, carries her away, and the Black Knight carries Ivanhoe out of the castle, 123. The Templar on horseback with Rebecca, attacked by Athelstane, strikes him down, and escapes, 127. The Sybil appears on the castle turret amid the flames, 130. The castle in conflagration, 131. The victors meet in the forest to divide the spoil, 132. Cedric gives Gurth his freedom, 135. The funeral procession of Athelstane, 140. The Black Knight liberates De Bracy with a caution, 141. Locksley presents the Black Knight with his bugle, and teaches him to wind certain notes, 142. Friar Tuck joins them with the Jew, whom he had rescued from the dungeon, while searching the castle cellars for wine, 144. The Black Knight and Friar Tuck have a friendly buffet, 149. The Prior Aymer brought forward in custody, 150. They make the Jew name the Prior's ransom, and the Prior the Jew's, 154. The Prior bribed to give the Jew a letter to the Templar to restore Rebecca, 162. Prince John at York hears of Front de Bœuf's overthrow, 170. De Bracy arrives, tells him of his death, of the burning of his castle, and that King Richard had been among them, 178. Prince John upbraids his followers with falling off, 175. Fitzurse undertakes to waylay the King, 178. The Jew proceeds to Templestowe, 182; delivers the Prior's letter to the Grand Master in the garden, 195; and is turned out of the garden, 198-9. The Grand Master commands that Rebecca be tried for sorcery, 204. The Preceptor bribed to suborn false witnesses against her, 209. On entering the hall of judgment a scroll is slipped privately into her hand, 210. The trial proceeds, 214. She appeals to De Bois Guilbert, who whispers to her to read the scroll, 228. She demands a trial by combat, and to appear by her champion, 229. The challenge allowed, 231. De Bois Guilbert appointed champion against her, 232. The third day after the trial, fixed for the combat, 233. She writes her father to seek Ivanhoe, 239. De Bois Guilbert visits her in prison, admitted on conclusion of her devotional exercises, 248; and promises not to appear against her in the lists if she will accept him as her lover, 250. She refuses, 253. The Black Knight and Wamba leave Ivanhoe at St. Botolph's Abbey, and attend Athelstane's funeral, 260. Ivanhoe and Gurth follow the Black Knight into the forest, 265; where he is attacked by a party led by Fitzurse, 274. The Black Knight is unhorsed and surrounded, 275. Wamba sounds the three notes on the forester's bugle, ib., and unseats Fitzurse by hamstringing his horse, 276. The Black Knight rescued by Locksley and his band of archers, ib. He liberates Fitzurse, on condition of his leaving England, 278. Declares himself King Richard, ib., and pardons Locksley and the other outlaws, 279. Locksley declares himself Robin Hood, ib. Ivanhoe and Gurth join the party, 284. The King dines with Robin Hood and his men under the trysting tree, 288. The King and Ivanhoe enter the castle-yard of Coningsburgh, 299; and are introduced to the mourners at the castle, 302. The King declares himself to Cedric, 308; and requests of him to forgive and receive back Ivanhoe, his son, 309. Cedric and Ivanhoe are reconciled, ib. Athelstane appears in his grave-clothes, and tells of his having been secretly imprisoned and half-starved by the monks, after his recovery at Torquilstone Castle, 310. The King and Ivanhoe one by one suddenly leave the castle, on some intelligence from the Jew, 317. The lists of St. George prepared for the combat, 319. The Grand Master and his suite take their seats, 326. The heralds' trumpets sound thrice, and no champion appears for Rebecca, 327-8. De Bois Guilbert whispers her to mount on horseback behind him and escape, 329. She spurns his offer, 330. Ivanhoe, nearly exhausted, rides into the lists as her champion, 331; he and De Bois Guilbert charge; they both fall; Ivanhoe stands over him, and commands him to yield; De Bois Guilbert is unhelmeted, and found dead, but unwounded, 334. Rebecca is declared free, 335. The King, accompanied by the Earl of Essex and a numerous train, enters the lists, ib. Sir Albert de Malvoisin arrested for high treason, 336. The Grand Master defies the King's authority, but the King shows him the banner of England floating over the Preceptory, ib. The Grand Master and his followers then retreat from it, 338. Ivanhoe and the Lady Rowena are married at York Minster, 344. Rebecca pays the Lady Rowena a visit of gratitude, 345. Rebecca and her father leave England for a foreign land, 349.

THE MONASTERY.

CHARACTERS INTRODUCED.

Elsbeth Brydone, or Glendinning, widow of Simon Glendinning, of the Tower of Glendearg.	Hob, or Happer, the Miller.
Halbert Glendinning,	Mysie Happer, his daughter.
Edward Glendinning,	John Broxmouth, their neighbour.
} her sons.	Landlord of the Gled's Nest, near Edinburgh.
Dan of the Howlet-hirst,	The Pedlar, at a village near Edinburgh.
The Laird of Colmslie,	The Abbot Ingelram, formerly Superior of St. Mary's Convent.
} their neighbours.	The Abbot Boniface, his successor.
Adle of Alkenschaw,	Father Eustace, the Sub-Prior, afterwards Abbot, formerly William Alan.
The Lady Alice, widow of Walter, Knight of Avenel.	Father Philip, Sacristan of St. Mary's.
Mary Avenel, her daughter.	Brother Nicolas, a monk
The White Lady of Avenel, a Spirit.	Brother Bennet, a lay-brother,
Julian Avenel, the usurper of Avenel Castle.	Brother Hilarius, the Refectioner,
Catherine of Newport, his lady.	} at St. Mary's.
Christie of the Clinthill,	The Kitchener,
Jenkin,	The Bailie,
Bowley,	Old Tallboy, the forester,
Hutcheon,	The Earl of Murray, Regent of Scotland.
Louis,	The Earl of Morton, a member of the Privy Council.
Robin of Redcastle,	Sir John Foster, the English warden.
Old Martin, a shepherd.
Tibb Tacket, his wife.
Old Jasper, a ploughman at Glendearg Tower.
Peter, the warden of the bridge near the convent.

Sir George Heron of Chipchace (with him). Stawarth Bolton, an English captain. Sergeant Britton (with him). Sir Pierce Shafton, a fashionable Cavalero. The Knight of Wilverton, a	grandson of old Overstitch of Hoderness, a tailor. Henry Warden, the Protestant preacher; alias Henry Wellwood. Monks, Soldiers, Villagers, Domestics.
--	--

PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

VOLUME I.

Description of the Tower of Glendearg, 79. Arrival of a party of soldiers under Stawarth Bolton on a foraging expedition, 85. The Captain promises protection of Widow Glendinning and her family, 86. The Lady Alice, widow of Avenel, has refuge in an old shepherd's cottage, 98. They set out to Widow Glendinning for protection, 95. On their way little Mary Avenel sees a White Lady beckoning them forward, 100. Julian usurps the possessions of Avenel, 108. Mary Avenel alarms the family one evening by saying she had seen her father in the court-yard, 109. The Lady Alice sends to St. Mary's Convent for a priest, 117. After confession, Father Philip obtains from Widow Glendinning the Lady Alice's Bible, which he carries away, 121. The bridgewardens refuses him passage, 129. In fording the river he sees a female, who springs on the saddle behind him, and the mule swims down the stream with them, the female singing, 129. She takes the Bible from him, immerses him in the water, and allows him to get ashore, 133. The Abbot consults with the Sub-Prior on the political affairs of the abbey, 139. The miller brings in Father Philip drenched, 144. The Abbot questions him, and sends the Sub-Prior to the Tower of Glendearg, 149; where he learns that the Bible had been mysteriously restored by a White Lady, 156; and finds the Lady Alice dead, 161. Christie, one of Julian Avenel's retainers, comes to the tower and is rude to the Sub-Prior, 168. The Sub-Prior obtains possession of the Bible, and gives little Edward his missal, 173-4. He sets out for the convent, and is overtaken by Christie, 176. Is stopped by a female voice, warning him to turn back, 177; is gently pushed off his mule, 180; and afterwards he misses the Bible, 182. Christie is made prisoner, and confesses having, as he thought, unhorsed and murdered the Sub-Prior, 185; who gets him liberated, 189. The two young Glendinnings jealous of each other for Mary Avenel, 204. Halbert at the glen of Corri-nan-shian invokes the White Spirit, 209; she appears, carries him down through the earth into a crystal grotto, 215; and shows him the Bible on a flaming altar, from which he takes it, 216. They ascend into upper air, and she disappears, 218. The miller and his daughter on a visit to the Tower, 221. Christie and a stranger, Sir Piercie Shafton, arrive, 238. Halbert arrives late to dinner, and rebukes the knight for his supercilious behaviour, 250. At night conceals the Bible under the floor, 254. Sir Piercie tells him of having come there under the Abbot's protection, 258. They quarrel, 262. The Abbot and retinue arrive, 270. Sir Piercie informs the Abbot of the circumstances, and of his wish to remain secreted, 277-285. Halbert goes to the hill for venison, and shoots a deer, 291; to the glen, and invokes the White Spirit, 296; asks her for the means of revenge on Sir Piercie, 302. She gives him a silver bodkin, to exhibit to the knight when he is insolent, and disappears, 35. The Abbot at dinner promises to appoint Halbert his ranger, 810.

VOLUME II.

Halbert, being called in, declines the office, 10-11. Sir Piercie insults him, but at sight of the silver bodkin rushes out in a rage, 18; follows Halbert to the hill, and challenges him to fight next morning, 21. The White Lady appears to him in the night and mocks him, 30. Leaving the Tower at daybreak, Mary Avenel tries ineffectually to detain him, 37. Sir Piercie and he arrive at the place appointed, and find a newly opened grave, 42. They fight, and Halbert wounds Sir Piercie, 48. He sees Henry Warden at a distance, and runs to him for assistance, 53. Returns with Warden and finds the body gone, and the grave filled up, 55-6; and agrees to escape with Warden to Avenel Castle, 59. They arrive there, and are introduced to the Baron and his lady, 74. The Baron offers to take Halbert into his service, which he declines, 81. Warden delivers a letter to the Baron, receives his promise of protection, 84; and reproaches him for not marrying his lady, 88. The Baron thrusts her from him, and she falls on the stone floor bleeding, 91. Warden persists in his remonstrance, and is dragged off to the dungeon, 93. Halbert at night escapes by the window, gets a letter from Warden to the Regent Murray, and swims across the lake, 101. The inmates of Glendearg are in-expectation of Sir Piercie and Halbert's return from hunting. Sir Piercie returns, 108. Confusion of the family. Sir Piercie accused of murdering Halbert; Edward threatens revenge, 111. The Sub-Prior examines Sir Piercie in regard to the circumstances of the duel, but disbelieves him, and orders Edward to detain him prisoner, 112. Mysie Happer lets him out of the room at night, 144; and at daybreak they escape together on horseback, 151. She dismounts near her father's house, weeps, and mounts again behind the Knight, 154. They proceed towards Edinburgh, Mysie now disguised as a page, 170. The White Lady appears to Mary Avenel, and shows where the Bible is concealed, 175. Edward Glendinning and his party find that Mysie, pre-vions to the escape, had locked them in the Tower, 177. While forcing the doors Christie rides up with Warden, prisoner, and tells them that Halbert is alive, 180. Warden brought in bound before the Sub-Prior for examination; they recognize each other as former intimate friends, 189. Edward returns from searching for the supposed grave, and Warden confirms the account of Halbert being alive, 198. Edward confesses to the Sub-Prior his sorrow at finding his brother alive, on account of their love of Mary Avenel, 202. He determines to enter on holy orders, 205. The Sub-Prior leaves Warden at the tower on parole, 214, and returns to the convent with Edward, 218. The Abbot Boniface informs them of the danger of the Church from the government, 225. Resigns the Abbacy, and names the Sub-Prior as his successor, 238. The Abbot elect sends for Julian Avenel and Sir Piercie Shafton, 238. Halbert proceeds to Edinburgh, guided by a pedlar, 241. They fall in with the Regent Murray's troop, 245. Halbert gives the Regent Henry Warden's letter, 249; and tells him of Julian's brutal treatment of his lady, his imprisonment of Henry Warden, 250; and of his own duel with Sir Piercie Shafton, 252. The Regent retains him in his service, and he renounces the Roman Catholic faith, 258. Intelligence brought that troops under the English Warden are about to attack the Monastery, 254. The Regent sends Halbert to warn both parties, 256. He finds the battle commenced, 259. The English become the victors, 260. He sees Julian dead on the field, and his lady with her infant in her arms watching over him, 261. Soldiers come up—the mother dies, and Halbert snatches up her infant, 266-7. The Regent and English Warden hold a conference about the Warden's prisoner, Sir Piercie, 268. The prisoner produced is found to be Mysie Happer, disguised as Sir Piercie, 269. Henry Warden in an interview with the new Abbot informs him of Mary Avenel's conversion, 280. The Regent's troops approach the convent, 281. The Abbot and Monks go in procession to meet them, 283; and form round the cross in the market-place, 285. The Regent and Earl of Morton quarrel, but finally agree about giving Mary Avenel in marriage to Halbert, 287. The Abbot refuses to surrender Sir Piercie Shafton, 295; who surrenders himself, and is proved the grandson of a tailor, 296. The Regent and Abbot arrange amicably, 300. Sir Piercie is married to Mysie Happer, ib., and Halbert to Mary Avenel, 301. Edward sees the White Spirit for the last time, 302.

THE ABBOT.

CHARACTERS INTRODUCED.

Mary, Queen of Scotland.		The Earl of Morton, a member of the Privy Council.
Lady Mary Fleming,	} maids of honour	Master Hyndman, usher to the Privy Council at Holyrood.
Catherine Seyton, in disguise at Kinross,		to the Queen.	Michael Wing-the-Wind, a servant there.
The Lady of Lochleven, the mother of the Regent Murray.		Burgbers, &c. at the hostelry of St Michael's.
George Douglas, her grandson, and nephew of the Regent.		The Lady Mary of Avenel.
Jasper Dryfesdale, the old steward,	} at Lochleven	Sir Halbert Glendinning, her husband, the Knight of Avenel.
Elias Henderson, the chaplain,		Castle.	Roland Græme, page to the Lady Avenel, and to Queen Mary, the heir of Avenel.
Randal, the boatman,	} at Kiarross.	Magdalen Græme, or the Dame of Heathergill, his grandmother, as Mother Nicneven, the old witch at Kinross.
Hildebrand, a sentinel,			Henry Warden, the Protestant chaplain,
Doctor Luke Lundin, Lady Lockheven's chamberlain at Kinross.		Master Jasper Wingate, the steward,
Hob Anster, a constable,	} at Kiarross.	Mistress Lillias Bradbourne, the lady's maid,	} at Avenel
John Auchtermuchty, the carrier.
Old Keltie, the innkeeper,	} friends of the	Ralph Fisher, assistant to Roland Græme,	} Castle.
Players, Villagers,
Lord Seyton, father of Catherine Seyton,	} friends of the	Peter Bridgeward, the bridge warden, near Kennaquhair.
Henry Seyton, his son,			Dan of the Howlet-hirst, as the Dragon in the revels.
Lord Arbroath, nobles and officers at Niddry Castle,	} friends of the	Monks, &c. at the Abbey.
Lord Herries, attending the Queen at Dundrennan,			Father Howleglas, the Abbot of Unreason,
The Prior, at Dundrennan Abbey.		The Hobby Horse,
The Sheriff of Cumberland, and the English Warden.		The Dragon, and others,
Father Boniface, Ex-Abbot of Kennaquhair, as Blinkhoolie, the old gardener at Kinross, and at Dundrennan.		Monks, Officers, Soldiers, Villagers, Revellers, Domestics, &c.
The Abbess of St. Catherine, (called Mother Bridget,) aunt of Catherine Seyton.
The Earl of Murray, Regent of Scotland.
Lord Lindesay,	} the Embassy from
Lord Ruthven,		the Privy Council
Sir Robert Melville,	to the Queen.

PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

VOLUME I.

Young Roland Græme saved from drowning near Avenel Castle, 25.
Arrival of the Knight of Avenel at the castle, 45. Roland retained as a page to the Lady Avenel, 57. Quarrel between him and the falconer, 64. Reproved by Henry Warden from the pulpit, 76. He leaves the castle in disgrace, 90, and goes to the ruinous cell of St. Cuthbert, 111, where he meets Magdalen Græme, his grandmother, 117. They go to St. Catherine's Convent, 136, where he is introduced to Catherine Seyton, 143. They go to St. Mary's Abbey, which they find in ruins, 174, and witness the installation of the new Abbot there, 180. The revellers, with masques, &c. force their way into the abbey, 185, and are dispersed by Sir Halbert Glendinning, 210, who retains Roland in his train, 215. Roland and the falconer arrive in Edinburgh, 233. Roland takes part in a street encounter between the Seytons and the Leslies, 245. Follows Catherine Seyton into the house of her father, from whom he receives a gold chain, 249. Goes to Holyrood Palace, 260, where he has an interview with the Regent Murray, 272. Sees Catherine (or her brother) at the hostelry, disguised as a page, 293. Has another interview with the Regent, 310, and leaves Holyrood with the Embassy from the Council to Queen Mary, 315. The party arrive at Lochleven Castle, 325.

VOLUME II.

Roland Græme introduced to the Queen, 7. Interview between the Queen and the Embassy, when they compel her to sign the deed of Abdication, 19. Roland is sent by Lady Lochleven with a message to Kinross, 92-3. Dances with Catherine Seyton in disguise on the village green, 117. Follows her to a cottage, where he meets Magdalen Græme disguised as Mother Nicneven, an old witch, 124, and sees Father Ambrose disguised at the gardener's cottage, 131. The first plan for the Queen's escape frustrated, 159. George Douglas escapes from the castle in disgrace, 163. The steward's attempt to poison the Queen discovered, 188. Mother Nicneven and the physician called into the castle, 202. The old steward leaves the castle, and is killed by Henry Seyton in an ale-house, 221. Roland forges a bunch of keys, 244. The Queen corresponds with her friends across the lake by signal, 246. Roland contrives to exchange the keys, 253. The Queen and her party escape from the castle at night, 256, and arrive at Lord Seyton's, 268. Magdalen Græme appears there, and declares Roland the heir of Avenel, 276. Lord Seyton's troops meet the Regent's army drawn up, the Queen and her attendants overlooking the battle of Langside, 286. Henry Seyton is killed, 298. George Douglas is wounded and dies, and the Queen's party compelled to retreat, 301-2. The Queen and attendants arrive at Dundrennan Abbey, 307. She sails for England under protection of the English Warden, 312. The heir of Avenel is afterwards married to Catherine Seyton, 318.

KENILWORTH.

CHARACTERS INTRODUCED.

Queen Elizabeth.		Carrol, the deputy usher,
Lord Hunston,		Lawrence Staples, the
Lord Baringh, the Lord		head jailer,	at
Treasurer,		Sibyl Laneham, one of the	Kenilworth
Lord Walsingham,		revellers.	Castle.
Lord Willoughby,		The Gigantic Rorter,
Lord Shrewsbury, Earl		The Lady of the Lake and
Marshal,		Nymphs.
The Earl of Huntingdon,		Arion, Tritons, and Ne-
The Earl of Oxford,		reids.
The Bishop of Lincoln,		Ancient Britons and Dru-
The Dean of St. Asaph's,	of Queen	ids,
The Duchess of Rutland,	Elizabeth's	Romans and Standard	masquers
The Lady Paget, a lady of	Court.	Bearers,	in the the bed chamber,		Saxons and Scalds,	revels at
Doct. Masters, the Queen's		Normans and Minstrels,	Kenilworth
physician.		Merlin, &c.	Castle.
Master Bowyer, usher of		Dance and English.
the black rod,		Masques on hobby horses
Sir Henry Lee, a gentle-		in the mock-fight, man in waiting,		Captain Coxe, one of the Master Robert Laneham,		masquers.
clerk of the council		Zacharias Yoglan, the old Jew chemchamber door,		ist.
The Earl of Leicester.		Alasco alias Doctor Demetrius Doboo-
Richard Varney, his master of the		bie, an old astrologer.
horse.		Orson Pinnit, keeper of the bears.
Michael or Mike Lambourne, in his		Shakespeare, Spenser, and others in the service.		ante-rooms of Greenwich Palace.
Robin Tider, one of the Earl's ser-		The Earl of Sussex, rival of the Earl vants.		of Leicester at Court.
Anthony, or Tony Foster (called Tony-		Nicholas Blount, his master of the Fire-the-Faggot), the Earl's agent at		horse; knighted.
Cumnor Place.		Walter Raleigh, in the Earl of Sussex's
Janet Foster, his daughter.		train; knighted.
Dorcas, } domestics at Cumnor Place.		Tracy,
Alison, } domestics at Cumnor Place.		Markham, } gentlemen in the Earl of
Amy Robsart, the Countess of Leices-		Stanley, } Sussex's train.
ter, formerly betrothed to Edmund		The Secretary,
Tressilian.		The Chamberlain, } at Say's Court.
Sir Hugh Robsart, her father.		Stevens, a messenger,
Master Mumbalsen, the herald, a de-		Giles Gosling, landlord of the Black pendant on Sir Hugh.		Bear Inn near Cumnor Place.
The Old Curate, a friend of Sir Hugh.		Cicely Gosling, his daughter.
Will Badger, Sir Hugh's favourite do-		Lawrence Goldthred, the mercer.
mestic.		The Parish Clerk, and others.
Edmund Tressilian, the betrothed of		Lancelot Wayland, or Wayland Smith,
Amy Robsart.		the farrier, Vale of Whitehorse; dis-
Sir Thomas Copley, with the Earl of		guised as the pedlar at Cumnor
Leicester at Woodstock.		Place.
The Balliff, and Inhabitants of Wood-		Erasmus Holliday, schoolmaster in the stock.		Vale of Whitehorse.

Gammer Sludge, his landlady.	Gaffer Grimesby, a farmer there.
Dickie Sludge, or Flibbertigibbet, her dwarf grandson.	Name Crank, the Papist laundress there.
Dame Alison Crane, mistress of the Crane Inn at Marlboro'.	Courriers, Ladies, Nobles, Guards, Townspeople, Players, Domestic, &c.
Gaffer Crane, her spouse.

PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

VOLUME I.

Michael Lambourne is recognised by his uncle at the Black Bear Inn near Cumnor Place, 22. Tressilian goes with him next day to Cumnor Place, 47; and there has an interview with Amy Robsart, 66. They are interrupted by Anthony Foster, 70. Tressilian meets Varney at the postern gate, 72; when they fight, 73. Varney brings Amy Robsart presents from the Earl of Leicester, 77. Description of the four state apartments fitted up for the Earl, 91; who arrives, 107; and next morning departs for Woodstock, 125. Varney retains Lambourne in the Earl's service, 130. Tressilian explains his circumstances to the landlord of the Black Bear, 142; and leaves his house by night, 154. The schoolmaster's boy, Flibbertigibbet, conducts him to the subterranean forge on the common, 176. His horse shod, Tressilian follows Wayland Smith into his vault, 179. Wayland's narrative, 183. Tressilian retains him in his service, 187. Explosion of the vault by gunpowder, 190. They arrive at Sir Hugh Robsart's seat, 199. Tressilian's interview with Sir Hugh, 203; who empowers him to endeavour at Court to recover his daughter, 214. He receives a letter from the Earl of Sussex, who is ill, desiring to see him, 217. He and Wayland arrive in London, and go to the old Jew chemist in quest of a rare drug, 223. They proceed to the Earl at Say's Court, 232; when Wayland administers the drug, 239. While the Earl sleeps, Walter Raleigh refuses to admit the Queen's physician, 243. The Earl recovers, and sends Raleigh to the Queen with an explanation, 245. Raleigh meets the Queen coming out, and throws his cloak on the ground for her passage, 249. The Queen sends for him into her barge, 250; and gives him a present, 256. She visits the Earl of Sussex, 259. The Earl sends to the Queen Tressilian's petition regarding Amy Robsart, 265. The rival Earls of Sussex and Leicester arrive at Court, 268. The Usher of the Black Rod complains to the Queen of Leicester, 271; who commands the two Earls to be reconciled, 272. She questions Varney about Amy Robsart, and he says she is his wife, 278. The Queen requires her appearance at the Kenilworth festival, 287. The Queen in her barge on the water, 298. She completes a couplet commenced by Raleigh on a window pane, 310. Wayland Smith tells Tressilian he has seen Alasco, 313; and goes to Cumnor Place, 315. Leicester consults Alasco, 321; who is sent with Lambourne to Cumnor Place, 326.

VOLUME II.

Wayland Smith goes there disguised as a pedlar, 5; and gives the Countess Amy an antidote to poison, 20. Lambourne arrives intoxicated, 24. Leicester by letter begs Amy to bear the name of Varney a few days, 37. Varney delivers the message, and she spurns him from her presence, 46. He sends her by Foster a poisoned cup, 53; which Janet discovers, ib. Varney compels her to drink it, 60. (She had previously taken an antidote.) She escapes at night with Janet, 63; and are met at the postern gate by Wayland Smith, who, with the Countess on horseback, set out towards Kenilworth Castle, 72. On the way they take a led horse from a farmer's boy, 76; and are followed by Goldthred the mercer, its owner, 78. Arrive at Donnington and restore the horse, 81. They are pursued by Varney, 83; and escape by joining the reveller's party, 89. Description of Kenilworth Castle, 102. Flibbertigibbet prevails on the giant porter to admit them, 112. Amy is shown to an apartment in the tower, from which she writes to the Earl by Wayland, 116. Tressilian coming to his apartment finds it occupied by Amy, 125; who makes him promise not to interfere on her behalf for twenty-four hours, 129. Wayland loses her letter, 136; and is turned out of the Castle by Lambourne, 140. The Queen's procession by torch-light, 151. The water pageant, &c. 158-9. She inquires why Amy is absent, and Varney produces certificates of her illness, 167; which Tressilian declares untrue, 168; and is dismissed from the presence, 172. Varney, Raleigh, and Blount are knighted, 176-80. The Earl consults with Varney, who insinuates the propriety of murdering Amy, 187. Lambert goes in to her apartment in the morning and insults her, 199-200. The jailer comes to her assistance, he and Lambourne fight, and Amy escapes into the Pleasance, 200. The Queen discovers her in the grotto, 211. She declares she is not the wife of Varney, 214. The Queen drags her before Leicester and the Court, 215; and orders Leicester into custody for high treason, 217. Amy is entrusted to Lord Hunsdon's charge, 220. Varney protests that she is his wife, and insane, 222. The Earl visits her, 226. She refuses ever to pass as Varney's wife, 231. Varney makes him suspect her fidelity, 240. The Earl opens the casket sent by her, and in a paroxysm of rage stamps the jewels to pieces, 247. Varney again counsels him to put her to death, 256. He consents, and gives his signet ring as authority, 257. The Queen's physician reports her insane, and her removal from the castle is permitted, 260. The masque of Druids in the Hall, 261. Tressilian and Leicester appoint a hostile meeting, 267. Leicester sends Lambourne after Varney with a letter of countermand, 272. Leicester and Tressilian fight, but are interrupted, 279-80. A mock fight between the English and Danes, 284. The Earl and Tressilian meet again in the forest and fight, 290. The Earl is kept from killing Tressilian, by Flibbertigibbet, 291; who gives him Amy's letter entrusted to Wayland, 292. The Earl, satisfied of her innocence, begs pardon of Tressilian, and declares Amy his countess, 294. Scene in the Queen's audience-chamber, when Leicester avows his marriage, 300. He is in disgrace at Court, 307. Lambourne, pursuing with the Earl's countermand, is shot dead by Varney, 320. Amy is brought to Cumnor Place, 322. Death of Alasco by suffocation, 326. Varney loosens a trap-door, gives signal as of the Earl of Leicester's arrival, and Amy, rushing from her room to meet him, is precipitated through the trap into an abyss and killed, 328. Varney made prisoner, poisons himself, 330; and Anthony Foster amissing, is years after found spring-locked in the vault, dead upon his treasure-box, 331.

THE PIRATE.

CHARACTERS INTRODUCED.

Magnus Troll, the Udaller of Zetland.	Mistress Baby, or Barbara Yellowley, his sister.
Minna Troll, } his daughters.	Tronda Dronddaughter, their serving woman.
Brenda Troll, }	The Lady Glenproeing, a neighbour of old Jasper Yellowley.
Norna of the Fitful Head, "the Reimkennar," and mother of Cleveland the pirate.	Basil Mertoun, alias Vaughan, formerly a pirate.
Erland, her father.	Mordaunt Mertoun, his son, in love with Brenda Troll.
Olave, his brother, the grandsire of Minna and Brenda.	Swertha, Mertaun's housekeeper.
Pacolet, or Niek Strumpfer, Norna's dwarf servant.	Bryce Snallsfoot, the jagger, or peilar.
Claud Halcro, the Udaller's bard.	Pate Paterson, his serving boy.
Ghes, Claud Halcro's serving boy.	Niel Ronaldson, the old Ranselman at Jarishof.
Eric Scambister, the Udaller's butler.	Marjory Bimbister, his spouse.
Euphane Fea, the old housekeeper at Burgh-Westra.	Sweyn Erickson, a fisherman at Jarishof.
Laurence Scholey, a servant there.	Captain Clement Cleveland, alias Vaughan the Pirate, natural son of the elder Vaughan and Ulla Troll.
The Lady Glowrowrum, } guests at Maddie Groatsettar, } her } Burgh-
Clara Groatsettar, } nieces. } Westra.
Triptolemus Yellowley, the factor, an experimental agriculturist.
Jasper Yellowley, his father.

Captain Goffe, Hawkins, the boatswain, Tom Derrick, the quarter- master, Dick Fletcher, one of the crew, Jack Bunce, alias Frederick Altamont, a ci-devant player,	} of the pirate vessel.	Captain Weatherport, a naval officer. Mr. George Torfe, the provost of Ork- ney. Magistrates with him. Soldiers, Fishermen, Pirates, Domes- tics, &c.
---	-------------------------------	--

PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

VOLUME I.

Description of the old mansion of Jarlshof at Sumburgh Head, 16-17. Mordaunt Mertoun, 83. Visits Magnus Troil and his daughters, 48. Departure from Magnus Troil's house at Burgh-Westra, in a storm, 56. Arrives at Harfra, the residence of the agriculturist, 58; and compels the giving him food, 80. Norna of the Fitful Head arrives, 90; and allays the storm, 99. A shipwreck at Sumburgh Head, 121. A stranger cast on the beach is saved by Mordaunt, 123. Their interview at the old Ranzelman's cottage, 141. Mordaunt met by Norna at the Green Loch, 163. His journey to Burgh-Westra with the Yellowleys, 180. Arrival there, 189. Cold reception of him by Minna and Brenda, 197. The feast, 211. The sword dance, 244. Masque of mermaids, 254. Mordaunt's interview with Brenda at night by the lake, 258. A whale attack, 272. Mordaunt saved from drowning by Cleveland, 281. The pedlar arrives with news of a ship's arrival, 287. Norna appears to Minna and Brenda in their bedroom, 308; and tells them her history, 312.

VOLUME II.

Her fortune-telling and sudden disappearance, 9-19. Departure of the fishermen for the season, 24. Cleveland's avowal to Minna on the beach, 34; and serenade under her window, 49. Quarrels with Mordaunt there, 53. She hears and pursues them. ib. Ruins of St. Ninian's church near Jarlshof, 78. The elder Mertoun discovers Norna at the tomb there, 82. Journey of Magnus Troil and his daughters to the Fitful Head, 94. Norna's dwelling in the old tower there, 104. She forms a spell to cure Minna, 120; and succeeds, 128. The party turned out of doors at night, 132. They go to a hut on the sands, 137. Cleveland found at the ruins of the Earl's palace of Kirkwall, 159. The fair of Saint Olla there, 164-5. A brawl in the pedlar's booth, 179. Cleveland taken into custody, 186, and rescued, 187. Norna in the hovel declares herself to Mordaunt his mother, 192. Cleveland goes on board the pirate's vessel, 202; and is chosen captain, 209. He visits the magistrates in their council-room, 214.

Cleveland and Yellowley exchanged as hostages, 225. Yellowley escapes from the pirates, 228; who board Magnus Troil's brig, 234. Minna and Brenda with Claud Halcro sent ashore, 249. Minna's interview with Cleveland at the cathedral of St. Magnus, 261. His escape with Norna by a secret passage, 269. Rejoins his ship and releases Magnus Troil, 280. His farewell interview with Minna at the Standing Stones of Stennis, 302-4. Skirmish with the pirates—Cleveland taken prisoner, 305. Capture of the pirate's vessel, 310. Meeting of the elder Mertoun with Norna at the cathedral of St. Magnus, and discovery of Cleveland as their son, 314. Examination before the Magistrates, 320. Cleveland reprieved, goes abroad, 327. Mordaunt Mertoun marries Brenda Troil, 329.

THE FORTUNES OF NIGEL.

CHARACTERS INTRODUCED.

King James the First.	Jenkin Vincent, or "Jin" Ramsay's
Charles, Prince of Wales, "Babie Charles."	Vin," (in love with her,) } apprentices.
The Duke of Buckingham, "Steenie," the King's favourite minister.	Frank Tunstall, } apprentices.
Earl of Huntinglen, an old Scottish nobleman.	Widow Simmons, the sempstress, their neighbour.
Lord Dalgarno, his son.	Janet, their Scotch laundress.
The Countess of Blackchester, Lord Dalgarno's sister.	Andrew Skuriewhitter, the scrivener.
Sir Ewes Haldimund, his friend.	Willie, his clerk.
The Bishop of Winchester.	Monsieur le Chevalier de Beaujeu, keeper of a gambling-house.
Archie Armstrong, the court-jester.	Duke Hildebrod, president of the Alsatia Club.
Sir Mungo Malagrowth, a crabbed old courtier.	Captain Colepepper, or Peppercull, the Alsatian bully.
Sir Rullion Rattray of Ranagullion, his duelling friend.	Old Trapbois, the miser in Alsatia.
Maxwell, the deputy chamberlain at Whitehall.	Martha Trapbois, his daughter.
Laurie Linklater, a yeoman of the King's kitchen.	Old Dorothy, their charwoman.
Sir Edward Mansel, lieutenant of the Tower.	Black Feltham, } highwaymen with Dick Shakebag, } Captain Colepepper.
Lady Mansel, his wife.	Master George Heriot, the King's goldsmith.
Giles, a warder of the Tower.	Aunt Judith, his sister.
Knighon, the Duke of Buckingham's groom.	Roberts, his cash-keeper.
Latin, Lord Dalgarno's page.	The Rev. Mr. Windsor, his friend.
Lord Nigel Olifant of Glenvarloch.	The Lady Hermione, or Lady Erminia Pauletti, his ward.
Richie Monplies, his serving man.	Mademoiselle Pauline, or Monna Paula, her attendant.
David Ramsay, the watchmaker.	Reginald Lowestoffe, a young Templar.
Margaret Ramsay, his daughter.	Jim, his boy.
	Ringwood, a young Templar.

John Christie, the shipowner at Paul's Wharf.	Mother Redcap, an old nurse
Dame Nellie Christie, his wife.	Master Raredrench, the apothecary.
Benjamin Suddiechop, the barber	Ned Kilderkin, the eating-house keeper at Greenwich.
Dame Ursula, or Ursley Suddiechop, his wife.	Courtiers, Soldiers, Alsations, Apprentices, Boatmen, Highwaymen, Domestic, &c.
Wilsa, her mulatto girl.

PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

VOLUME I.

David Ramsay's apprentices calling watches, &c. near Temple Bar, 49. Richie Moniplies brought in with his head broken, 59. The king's goldsmith relieves him, 69. He returns to his master's (Lord Nigel's) lodgings, 83; and tells his adventures on presenting the supplication to the king, 86. The goldsmith visits Nigel, 94. Promises to present anew the supplication, 106. Presents it, 129; and the king gives him the crown jewels in pledge, 134. Nigel dines at the goldsmith's, 145. At prayers there the Lady Hermione enters the room, 154. Margaret Ramsay ill, sends for Dame Ursula, 169; and declares her love for Lord Nigel, 179. Nigel introduced at Court, 193; presents his petition to the king, 197. Lord Huntinglen prevails on the king to grant it his sign manual, 202. The Duke of Buckingham declares his enmity to Nigel, 205; who is introduced to Lord Dalgarno, 214. Deeds prepared for releasing Nigel's estates from mortgage, 217. Dalgarno takes him to a gambling-house, 247. A duel there between a citizen and a swaggering captain, 256. Richie Moniplies, leaving Nigel's service, cautions him against gambling, 281. Nigel warned against Lord Dalgarno in an anonymous letter, 290. Sir Mungo in the Park reproaches him with the ruin of a young citizen at gambling 294. Lord Dalgarno with the prince pass him unnoticed, 304. Nigel strikes Dalgarno with his sword, 318; and pursued, takes refuge in Lowestoffe's Templars' chambers, 317. Is sworn a member of the Alsatian Club, 337; and assigned to lodgings at the old miser's, 343.

VOLUME II.

Account of the Lady Hermione's residence at the goldsmith's house, 8. Margaret Ramsay informs her of Nigel's situation, 22. She gives Margaret money to assist his escape, 31; and tells her own story of her private marriage with Lord Dalgarno abroad, and his subsequent brutal conduct to, and desertion of, her, 34. Dame Ursley bribes Vincent the apprentice to assist in Nigel's escape, 65. Nigel turns the swaggering captain out of his lodgings, 92. The old miser at night steals the king's sign manual from Nigel's trunk, 117. He is murdered, Nigel saves the daughter's life, and shoots one of the murderers, 120-1. He hears of orders to hunt him out, and of a boat ready for his escape, 130. The miser's daughter prevails in her wish to accompany him, 132-4. They take the miser's chest, 137; and proceed in the boat from Whitefriars, 139. At Nigel's recommendation she goes to John Christie's, but is turned away from the door, and meets Richie Moniplies, 150. Nigel compels the boatman to row him to Greenwich, instead of aboard of a ship, as others had ordered, 156. The king's cook advises him to hide in the Park, 166; where he meets the king alone from a hunting party, 173. The king alarmed, has him arrested for high treason, 176; and he is sent to the Tower, 186. Margaret Ramsay, in boy's disguise, put into his prison room, 190. Christie charges him with having taken away his wife, 197-8. The goldsmith comes in and reproaches him, 209. The king's sign manual missed from his trunk, 217. Margaret Ramsay discovered, 219. Tells her adventures on presenting the Lady Hermione's petition to the king, 221. Sir Mungo in the Tower torments Nigel on the risk of losing his right hand, 231. Moniplies having married the miser's daughter, returns to Nigel's service, 243. Has an audience with the king, and restores the crown jewels found in the miser's chest, 250. The king puts him behind the arras and frightens the goldsmith, 252. Moniplies dismissed the palace for offering to bribe the king in Nigel's cause, 260. The king shows Lord Huntinglen the villainy of his son (Lord Dalgarno) towards the Lady Hermione, 265; and threatens Lord Dalgarno with banishment, 273. Lord D. marries her in presence of the king, 276; who pardons Nigel, 286. Moniplies pays off the mortgage on Nigel's estate, 292. Lord Dalgarno sends Nigel a challenge, 294; and makes the scrivener promise to swear the money was not paid in time, 297. The swaggering captain agrees with the scrivener to waylay and rob Lord D., 299. Moniplies and Vincent arrange to waylay the captain and his gang, 314. Lord Dalgarno on Enfield Chase with Christie's wife, whom he had carried off, 317; is shot by the captain, 324. Moniplies and his party come up and kill the captain and his gang, 326. Christie leads his wife away, 328. The wedding of Lord Nigel with Margaret Ramsay, 339-40. Moniplies married to the miser's daughter, gives Nigel the title deeds of his estate, 342; and is knighted, 346. The king dines with Lord Nigel and his bride, ib.

PEVERIL OF THE PEAK.

CHARACTERS INTRODUCED.

- King Charles the Second.
 Queen Catherine, his consort.
 Henrietta Maria, the late Queen of Charles I.
 James Duke of York, the King's brother.
 The Lady Anne, the Duke of York's daughter.
 Prince Rupert.
 Lord Rochester, the disgraced minister.
 The Duke of Ormond, a privy councillor.
 Henry Bennet, Earl of Arlington, ditto.
 Anthony Ashley Cooper, Earl of Shaftesbury.
 Sir William Scroggs, } Judges.
 Lord North,
 Sir George Wakeman, the Queen's physician.
 The Duchess of Newcastle.
 The Duchess of Richmond.
 Master Charles Topham, usher of the black rod.
 The Duchess of Portsmouth, } the or "La Belle Louise de Que- } King's ronalle," } favour-
 The Duchess of Cleveland. } ite mis-
 Mistress Nelly or Nell Gwynne, } tresses.
 Sir Edmondsbury Godfrey, a magistrate killed by papists.
 Captain Selby, } officers in the Captain Carleton, } Guards.
 Richard Whalley, the regicide.
 Master Empson, the King's flageolet player.
 Bajazet, a black page at St. James's palace.
 Master Maulstaine, a magistrate.
 Master Howlaglass, the preacher, his friend.
 Major Coleby, a warder of the Tower.
 Sir Geoffrey Hudson, the dwarf.
 Master Crofts, whom he killed in a duel.
 Master Evans, the late King's giant-porter.
 The fat captain of Newgate.
 Jem Clink, the turnkey there.
 Master Shortell, the mercer at Liverpool.
 Joe Bridlesley, the horse-dealer there.
 John Whitecraft, the inn-keeper at Altringham.
- Dame Whitecraft, his wife.
 Alice, their servant girl.
 Master Sharper, the cutler in the Strand.
 Adrian Hanson, a Dutch merchant, killed at Boston.
 George Villiers, Duke of Buckingham, the King's favourite minister.
 Mary, Duchess of Buckingham.
 Thomas Lord Fairfax, her father.
 Master Thomas Jerningham, the Duke's gentleman.
 The Rev. Mr. Quodling, the Duke's chaplain.
 Old Gatheral, the Duke's steward.
 Old Dame Dowias, the Duke's house-keeper.
 Jacob Doublefesse, his money-lender.
 Jack Jenkins, the fencer, in the Duke's service.
 Colonel Thomas Blood, the Duke's agent.
 Elkana Settle, the poet.
 Edward Christian, one of the conspirators, alias Richard Ganlesse, or Simon Canter.
 Colonel William Christian, his brother, shot for insurrection.
 Master Thomas Chiffinch, the King's private emissary, alias Will Smith, a friend of Richard Ganlesse.
 Kate Chiffinch, his mistress.
 Monsieur Chaubert, his cook.
 Tom Beacon, his groom.
 Lord Saville, a young nobleman.
 Master Jeremy, his head domestic.
 Jonathan, his attendant.
 Major Ralph Bridgenorth, a Round-head, and a conspirator.
 Mrs. Bridgenorth, his wife.
 Alice Bridgenorth, their daughter.
 Monsieur de Pigal, her dancing-master.
 Dame Martha, their housekeeper.
 Mr. Joachim Win-the-fight, Major Bridgenorth's attorney.
 Master Nehemiah Solagrace, a Presbyterian pastor.
 Holdfast Clegg, the Puritan millwright.
 Gaffer Hodgson, a Puritan.
 Dr. Titus Oates, the champion of the Popish Plot.

Captain Dangerfield, } hired witnesses in Master Everett, } the Popish Plot.	Richard Whitaker, the old steward,	} at Sir Geoffrey Peveril's
Old Wiever, the preacher, a conspirator.	Gatherill, the bailiff,
Charlotte de la Tremouille, Countess of Derby, and Queen of Man.	Mrs. Ellesmere, head domes- tic,
Philip Earl of Derby, her son, King of Man.	Deborah Debbitch, gover- nante,
Fenella, the deaf and dumb girl, the Countess's attendant, alias Zarah, daughter of Edward Christian.	Lance Outram, the park- keeper,
Greenhaigh, the Earl of Derby's mes- senger.	Ralph Rough, his helper, Rachel, a servant girl, Cissy Sellok, ditto,
Old Griffiths, the Earl's steward.	Sir Jasper Cranbourne, Cholmondley of Vale Royal,
Morris, his domestic.	Dick Wildblood of the Vale, Colonel Mitford,
Adrian Brakel, the gipsy mountebank, formerly Fenella's master.	Dr. Dummerar, the episco- pal parson,
Aldrick the Jesuit, the Countess's con- fessor.	Lamington and Sam Brewer, Sir Geof- frey's followers.
Captain Barstow, alias Fenwicke, a Jes- uit and secret correspondent of the Countess.	Saunders, the groom. Roger Raine, the tapster. Dame Raine, his widow.	} friends of Sir Geoffrey Peveril.
Martin Christal, his landlord in the Savoy.	Matthew Chamberlain, his successor.
William Peveril, ancestor of Peveril of the Peak.	Gaffer Ditchley, } Sir Geoffrey's miners.
Sir Geoffrey Peveril of the Peak, a Cav- alier.	Joe Rimegap, }
Lady Margaret Peveril, his wife.	Courtiers, Officers, Soldiers, Conspir- ators, Musicians, Citizens, Attendants, Miners, &c.
Julian Peveril, their son.

PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

VOLUME I.

History of the Peveril and Bridgenorth families, 67. Major Bridgenorth sees for the first time his infant daughter Alice at Lady Peveril's, 76. Lady Peveril invites him and his friends to a feast in honour of the King's restoration, 90. He protests against the drinking of healths, 100. Procession of the Cavaliers and Puritans to Peveril Castle, 108. They dine in separate rooms, 117. Julian Peveril and Alice Bridgenorth alarmed by the sudden appearance of the Countess of Derby in their play-room, 127. Major Bridgenorth enters, 131. The Countess informs Lady Peveril of her imprisonment and of Colonel Christian's execution, 139. Major B. threatens her with arrest for the murder, 147. Lady P.'s attendants disarm and detain him in the castle, 150. Sir Geoffrey Peveril arrives, 155. Major B. escapes, 164. Sir Geoffrey and his followers escort the Countess from his castle, 168. They are pursued by Major B.'s party with a King's messenger, 173. Sir Geoffrey destroys the warrant, 175; and sends the party back, 177. Major B. writes to Lady Peveril of his leaving the country and taking Alice with him, 184. Dr. Dummerar restored to his vicarage, and the Presbyterian minister ejected, 194-5. Sir Geoffrey sends Major B. a challenge, which he declines, 208. Lady Peveril meets Major B., 218; who warns her not to let the Countess educate Julian, 225. Julian is sent to the castle of the Countess in the Isle of Man, 233; and visits Alice privately, 243. Their interview is interrupted by the sudden entrance of Major B., 273; who invites Julian to stay in the house, 282, and at dinner tells the story of Whalley the regicide, 292. Description of Holm Peel Castle in the Isle of Man, 304. The young Lord Derby consults Julian on an alarm of insurrection, 318. Julian receives a note from Alice to meet her, 323. Fenella the dumb girl warns him not to go, 341. He meets Alice, and she tells him to beware of her father, who suddenly appears to them, 346. He encourages Julian's suit to Alice, 359. The Countess informs Julian of the Popish Plot, 376. He consents to convey her despatches to London, 380, writes to Alice, 384; and leaves the castle by night, 398. Fenella follows him on board the ship, 396; and is sent back, 401. Julian purchases a horse at Liverpool, 408; where he sees a warrant to arrest his father, 411. Stops at a village inn, where he meets Edward Christian under the name of Ganlesse, 417; and proceeds with him towards Peveril Castle, though warned to the contrary by the landlady, 428. Christian takes him to a house by the roadside, 440, where they sup with Chiffinch, 447; Julian's wine is drugged, and the charges drawn from his pistols, 451.

VOLUME II.

Arrives at his father's castle, which is in disorder, 13; and finds him and his mother under arrest for the Popish Plot, 18. He attempts a rescue, fires his pistol at Major Bridgenorth, and is arrested, 20. Major B. conducts him to his own house, where he meets Alice, 30; and attends their family prayers, 41. Major B. offers him means of escape, which he declines, 45. Lance Outram, Sir Geoffrey's park-keeper, assembles the miners to rescue Julian, 55. They attack and fire Major B.'s house, 61. Julian is released, and warns the Major not to leave Alice under Christian's care, 71. He starts for London with Lance, 77. At an inn, overhears Chiffinch tell Lord Saville that he and Christian had been employed by the Duke of Buckingham to carry off Alice to Whitehall, 85; and that they had stolen from Julian, while asleep, the Countess's despatches, and tampered with his pistols, 89. Julian rides after him in the morning and compels surrender of his papers, 96. The Duke's levee of poets, painters, &c. 101. Christian tells the Duke of their having brought Alice to London, 114; and of Sir Geoffrey Peveril's arrest, 116. Christian persuades Major B. to leave Alice under his care, 120. Character of Christian, 126. Julian going to deliver one of the Countess's letters, is prevented by Fenella, 139; who takes him into the Park, where they meet the King,

141. She dances before him, 143; and he sends them both to the palace, 146. Alice is lodged by Christian in the apartments of Chiffinch's mistress, 156; where, pursued by the Duke, she comes to the King's presence, 160. The King allows her to quit the palace with Julian, 172. They are followed and insulted by two retainers of the Duke, 180. Julian fights with and disables one, while the other carries Alice off to a boat, 183. Julian arrested for the assault, 186; is taken before a magistrate and sent to Newgate, 192. He asks for Sir Geoffrey's cell, 201; and is taken to that of Sir Geoffrey Hudson, the celebrated dwarf, 203; who tells him how the late Queen had him enclosed in a pie and brought to table, 212. Julian hears a female voice addressing him in the night, 221; and in the night following, 234. Receives an anonymous letter, promising rescue on his way to the Tower, if, in token of will to renounce Alice, he then wear a white ribbon on his hat, 241. Leaves Newgate with black crape on his hat, 245. Another boat approaches, but instantly moves off again, 248. Julian taken to the Tower, his mother throws him a handkerchief from the window of her cell, 251. Jerningham reports to the Duke his carrying off Alice, 255. The Duke informs Christian of Alice leaving the house with Julian, 268. Christian sets out on a false scent to Derbyshire in pursuit of them, 271. The Duke employs Colonel Blood to waylay Christian, 273; and entering the apartment of Alice in his house, finds her escaped and Zarah remaining instead, 286. He attempts to detain her, but she escapes by the window, 296. The King visits the Tower, 303, and recognises old Major Coleby, who sits down and dies, 306. Blood telling the Duke of Christian being still in London, is pointed out to the King, who scouts him from his presence, 311. The State Trial of Sir Geoffrey Peveril, Julian, and the Dwarf, for being concerned in the Popish Plot, 315. Evidence of Dr. Titus Oates, 323. The Judge seems to quarrel with the counsel, 329. The prisoners acquitted, 333. Skirmish between them and the mob, 338. They retire into a house where they are locked in, 342. Major Bridgenorth appears to them, 344; and takes Julian to a room, where a large number of conspirators are assembled, 350. Christian addresses them, 355; and persuades the Duke to join and attack the palace, 364. He consents, and gives his signet ring, 369. The Countess of Derby appears unexpectedly at Court, 381. The Dwarf, brought to the Court-ball in a violoncello, accuses the Duke of high treason, and discloses the conspiracy, 388. The Duke summoned, 392. Defensive preparations at the palace, 394. On his way to the palace, is told of the conspiracy's failure, 404. Christian's interview with Zarah, alias Fenella, who refuses his offer of the Duke in marriage, 412; and declares her love for Julian, 416. The Duke appears before the King, and denies knowledge of the conspiracy, 423. Alice, under an assumed name, left by her father with Lady Peveril, is introduced by Sir Geoffrey to Julian, 429. The King sends for them to the palace, 430. The King publicly acquits the Duke of the conspiracy, 440; but in private makes him confess, and forgives him, 444. Stratagem of the King to make Fenella speak, 456. She informs him that Christian employed her as a spy upon the Countess of Derby, 457. Christian declares her his daughter, and is banished the kingdom, 458. Julian Peveril marries Alice Bridgenorth, 460.

QUENTIN DURWARD.

CHARACTERS INTRODUCED.

- | | | |
|---|----------------------------------|---|
| Louis the Eleventh, King of France, disguised first as the merchant Maitre Pierre. | | the Duke of Burgundy, first disguised as Jacqueline, at Plessis. |
| The Princess Anne, the Lady of Beaujeu, | } his two daughters. | The Countess Hameline of Croye, her aunt, first disguised as Dame Perotte at Plessis. |
| The Princess Joan, affianced to the Duke of Orleans, | | Marthon, their female attendant, alias Rispah, a Bohemian. |
| Louis, Duke of Orleans. | | Zamet Maigrabin, a Bohemian, hanged near Plessis. |
| The Count de Dunois. | | Hayraddin Maigrabin, his brother, the "Zingaro," as Rouge Sanglier, a disguised herald. |
| Oliver le Dain, or "Oliver le Diable," the court barber, and king's favourite minister. | | The Franciscan prior at Namur. |
| Martius Galeotti Martivalle, the king's astrologer. | | Father Francis, a monk there. |
| Cardinal Balue. | | Heinrick, a German lansknächt. |
| Montjoie, chief herald of France. | | Louis of Bourbon, the Prince Bishop of Liege. |
| Tristan l'Hermite provost-marshal of France, first disguised as Maitre Pierre's gossip. | | The Bishop's chaplain. |
| Trois-Eschelles, } executioners. | | Meinheer Herman Pavillon, the Syndic, |
| Petit-André, } | | Meinheer Rouslaer, a chief burgher, |
| Lord Crawford, captain of the Scottish Guard. | | Peterkin Gelsaer, a citizen, |
| Ludovic Lesly, or Le Balafre, an old archer of the Scottish Guard. | | Nikkel Blok, the butcher, |
| Quentin Durward, his nephew. | | Claus Hammerlein, the smith, |
| Andrew Arnot, one of le Balafre's yeomen. | | Conrade Horst, a citizen. |
| Archie Cunningham, } | } archers of the Scottish Guard. | Mother Mabel Pavillon, the Syndic's wife. |
| Lindesay, } | | Trudehen, or Gertrude Pavillon, his daughter. |
| John Guthrie, } | | Hans Glover, her betrothed. |
| Tyrie, } | | Charlot, a messenger. |
| Bertrand Guyot, } | | Charles the Bold, Duke of Burgundy. |
| William de la Marck, "the Wild Boar of Ardenne," a French noble. | | Count Philip de Crevecoeur, the Duke's envoy to France. |
| Carl Ebersson, his son. | | The Countess of Crevecoeur. |
| Isabelle, Countess of Croye, a ward of | | |

Count Stephen, nephew of Count de Crevecoeur.	Mornay, the old seneschal at Peronne.
Philip des Comines, the Duke's favourite minister.	Tolson d'Or, the chief herald of Burgundy.
Baron de Humbercourt, one of the Duke's officers.	The Abbess of the Ursuline Convent near Peronne.
The Count of Campo-Basso.	Courtiers, Officers, Soldiers, Insurgent Citizens, Attendants
Tid Wetzweiler, or "Le Glorieux," the Duke's jester.

PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

VOLUME I.

Quentin Durward meets King Louis and the Provost-Marshal in disguise by the brook near Plessis, 68. They pass by the castle of Plessis les Tours, 76. The King and Quentin Durward breakfast at the Fleur-de-lys inn, 87; where he sees the Countess Isabelle in disguise at the turret window, 106. First interview with his uncle Le Balafre, 112. He cuts down a Bohemian from hanging on a tree, 181. Is arrested by the provost-marshal, 185. Rescued by the archers of the Scottish Guard, 140; and is enrolled one of the Guard, 157. The King holds a Court in the castle, 167. The Duke of Burgundy's ambassador brings a defiance to the King, 185. The boar hunt, 195. Cardinal Balue thrown from his horse, 201-2. Quentin saves the King from the boar, 207. Is placed sentinel in the castle gallery, 216; and in the breakfast room, 223. The King takes him to the astrologer's turret, 265. Quentin sets out by night with the ladies of Croye towards Liege, 276. They are overtaken and attacked by two knights, 288. Quentin unhorses the Duke of Orleans, and fights with the Count de Dunois, 289-90. The Scottish Guard come up and arrest the Duke and the Count, 298. Quentin's wound dressed by the Countess Isabelle, 300. They proceed, guided by the Bohemian, 306; and arrive at the convent of Namur, 317. Quentin concealed, overhears a conspiracy between the Bohemian and others, 327.

VOLUME II.

Which he frustrates by taking another road than proposed by the Bohemian, and they arrive at the Bishop of Liege's castle, 16. Quentin witnesses an uproar in Liege, 30. A letter given him by a lady in the castle garden, 42. The castle assaulted at night by the insurgent citizens, and taken, 48. Quentin escapes with the Countess Hameline by mistake, 50; and returns to seek the Countess Isabelle, 56. Midnight feast of De la Marck and the insurgents in the castle hall, 70. Murder of the Bishop of Liege by De la Marck, 77. Quentin and the Countess Isabelle escape in disguise on horseback, 95; are pursued by De la Marck's black troopers, 106; and rescued by a party under the Count Crevecœur, 109; with whom they travel to Peronne, 125. King Louis arrives with a small retinue in the Duke of Burgundy's camp, 140; and is escorted to the castle of Peronne, 149. The Duke's grand supper, 168. An uproar—the Duke charges the King with the murder of the Bishop of Liege, 174; The King's nobles disarmed and he made prisoner, 180; and conducted to Earl Herbert's tower, 184. He orders the execution of his Astrologer, 200; who alarms him, and the order is recalled, 216. Interview of Philip des Comines with the King, who endeavours to bribe him, 227. Interview of Quentin with the Countess Isabelle at the convent, 255. The investigation before the council, 261. The Bohemian introduced, disguised as a herald from Liege, 277; is hunted out by the hounds, 287; and executed, 294. The Countess Isabelle publicly refuses the Duke of Orleans, 308. The King and the Duke reconciled, the troops of both leave Peronne to attack Liege, 313. Nocturnal sally of the Liegeois, 329. The city attacked, 333. Quentin fights with De la Marck disguised as the Duke of Orleans, and wounds him, 339. Runs to the rescue of Gertrude Pavillon, 340. The city taken, 341. Le Balafre cuts off De la Marck's head, 342. Quentin married to the Countess Isabelle, 347.

250 ST. RONAN'S WELL—CHARACTERS INTRODUCED.

ST. RONAN'S WELL.

CHARACTERS INTRODUCED.

Lady Penelope Penfeather, the Lady Patronsess at the Spa.	} the Managing Committee at the Spa.	Sir Bingo Binks, a fox-hunting baronet,	} visitors at the Spa.
Mrs. Jones, her waiting woman.		Lady Binks, formerly Miss Rachel Bonnyrigg,
Jolliffe, her footman.		Mrs. Gingham, her waiting woman.
Dr. Quentin Quackleben, "the man of Medicine,"		Miss Maria Digges, a friend of Lady Penfeather,
Mr. Philip Winterblossom, "the man of Taste,"		Mr. Robert Rymar, the poet,
Mr. Saunders Melklewham, "the man of Law,"		Mr. Keelavine, the painter,
Captain MacTurk, "the man of Peace,"		Mrs. Margaret Blower, a ship-owner's widow.
Rev. Mr. Simon Chatterly, "the man of Religion,"		Sandie Lawson, keeper of the Spa Hotel.
Mr. Michael Meredith, "the man of Mirth,"		Dinah, his daughter.
		Toby, the waiter.

Mr. Pott, librarian at the Spa.	John Bindloose, the Sheriff's clerk and banker.	} at Marchthorn
Mrs. Pott, his wife.	Hannah, his housekeeper,
Mr. John Mowbray, of St. Ronan's.	Tam Lourie, an innkeeper,	} at Old St. Ronan's.
Clara Mowbray, his sister.	Sir Robert Ringhorse, a magistrate,
Hannah Irwin, her former confidante.	Saunders Jaup, a farmer,
Patrick, a domestic,	Johnnie Tirlsneck, the beadle,
Martha, the servant,	John Hislop, the carrier,
Joseph, the gardener,	Nelly Trotter, the fishwoman,
Peregrine Touchwood, the traveller, an old relation of the Mowbrays.	John Pirner, the fisherman,
Rev. Josiah Cargill, minister of St. Ronan's.	Dick Tinto, the painter.
Eppie,	Neill-Gow, the fiddler.
Grizzie,	Nathaniel, his son.
Lord Bidmore, his patron.	Mr. Sowerbrowst, the maltster.
The Honourable Augustus Bidmore, his pupil, Lord B.'s son.	Tam Simpson, the drunken barber.
Miss Augusta Bidmore, Lord B.'s daughter.	The Earl of Etherington.
Meg Dods, landlady of the inn at Old St. Ronan's.	La Comtesse Marie de Martigny, his wife.
Anthony the postillon there.	Frank Tyrrel, alias Martigny (Earl of Etherington,) their son, (supposed illegitimate.)
Eppie Anderson, the servant there.	Mrs. Anne Bulmer, wife of the Earl, in bigamy.
Beenie, the chamber maid.	Valentine Bulmer, the (titular) Earl of Etherington, her son.
Mr. Turnpenny, the banker.	Visitors at the Spa, Villagers, Attendants, &c.

PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

VOLUME I.

Description of Meg Dods and her inn at Old St. Ronan's, 19. Frank Tyrrel arrives there, 30. Meg gives a drawing of his to be shown at the Spa Hotel, 52. Description of the Managing Committee there, 58. Tyrrel's drawing handed around after dinner, 64. He is invited to the Spa, 72; and introduced to the company, 82; and patronized by Lady Penelope at dinner, 89. Clara Mowbray absent at dinner, 98. Dr. Quackleben flirts with Mrs. Blower at tea, 107. Clara Mowbray appears in a riding dress and invites the company to Shaw's Castle, 115. The gentlemen quarrel over their wine, 129. Tyrrel insulted by Sir Bingo Binka, is prevented by Clara from striking him, 132. Interview between Tyrrel and Clara on her way home, 143. He tells her that Bulmer is alive, &c. 150. Mr. Mowbray preparing his house (Shaw's Castle) for the visitors, 155; determines to gamble with Clara's money, 167. She consents, 173. Sir Bingo sends a challenge to Tyrrel, 184. Captain MacTurk is cudgelled by Meg Dods for bringing it, 187. Sir Bingo and his party arrive on the ground, but Tyrrel does not appear, 200. Meg Dods consults the Sheriff's clerk at Marchthorn about Tyrrel's absence, 214. Touchwood meets them at the Bank-office there, 226. The Mowbrays' party put off, 235.

Touchwood prefers Meg Dods' inn to the Spa Hotel, 239. Description of the minister of St. Ronan's 248. Touchwood visits him in his study, and invites him to dinner, 265. The minister forgets the invitation, 267. They are invited to a fancy-dress ball at Mowbray's, 271. Bulmer, the titular Earl of Etherington, arrives at the Spa, wounded, 276; gambles with Mowbray, 279; and proposes to marry Clara Mowbray, 288. Mowbray promises his interest, 295. Lord Etherington writes to his friend Captain Jekyl, that he had been wounded by Tyrrel in a duel, 299.

VOLUME II.

Preparations for the dramatic fête at Shaw's Castle, 6. Exhibition of the tableaux-vivans, 19. The minister remonstrates with Lady Penelope, mistaking her for Miss Mowbray, 33; and addresses Lord Etherington, recognising him as Bulmer, 37. Lord Etherington requests an introduction to Clara, 61; who refuses to see him, and threatens leaving the house, 66. Mowbray receives an anonymous letter of caution regarding Lord Etherington, 74. In his absence Lord Etherington arrives, and Clara recognises him as Bulmer, 76. Lord Etherington writes to Captain Jekyl his family history, 87; that he had formerly assisted Tyrrel in his addresses to Clara, 98; and had deceived them by personating him in the private marriage with her, 108. Touchwood at night falls into a rivulet, 129. Is helped out by Tyrrel, whose reappearance is mistaken by Meg Dods for a ghost, 134. They recognise each other as acquaintances at Smyrna, 136. Captain Jekyl's interview with Tyrrel on behalf of Lord Etherington, 144. Jekyl had before explained to Sir Bingo the cause of Tyrrel's absence from the intended duel, 147. Tyrrel consents to renounce his claim to the family title, provided his brother (Lord Etherington) renounces Clara Mowbray, 160; and promises to send for documents proving his claim, 162. Touchwood intrudes on Jekyl, 167; and learns of the duel between Tyrrel and Lord Etherington, 178. Lord Etherington sends his valet to intercept the papers addressed to Tyrrel, 183. The two brothers meet on the public walk, 191. Lady Penelope and Lord Etherington hear part of Hannah Irwin's confession as witness to the private marriage of Clara Mowbray, 212. Lord Etherington gets possession of Tyrrel's papers, and is about to destroy them, but finds them not originals but copies, 225. He employs his valet to get rid of Hannah Irwin, 228. Jekyl cautions Mowbray against gambling with Lord Etherington, 231. They play together and Mowbray loses, 238. Mowbray hears that Lady Penelope had spoken calumniously of his sister, 244. He gallops home at night, 249; and is about to murder Clara, 255; who consents to marry Lord Etherington, 259. Touchwood visits Mowbray, 261; and tells of his relationship to his family, 264; and of Clara having been deceived into a private marriage with Lord Etherington, by his personating Tyrrel, 273; and of the illegitimacy of Lord Etherington, and Tyrrel's right to the title, 274. Clara leaves the house at night, 285; and is searched for in vain, 288. Hannah Irwin removed to the minister's house, 297; her dying confession, 300; overheard by Clara, who appears at her bedside and forgives her, 304. Clara appears to Tyrrel in his room, at Meg Dods' inn, 305; and dies there, 308. Mowbray kills Lord Etherington in a duel, 309. Dr. Quackleben married to Widow Blower, 313.

REDGAUNTLET.

CHARACTERS INTRODUCED.

Sir Alberick Redgauntlet, an ancestor of that family.	Sir Edward Hugh Redgauntlet, their uncle, a Jacobite conspirator; alias the Laird of the Lochs; alias Mr. Herries of Birrenswark; alias Master Ingoldsby.
Edward Redgauntlet, his son.	Cristal Nixon, Edward Redgauntlet's agent.
Edward Baliol, the usurper of Scotland.	Mabel Moffat, his domestic.
Sir Robert Redgauntlet, an old Tory.	Little Benjie, or Benjamin Colthred, a spy employed by Nixon.
Sir John Redgauntlet, his son and successor.	John or Ian, } servants.
"Major Weir," Sir Robert's favourite baboon.	Dorcas, }
Dougal Macallum, his old butler.	The Chevalier Prince Charles Edward, the Pretender; first as Father Buonaventure.
Hutcheon, an aged domestic.	Miss Walkinshaw, his mistress.
Steenie Steenson, the piper.	Gilbert Gregson, his messenger.
Laurie Lapraik, his friend.	Miss Seraphina Arthuret, a Papist lady.
Tibbie Faw, the ostler-wife.	Miss Angellie Arthuret, her sister.
Middleton, Rothies, Lauderdale, Dalryell, Earlshall, Bonshaw, Dunbarton, Douglas, Advocate Mackenzie, Claverhouse, Lang Nod of Netherton, and others, } spirits seen by the piper in the infernal regions.	Ambrose, } their domestics.
Sir Redwald Redgauntlet, son of Sir John.	Selby, }
Sir Henry Darsie Redgauntlet, son of Sir Redwald.	Richard Gardener, }
Lady Henry Darsie Redgauntlet, his wife.	Lord ———, a young English nobleman.
Sir Arthur Darsie Redgauntlet, alias Darsie Latimer, their son.	Dr. Grumball, from Oxford.
Miss Lillias Redgauntlet, his sister; or "Greenmantle."	Mr. Meredith, from Wales.
Lady Rachel Rouge-dragon, her guardian.	Sir Richard Glendale, Mr. Pengwinion, from Cornwall, } Papist conspirators with Redgauntlet.
	Mr. Pate Maxwell, Laird of Summertrees, called "Pate in Peril."
	Father Crackenthorp, the publican.

Dolly Crackenthorp, his daughter.	Bauldie, their stable-boy.
Robin Hastie, a smuggler and publican at Annan.	John Davies, an old fisherman, employed by the Quaker.
Thomas Turnbull, alias Tom Turnpenny, a canting smuggler and schoolmaster.	Little Phil, his lad.
Malachi, his preaching assistant.	Alan Fairford, a young advocate, Darsie Latimer's friend.
Nauty or Anthony Ewart, a smuggler captain.	Mr. Alexander or Saunders Fairford, his father, a lawyer.
Mrs. Cantrips, his former friend and landlady.	James Wilkinson, his servant.
Jessie Cantrips, her daughter.	Hannah, his housekeeper.
Jack Hadaway, their neighbour.	Epps, his cook.
Job Rutledge,	Peter Fairford, Alan's cousin.
Swanston,	Ralph Latimer, Darsie's supposed father.
John Roberts,	Sam Owen, Darsie's groom.
Old Jephson,	Samuel Griffiths, Darsie's paymaster in London.
Jack Lowther,	William Crosbie, Provost of Dumfries.
Bhainscop,	Lord Kalmes,
Jem Collier,	Lord Bladderskate, } judges.
Sam Skelton,	Mrs. Crosbie, a cousin of the Redgauntlets.
Will Lamplugh,	Mr. Daniel Dumtoustie, a young advocate, Lord B.'s nephew.
Goodman Grist, the miller,	Peter Drudgeit, Lord B.'s clerk.
Old Peel-the-Causeway,	Mr. Tough, } advocates.
Widow Gregson, Darsie's landlady at Shepherd's Bush.	Mr. Pest,
Willie Steenson, or "Wandering Willie," a blind fiddler.	Peter Peebles, the poor litigant.
Maggie Steenson, or Epps Ainala, his wife.	Matthew Foxley, a magistrate.
Bob the Rambler, his comrade.	Nicholas Faggot, his clerk.
Dame Martin, Darsie's partner in the dance.	Mr. Crossbite, an advocate.
Joshua Geddes, the Quaker.	General Campbell, or "Black Colin Campbell," in the King's service.
Rachel Geddes, his sister.	Quarter-Master Thwacker, of the Dragoons.
Phillip Geddes, their grandfather.	Lawyers, Conspirators, Smugglers, Soldiers, Fishermen, Domestic.
Jehoiachim, their servant.

PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

VOLUME I.

Darsie Latimer writes to Alan Fairford an account of his journey and his prospects, 19; and of a salmon-hunt near Shepherd's Bush, where he was overtaken by the Solway tide, 52; and conducted by the Laird of the Lochs to his cottage, 59; where a young lady says grace at supper, 66. Alan writes to Darsie of Mr. Herries's visit and inquiry after Darsie, 79. Darsie to Alan, of the Laird's quarrel with Geddes the Quaker about a fishing station, 86; of the Quaker's invitation of Darsie to his house, 95; of the Quaker's horse running away with little Benjie, 108; and of his stay with the Quaker, 118. Alan to Darsie, of Greenmantle's visit to him, 126; and of her writing him to warn Darsie to return to Edinburgh, 184. Alan's father to Darsie, requesting him not to return at present, 140. Darsie to Alan, of his meeting the blind fiddler, 144; who tells Wandering Willie's tale, 164—how that Sir Robert Redgauntlet's piper called and paid his rent, 169; the old knight died suddenly, 170; the old butler died with fright, 172; the knight's son afterwards demanded the rent on his father's receipt, 173; the piper conducted to the infernal regions, 178; there obtained from the knight his receipt, and information where the money was hid, 188; and it was found in the turret, carried there by the knight's baboon, called Major Weir, 186.—Of Darsie's accompanying the fiddler to the fishers' dance, 193; where he danced with the Laird's niece, 199; who warned him to leave the country, 208. Alan to Darsie, of his consultation about poor Peter Peebles's lawsuit, 212. Of Peter getting drunk, 224. Alan pleads the case before the judges, 234. A letter found among his papers suddenly hurries him out of Court, 245. The letter stating that Darsie's life was in danger, 248; and his (Alan's) starting for Dumfriesshire, 251. Darsie's Journal of his return to the residence of the Quaker, 264, who accompanied him to the disputed fishing station on an alarm of disturbance, 267. Attacked by rioters, who broke the nets, and struck down Darsie insensible, 274. He is conveyed in a cart along the sands, 279. Met by the Laird on horseback, 284. Confined with fever in the Laird's house, 290; and treated as mad, 298. Of his writing to the Laird, demanding interview and explanation, ib. That the Laird visited him, 301, took him before a magistrate, who examined him, 302; and that Peter Peebles, seeking Alan Fairford, bounced into the room, 311. That Peter recognised the Laird as Mr. Herries concerned in the rebellion, 320, on which the clerk produced a State warrant against him, which he destroyed, 321; and the magistrate threatened to arrest him, 323; but afterwards declined, and left Darsie in his charge, 328.

VOLUME II.

That the Laird told Darsie of his relation to the Redgauntlet family, and desired him to prepare for a journey, 9. That Darsie communicated with the blind fiddler in the court-yard by means of tunes, 27, and that a riding mask and a lady's habit were brought for his disguise, 34. Alan Fairford's Journal, that in search of Darsie he consulted Provost Crosbie, 37, and went to the Quaker's, who was absent, 48. That he dined with the Provost, and met Mr. Maxwell there, a friend of Redgauntlet, who told the story of his escape from the soldiers during the rebellion, 52. The Provost cautioned him against Maxwell, 75, who gave him a letter to Redgauntlet, 79; which he went with to the canting smuggler at Annan for Redgauntlet's address, and found the smuggler at prayers, 84. That the smuggler took him into the spirit vault, 89; and by secret passages to an inn at the river side, 98; where Alan got on board the smuggler's brig, 108. That Nanty Ewart, the captain, told him his early adventures of seduction and piracy, and fell asleep intoxicated, 118. That the brig arrived in the Wampool River, and the party got ashore at night, 128. Alan being sick, the captain took him to the house of the Miss Arthurets, Papist ladies, 137; where he was introduced to Father Buonaventure, 149; to whom he showed Maxwell's letter to Redgauntlet, which he (Father Buonaventure) opened and read, 156; and gave him another letter, to be taken to Redgauntlet with it, 162. That a lady suddenly appeared at their conference, 164; and Alan left the house with a guide in search of Redgauntlet, 167. Darsie's Journal states that he began his journey on horseback, disguised as a lady, with Herries, alias Redgauntlet, 170; and was introduced by him to his niece "Greenmantle," who kissed Darsie, 174; and declared herself his sister, 183. She told him their family history, 186; that Redgauntlet was their uncle; of his taking her to the coronation of George III. 196, where he made her pick up the gauntlet of the King's champion, 200; of his conspiracies against the Government, 202; and of Nixon's villainy, 206. That Redgauntlet endeavoured to persuade him to join the Pretender's cause, 215. The party arrive at Crackenthorp's Inn, where Darsie meets Alan, 224; the blind fiddler, 227; and the Quaker seeking for Darsie, meets Peter Peebles looking for Alan, 234. Nanty Ewart beats Peebles, 244. Alan delivers the letters to Redgauntlet, 247. Peebles produces a warrant against Alan, who resists, 251. A skirmish, Nanty Ewart disarmed by Redgauntlet; Alan and the Quaker arrested, 256. Redgauntlet introduces Darsie to a meeting of conspirators in the Pretender's cause, 264. They resolve to require of the Prince dismissal of his mistress from his household, 271-2. The Prince receives their deputation, and Darsie is introduced to him, 277. The Prince refuses compliance with their demand, 281. The enterprise is broken off, and Redgauntlet directs Ewart to prepare his brig for the Prince's departure, 285. Nixon follows Ewart with a proposal of treachery, 286. Ewart refuses, Nixon shoots him, Ewart at the same instant cuts him down, and they are both found dead, 289. Alan recognises Darsie's sister as "Greenmantle," 296. She tells him of Darsie's situation, 299. A letter from General Campbell to Nixon found on little Benjie, 302. The General arrives with the military, 305; and suffers the conspirators to depart, 308. The Prince embarks, and Redgauntlet, taking leave of Darsie and Lillias, accompanies him, 310. Lillias married to Alan Fairford, 315-16; and Redgauntlet becomes Prior of a Monastery abroad, 317.

THE BETROTHED,
AND
THE HIGHLAND WIDOW.

CHARACTERS INTRODUCED.

THE BETROTHED.

Gwenwyn, or Gweawynwen, the Prince of Powysland.
Brengrwain, his wife.
Father Eluion, his chaplain.
Cadwallon, his favourite bard, disguised as Renault Vidal, a minstrel.
Caradoc of Menwygent, the Prince's younger bard.
Jorwarth ap Jevan, his envoy.
Morgan, one of his soldiers.
Sir Raymond Berenger, an old Norman warrior.
The Lady Eveline Berenger, his daughter, the Betrothed.
Father Aldrovand, Sir Raymond's chaplain.
Dennis Moroit, his esquire.
Wilkin Flammock, a Flemish soldier and artizan.
Roschen, or Rose Flammock, his daughter.
Jan Vanwelt, her suitor.
Reinold, Sir Raymond's butler.
Raoul, the huntsman.
Dame Gilian, his wife.
Dame Margery, the nurse.
Niel Hanson, a soldier.
Peterkin Vorst, the sentinel.
Blanche and Ternotte, Lady Eveline's domestics.
Dogget, the warder.
The Lady Ermengarde, of Baldringham.
Berwine, her favourite attendant.
Hundwolf, her steward.
Baldric, an ancestor of Lady Eveline.
Vanda, his wife, the Spirit with the red-hand.
The Abbess of the nunnery at Gloucester.
Sir Hugo de Lacy, Constable of Chester, a crusader.
Sir Damian de Lacy, his nephew.
Randal de Lacy, his cousin, disguised as a merchant at the funeral; as the hawk merchant at the castle; and the robber captain.

Sir William Herbert, a friend of Sir Hugo de Lacy.
Phillip Guarine, Sir Hugo's esquire.
Amelot, Sir Damian's page.
Ralph Genvil, } veterans in his Stephen Pontoya, } troop.
Wild Wenlock, De Lacy's kinsman.
Hob Miller of Twyford, one of the insurgents.
Dawfyd, the one-eyed, a freebooter chief.
King Henry the Second, of England.
Prince Richard, } his sons.
Prince John, }
The Lord Chancellor.
The Earl of Gloucester.
The Earl of Arundel, a crusader.
Guy Morthenmer, a nobleman, the King's pursuivant.
Alberick, Prince Richard's esquire.
Baldwin, the Archbishop of Canterbury.
His chaplain.
The paritor of the Ecclesiastical court.
The leech at the convent of Gloucester.
Crusaders, Soldiers, Priests, Robbers, Villagers, Domestics, &c. &c.

THE HIGHLAND WIDOW.

Mrs. Bethune Balliol, }
Mrs. Alice Lambkin, } tourists who inher companion, } troduce the Donald MacLeish, her } Story.
postillion.
Hamish MacTavish, or MacTavish
Mohr, a Highland outlaw.
Eispat MacTavish, his widow.
Hamish Bean MacTavish, their son.
Miles MacPhadraick, a Highland officer, under Barcaldine.
Captain Campbell, or Balcaldine, or "Green Collin," an officer.
Sergeant Allan Breack Cameron.
The Rev. Mr. Michael Tyrie, minister of Glenorquhy.
Soldiers, Female Mourners, &c.

PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

VOLUME I.

Gwenwyn the Welsh Prince of Powys-land visits Sir Raymond Berenger's castle of Garde Doloureuse, 35; admires Eveline Berenger, ib.; holds festival in Powys Castle, 40. Receives a letter from Sir Raymond, declining his alliance, 47. Sir Raymond's castle in alarm of an attack, 54. The Welsh troops arrive in front, 58. Sir Raymond goes out to meet them, and leaves Flammock in charge of the castle, 64. Eveline looks out from the battlements, and sees her father killed by the Welsh Prince, 78. She retires to the chapel, 82. An envoy from the Welsh Prince announced, 84. Flammock's stratagem to make him promise to send oxen to the castle, 91. Is overheard by the priest, 96. Eveline in the chapel, vows to marry the man who shall rescue her, 99. The Priest tells Eveline that Flammock intends to betray them, 102. Flammock is examined, and continued in command, 106. The oxen brought into the castle, 110. Flammock reconciled to the priest, 114. The envoy arrives to receive surrender, as Flammock had promised, and is sent back, ib. Eveline encourages the garrison on the battlements, 118. The Welsh forces attack the castle, 125; and retire at night-fall, 127. Eveline acts night sentinel on the ramparts, 128. An alarm heard at a distance, 135. Sir Hugo de Lacy's troops arrive to disperse the Welsh camp, 138. His nephew, Sir Damian de Lacy, arrives in the castle, 142. Funeral of Sir Raymond, 151. Randal de Lacy, Sir Hugo's spendthrift cousin, appears at the funeral, disguised as a merchant, 152. Eveline visits Sir Hugo in his pavilion, outside the castle, 165. He proposes himself to her, 167; and escorts her to her aunt's convent, 179; their repast on the roadside, 183. She visits her relative, the old Lady of Baldringham, 190. Sir Hugo places a guard round the house, 198. She has to sleep in the haunted chamber, 201; which she enters alone, leaving Rose her attendant in the next apartment, 204. In the night, Rose hears her scream, and calls to (Damian disguised as) the sentinel, who enters by the window, and conveys Eveline, fainting, from her chamber into Rose's apartment, 209. She leaves the house early in the morning, 221; and tells Rose she had seen a vision of her murdered ancestor frowning on her, 227. Rose inquires in vain for the sentinel who rescued Eveline, 229. They arrive at her aunt's convent at Gloucester, 232. Randal de Lacy visits Eveline, and asks her interposition with Sir Hugo, who consents to his being present at the betrothal, 240. Preparation made for it, 245. Damian arrives in the court-yard ill, and faints, 251. Sir Hugo summoned to the Archbishop, 258. Visits

THE BETROTHED, ETC.—PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS. 259

Damian in his sick chamber, 262. Is coldly received by the Archbishop, 266; who prevails on him to leave his betrothed in England, and proceed to the Holy Land, 273. The Welsh Prince's minstrel, in disguise, enters Hugo's service, 288. Sir Hugo explains to Eveline his intended absence of three years, 290; and she consents to remain his betrothed for that period, 292. The minstrel sings Sir Hugo asleep in his tent, 302. Sir Hugo proposes to Flammock the guardianship of Eveline, which he declines, 307. Sir Hugo appoints Damian, 313; and leaves England, 317. Eveline returns to the castle of Garde Doloureuse, 319. Randal de Lacy, disguised as a merchant, brings falcons for sale, 331. Lady Eveline joins a hawking party, 336. They are attacked by a band of Welshmen, 342; Eveline, seized and blindfolded, 348, is made to creep into a subterranean cavern, 348; where she hears sounds of fighting outside, and is relieved by a party under Damian, 351; who, proceeding to the rescue of Wenlock, 359, is carried wounded to the castle, 362.

VOLUME II.

Eveline attends his sick chamber, 15. She tells his page to order his soldiers to the relief of Wenlock, and they refuse, 21. She addresses them, and prevails, 24. They advance under the page to the village, but too late, 28; Damian suspected of favouring the insurgents, and Wenlock's head is brought to them, 32. The soldiers return to the castle, 33. The King's pursuivant summons the castle to surrender to the King, and proclaims Damian a traitor, 41. Eveline refuses to surrender the castle, or deliver up Damian, 42. Sir Hugo, supposed to have been killed at the Crusade, travelling with his squire disguised, halts near the castle, 44. The minstrel torments him by slandering Eveline, 51. Randal de Lacy joins the king's forces in besieging the castle, 57. Flammock goes to the King's tent, 60. A party under Prince Richard storm and take the castle, 64. Sir Hugo and his followers meet Dame Gillian and old Raoul, and learn of affairs at the castle, 71. He proceeds with them towards the castle, 79. The minstrel at the bridge near the castle waits for Sir Hugo, 82. Procession of the Constable of Chester across the bridge, 87. The minstrel, mistaking the constable for Sir Hugo, his predecessor, rushes upon, and murders him, 89. Is seized by Flammock, and taken before the King, ib.; where he finds his having murdered Randal de Lacy instead of Sir Hugo, declares himself the late Welsh Prince's bard, 91; and is executed, 95. Lady Eveline, confined in her aunt's convent, 97, sees the vision of her murdered ancestor now smiling on her, 99. Rose brings her good news from the castle, 100. Damian, confined in the dungeon of the castle, is visited by Sir Hugo in disguise, 101; who tempts him in regard to Lady Eveline, and finding him faithful, declares himself, and consents to cancel his own betrothal with her, 111. Sir Damian de Lacy and the Lady Eveline are married, 118.

Description of the Highland Widow's turf hut near Ben Cruachan, 285. Hamish Bean, her son, leaves her, 297; and returns in the Highland soldier's dress, 307. Previous to departure for his regiment he sees a spirit, 322. His mother gives him a sleeping potion to detain him, 324. He awakes and finds his time of absence expired, 338. A party of soldiers come to arrest him for desertion, 347. He shoots their sergeant, and is arrested, 349. Tried and shot at Dumbarton Castle, 356. The clergyman, returning from the execution, meets the mother wandering insane in the Haunted Glen, 361.

THE TALISMAN. THE TWO DROVERS. MY AUNT MARGARET'S MIRROR. THE TAP- ESTRIED CHAMBER. THE LAIRD'S JOCK.

CHARACTERS INTRODUCED.

THE TALISMAN.

Richard "Cœur de Lion," King of England.	Phillip Augustus, King of France.	} Crusaders.
Queen Berengaria, his consort.	Leopold, Archduke of Austria.
The Lady Edith Plantagenet, kinswoman of King Richard.	The Earl of Wallenrode, a Hungarian.	} Crusaders.
The Lady Calista of Montfaucon, } the Queen's attendants.	Jonas Schwanker, Leopold's jester.
The Lady Florise, } the Queen's attendants.	The Spruch Sprecher, or sayor of sayings.	} Crusaders.
The Earl of Salisbury, "William with the Long Bow," King Richard's natural brother.	Conrade, Marquis of Montserrat.
Sir Thomas de Multon, of Glisland, or Lord de Vaux, master of the horse.	Sir Giles Amaury, Grand Master of the Templars.	} Crusaders.
Sir Henry Neville, chamberlain.	The Archbishop of Tyre.
Blondel de Nesle, a favourite minstrel.	Henry Earl of Champagne.	} Crusaders.
Giacomo Loredani, interpreter.	Enguerrand, brother to the Marquis of Montserrat.
Sir Joceline, an English knight.	Sir Kenneth, the Knight of the Leopard, or David, Earl of Huntingdon, Prince Royal of Scotland, disguised as Zohauk, the Nubian slave.	} Crusaders.
Long Allen, } soldiers in King Henry Woodstall, } Richard's Guard.	Old Strauchan, Sir Kenneth's squire.
Tomallin Black Lees, } soldiers in King Henry Woodstall, } Richard's Guard.	William, King of Scotland.	} Crusaders.
The Headsman, or public executioner.	Theodoric, the hermit of Engaddi, an enthusiast, or Alberick of Mortemar, an exiled noble.

Nectabanus, the dwarf at the hermit's cell.
 Guanevra, his wife.
 Henry II., King of England.
 Rosamond Clifford, his favourite mistress, "The Fair Rosamond."
 Prince John, King Richard's brother,
 Longchamp, Bishop of Ely,
 Geoffrey, Archbishop of York,
 Robin Hood and Little John.
 Saladin, the Soldan of the East, disguised as Sheerkohf, Emir of Kurdistan, and as Adonbeck El Hakim, the physician.
 Abdallah El Hadgi, the Soldan's envoy.
 Hassan, the story-teller, in the retinue of El Hakim, the physician.
 The Charegite assassin, disguised as a Turkish marabout, or enthusiast.
 Ladies, Crusaders, Nobles, Soldiers, Arabians, Attendants, &c. &c.

THE TWO DROVERS.

Robin Oig M'Combich, or MacGregor, a Highland drover.
 Muhme Janet of Tomahourich, his aunt.
 Hugh Morrison, a Lowland drover, his friend.
 Harry Wakefield, an English drover.
 Mr. Ireby, a country squire.
 Master Fleecebumpkin, his bailiff.
 Ralph Heskett, landlord of the village alehouse.
 Dame Heskett, his wife.

The Constable and others at the alehouse.
 The Judge at Robin Oig's trial.
 Highland and Lowland Farmers, Girls, &c.

MY AUNT MARGARET'S MIRROR.

Mrs. Margaret Bothwell, and her nephew, who introduce the story.
 Sir Philip Forester, a libertine knight.
 Lady Jemima Forester, his wife.
 Lady Bothwell, her sister.
 Major Falconer, brother to Lady Bothwell.
 The Family Physician of Lady Bothwell.
 Doc or Baptisti Damioti, a Paduan quack.

THE TAPESTRIED CHAMBER.

Lord Woodville.
 General Browne, his visitor.
 The Apparition of "the Lady in the Sacque."
 Friends of Lord Woodville, Servants, &c.

THE LAIRD'S JOCK.

John Armstrong, the Laird of Manger-ton, called "The Laird's Jock."
 Young Armstrong, his son, the Scottish champion.
 The Laird's daughter.
 Foster, the English champion.
 English and Scottish soldiers.

PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

VOLUME I.

Sir Kenneth, the Knight of the Leopard, crossing the great plain on the borders of the Dead Sea, 23; meets a Saracen, and they encounter, 28; then rest together by the fountain of Palm-trees, 32; and proceed towards the hermit of Engaddi's cell, 48. The hermit affecting madness, meets them, attacks the Saracen, and throws him from his horse, 68; and takes them to his cell, 78. In the night, Sir Kenneth is called up by the hermit, 81; led to the lighted chapel of the convent, 85; and in a procession of nuns there, recognises the Lady Edith, 91. After the ceremony, two dwarfs enter, and sweep the chapel, 99. The hermit does penance with scourges, 104. King Richard's sick couch watched by Sir Thomas Multon, 109. Sir Kenneth arrives in the camp, and introduces an Arabian physician sent from Saladin, 127. The physician attends Sir Kenneth's sick squire, 133, who recovers of his fever, 151. Sir Kenneth called to the King's tent, gives an account of his embassy to the hermit of Engaddi, 157. The King takes the Arabian physician's medicine, in which the talisman is dipped, 172. The Marquis of Montserrat and the Grand Master of the Templars conspire against King Richard, 182. The Archduke of Austria gives a banquet, 188; and at night goes out and plants his standard close to the banner of England, 195. King Richard recovers from the fever, and hearing of the insult to his banner, rushes out, and tears down the Austrian standard, 199; and leaves his banner in charge of Sir Kenneth for the night, 209. The dwarf brings Sir Kenneth a token from the Lady Edith, desiring him to attend her instantly, 213. He leaves his dog with the banner, and goes to her tent, 219. In interview with her, learns the Queen had sent the token in jest, 230. Hurries back, and finds his dog wounded, and the banner stolen, 233. The Arabian physician proposes his going over to Saladin's army, which he refuses, 242. Goes to King Richard, and tells him of the banner stolen, 247. The King is about to strike him dead, but orders him to execution, 249. The Queen, the Lady Edith, and the hermit of Engaddi intercede for his life, 266; but the king denies them all, 275. The Arabian physician intercedes, ib.; and the King consents upon conditions that Sir Kenneth become bond-slave of the physician, 283. The hermit persuades the King not to send a message of defiance to the Archduke of Austria, 286; and relates the history of his own life, 292.

VOLUME II.

The Archbishop of Tyre proposes to the King a truce, by his giving the Lady Edith in marriage to Saladin, 5. The King attends the council of the Princes, 12; and persuades them not to abandon the Crusade, 17. Conspiracy between the Marquis of Montserrat and the Templar, 18. Sir Kenneth, disguised as a dumb Nubian slave, is sent by Saladin a present to the King, 31. A Turkish marabout arrives, and dances before the King's tent, 36. He suddenly springs forward, and is about to stab the King, but the Nubian catches his arm, and the King kills him, 42. The Nubian offers to find out who stole the banner of England, 46. Sir Kenneth, when the King granted his life, left the camp with the physician, 52. The Arab troop on their journey towards the Soldan's camp, prostrate themselves at sunrise, 58. They are pursued, and flee across the desert, 60. Sir Kenneth and the physician rest at the fountain of palm-trees, where they had before met, 65. Sir Kenneth sleeps; on waking, finds himself in the Arabian's pavilion, 68; and recognises in the physician the Saracen he had fought with, 70. The physician disguises Sir Kenneth as a Nubian slave, and sends him to King Richard's camp, with a letter to the Lady Edith, 79. Sir Kenneth, thus disguised, arrives at King Richard's camp. A procession of all the crusading princes round the banner of England on St. George's mount, 81. The Nubian's hound flies upon the Marquis of Montserrat, and drags him from his horse 87-8; King Richard charges him with having stolen the banner, 89. A council of the Princes held, and the quarrel referred to single combat, 98. Sir Kenneth, still in disguise, has an interview with the Lady Edith, and delivers the Soldan's letter, 106. King Richard's favourite minstrel arrives, and sings to him, 111. The King and his retinue, proceeding to the combat, are met by Saladin and his light horseman 133. The King and Saladin embrace, 135. Saladin declares himself to the King as the physician who cured him, 140. The lists prepared, 149. The Marquis of Montserrat, during his confession to the hermit, is interrupted and mocked by the Templar, 152. The encounter, the Marquis is unhorsed, wounded, and avows his guilt, 154. Sir Kenneth, who had acted as the King's champion, is recognised by him, and acknowledged the Prince Royal of Scotland, 161-2. Saladin holds a banquet in his pavilion, the dwarf tells him he had seen the Templar murder the wounded Marquis in his tent, 165. Saladin cuts off the Templar's head while in the act of drinking, 169. The Prince Royal of Scotland is afterwards married to the Lady Edith Plantagenet, 175.

Robin Oig, leaving Doune with Hugh Morrison, is warned by an old sybil not to go, 187. He travels southward with Harry Wakefield, 193. They quarrel about a pasture field for their cattle, 196. Fight at the ale-house and are separated, 203. Robin Oig leaves the house, 205. Returns and stabs Harry Wakefield, 210. Is tried at Carlisle and found guilty, 211. The Judge's impressive charge to the jury on his trial, 212.

Sir Philip Forester leaves his wife in Edinburgh, and goes to the Continent, 241. She and her sister, Lady Bothwell, go to the Paduan doctor's house, and see in the Enchanted Mirror, displayed by him, a picture representing the clandestine marriage and infidelity of Sir Philip, which receives confirmation, 250. Sir Philip appears in disguise to Lady Bothwell at an assembly, on his return from the Continent, 266; and on being detected, escapes, 268.

General Browne arrives on a visit to Lord Woodville, 274; and is appointed to sleep in the Tapestry Chamber, 275. His description, next morning, of the Lady in the Sacque, 281.

The Laird's Jock, an old warrior witnesses a national combat in Liddesdale valley, between his son, the Scottish Champion, and Foster, the English Champion, in which his son is vanquished, 294.

WOODSTOCK.

CHARACTERS INTRODUCED.

Charles the Second, King of England, disguised as a gipsy woman at Woodstock, and as Louis Kerneguy, Albert Lee's page.	Milton.
The Duke of York,	Patrick Carey, the poet.
The Duke of Gloucester,	Sir Jacob Aston, of King Charles I.'s party.
The Earl of Clarendon, Lord Chancellor.	Queen Eleanor, consort of King Henry II.
The Duke of Buckingham,	Rosamond Clifford, "the Fair Rosamond," his favourite mistress.
Lord Wilmot, or Earl of Rochester.	The Mayor of Woodstock.
The Marquis of Hertford,	Oliver Cromwell.
Sir Charles Sedley,	Cromwell's daughter.
Prince Rupert.	Captain Gilbert Pearson, his officer in attendance.
Sir Thomas Acland, a royalist.	Colonel Desborough,
The Marquis of Montrose.	Major-General Harrison,
General Monk.	Master Joshua Bletson,
Sir Henry Lee, an old royalist, and head ranger of Woodstock.	General Lambert, the parliamentary leader.
Alice Lee, his daughter.	Joseph Tomkins, Cromwell's secret agent, formerly Philip Hazeldine, alias "Master Fibbet," Col. Desborough's secretary.
Colonel Albert Lee, his son, King Charles's friend.	Master Bibbet, General Harrison's secretary.
Young Abney, Albert's friend.	Master Gibbet, Bletson's secretary.
Joceline Joliffe, the under-keeper of Woodstock forest.	Zedekiah,
Phoebe Mayflower, servant at Sir Henry Lee's lodge.	Jonathan,
Old Goody Jellcott, servant at the keeper's hut.	Nicodemus,
Old Martin, the verdurer, near the lodge.	Colonel Markham Everard, of the Commonwealth party.
Mrs. Aylmer, a neighbour of Sir Henry Lee.	Master Everard, his father.
Dr. Anthony Rochecliffe, a plotting royalist, formerly Joseph Albany.	Corporal Grace-be-here Humgudgeon,
Master Purefoy, his former tutor.	Rev. Mr. Gordon, chaplain,
Roger Wildrake, a dissipated royalist.	Colonel Overton,
Will Spittal, or Spitfire, his serving boy.	Colonel Thornhaugh,
Shakespeare.	Ephraim Cobb,
Ben Jonson.	Zerubbabel Robins,
Will D'Avenant, supposed descendant of Shakespeare, Wildrake's friend.	Merciful Strickalthrow, Master Nehemiah Holdemough, a Presbyterian preacher.
	Courtiers, Officers, Soldiers, Domestic, &c.

PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

VOLUME I.

Description of the dismantled church at Woodstock, 57. The presbyterian pastor ejected from his pulpit by a military preacher, 63. Tomkins overhears old Sir Henry Lee, and his daughter Alice in the park, 77; and produces his warrant from the parliament to take possession of the royal lodge, 88. Sir Henry Lee fights with him, but is disarmed, and afterwards agrees to surrender the lodge, 91. Description of the lodge, 104. Sir Henry and Alice retire to the underkeeper's hut, where they meet Markham Everard, 124; whom Sir Henry taunts as a rebel, 127. Everard finds Wildrake in the park, 139; who tells him he had frightened Tomkins in the lodge, 146. Everard writes to Cromwell, interceding for the Lees, 159; and sends his letter by Wildrake, 166; who arrives at Windsor Castle, and delivers the letter to Cromwell, 177. Cromwell desires him to report any movement of King Charles, 190. His agitation on looking at the portrait of King Charles I., 196. His daughter enters the room and takes him away, 199. He gives Wildrake a warrant for the Parliamentary Commissioners to leave the lodge to the Lees' family, 202. Wildrake returns to Woodstock, and gives the warrant to Everard, 203; who sends for the mayor, 205; and goes with him and Hold-enough to the lodge, 228. Description of the three commissioners, 230. During interview with them a noise like thunder is heard in the house, 250. Everard searches the secret gallery, where he hears a voice which he mistakes for that of Alice Lee, 253. He is disarmed, and compelled to swear secrecy, 256; and rides to the hut, where he finds Sir Henry and Alice at prayers, 264. Sir Henry refuses to accept the lodge at the hands of Cromwell, 270. Alice charges Everard with a promise to betray the king, which he denies, 273. He tells Wildrake of the king's escape from Bristol, 278. They meet General Harrison roving in the park, 281, whither he had been led by a sham ghost, 284. Wildrake fights him, 289. Everard sleeps at the lodge, and hears strange music at night, 302. A figure appears, and defies him; he fires a pistol through it, but it mocks him, 308. He hears how the commissioners had been alarmed, their beds turned up, &c., 319; and shows them Cromwell's warrant, 326. They consult and determine to leave the lodge, and retire to Woodstock, 332. Hold-enough tells Everard of a siege during the civil wars, 336; where his college friend was butchered, 341; and of his having seen his spirit last night, 343.

VOLUME II.

Sir Henry returns to the lodge, 5; and fences with Tomkins, 8. Alice meets the king disguised as a gipsy woman at Rosamond's fountain, 18. The dog Bevis comes to her help, the gipsy threatens to shoot it, 15; and drops a ring into Alice's pitcher, 18. Alice watches her father while he sleeps, 25; and sees by moonlight a man climbing up the wall; wakes her father; a stranger enters by the window, and is cut down by Sir Henry, who swoons on hearing it is his son Albert, 26-29. Albert is unhurt, and Sir Henry recovers, 30. Albert's Scotch page (the king disguised) introduced at supper, 38. Wildrake joins, and is recognised by Sir Henry as a former comrade, 48. The next day Albert consults with Dr. Rochecliffe about the king's safety, 74. Alice gives the page a loyal description of the king, 90. The page's intimacy with Alice, 111, noticed by Phœbe Mayflower, who tells Everard her suspicions, 113. The page is followed into the park by Everard, 115; who mistakes him for Lord Wilmot, shows him the ring that was dropt into Alice's pitcher, and charges him with dishonourable intentions towards her, 121. They fight, and are separated by Sir Henry, 124; who afterwards quarrels with Everard for preferring Milton to Shakspeare, 140. The page presses his suit to Alice, and declares himself the king, 150. She remonstrates with and leaves him, 158. Wildrake brings him a challenge from Everard, 161. The doctor and Alice concert a plan for preventing the duel, 169; and conceal themselves at the place appointed, 178. Wildrake comes to the ground and fences at the doctor, 180. Everard and the supposed page arrive, and begin to fight, 186. Alice is brought forward, and parts them, ib. Everard offended with her, leaves the ground, 191. The supposed page follows him, and declares himself the king, 192. Everard kisses his hand, 198. Phœbe joined by Tomkins at the fountain, 213; who, proposing dishonour to and attempting to seize her, she strikes him with a large pebble, 218. He pursues her; Joceline comes to her assistance; Tomkins fires at him, but Joceline strikes him dead with his quarter-staff, 219. Everard, Holdenough, and Wildrake suddenly visited by Cromwell at night, 225. Wildrake privately sends his boy to alarm the lodge, 230. Cromwell reproaches Everard for secreting the king, 238. Wildrake strikes at Cromwell with his sword, and is made prisoner, 236. Cromwell places Everard and Holdenough under arrest, 241. Albert Lee arrives at the lodge with advice for the king to embark the next day, 247. The dog brings in Tomkins's bloody glove, and Joceline with the doctor go out to bury the body, 251. Wildrake's boy brings the alarm of Cromwell's arrival, 260. The king declares himself to Sir Henry Lee, 262; changes dresses with Albert, and escapes with Alice for his guide, 267. Cromwell advances with his troops towards the lodge, 278. They discover the doctor and Joceline burying Tomkins, and arrest them, 282. Indecision of Cromwell on arriving before the lodge, 288. Sir Henry refuses to open the door, 293, which is effected by the gunpowder of the besiegers, 295. Sir Henry and Phœbe Mayflower examined, 298. The secret entrance behind the old picture opened, 304; the private passages searched, 306. Albert in the king's dress seen in the turret near Rosamond's Tower, 312. The turret undermined with gunpowder, 316. Albert leaps across to the tower, and kills Cromwell's sentinel, the mine explodes, and the turret falls, 317. Albert is brought before Cromwell, who discovers the deception, and orders him and the other prisoners for execution next morning, 321. Wildrake is brought in tipsy, and sings, 323. The doctor and Holdenough in prison recognise each other as old college friends, 332. They are all told to prepare for death, 335. Pearson reports to Cromwell that he had not executed the prisoners, and Cromwell orders their liberation, 338. Albert Lee goes abroad, 343. Alice brings a letter from the king to her father, recommending his consent to her marriage with Everard, 345. They are married, 349. Marriage of Joceline Joliffe with Phœbe Mayflower, ib. Albert Lee slain in battle, abroad, 350. Cromwell dies, 351. Wildrake brings the king news of the change in political affairs, 353. The king's triumphant procession towards London, 355. He dismounts on recognising Sir Henry Lee's family group on the roadside, 357, and the old knight, after giving the king his blessing, dies upon the spot, 360.

THE FAIR MAID OF PERTH.

CHARACTERS INTRODUCED.

Mr. Chrystal Croftangry.	} in the Introductory Chapter.	King Robert's eldest son, the Prince of Scotland.
Mrs. Polley, the house-keeper at Holyrood.		Prince James, the King's youngest son.
Mrs. Ballol, Mr. Croftangry's friend.		Archibald, Earl of Douglas.
Robert the Third, King of Scotland.		Marjory of Douglas, his daughter,
Queen Annabella, his consort.		Duchess of Rothesay.
Robert, Duke of Albany, his brother.		Lord Balveny, his kinsman.
Murdoch, Duke of Albany, Duke Robert's son and successor.		"The Devil's Dick of Helgarth," the falconer, a follower of the Earl of Douglas.
Prince Robert, Duke of Rothesay,

268 FAIR MAID OF PERTH—PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

Buncle, messenger to the Earl of Douglas.	the armourer, Catharine Glover's lover.
George, Earl of Dunbar and March.	Dame Shoolbred, his foster-mother.
Elizabeth of Dunbar, his daughter.	Little Jenniken, his apprentice.
Gilbert, Earl of Errol, Lord High Constable of Scotland.	Anton, Cuthbert, Dingwall, Ringan, &c., his workmen.
Lindsay, Earl of Crawford, the young Earl-Marshal of Scotland.	Louise, the glee-maiden.
MacLouis, Captain of the King's Guard.	May Bridget, the milkwoman, at Falkland castle.
Sir John Ramorny, the Prince's master of the horse.	Conachar, the old Glover's Highland apprentice; or Eachin MacIain, chief of the Clan Quhele.
Eriot, his page.	Gilchrist MacIain, his father, the former chief.
Black Quentin, his groom.	Torquill of the Oak, Eachin's foster-father.
Anthony Bonthron, the murderer, one of Ramorny's followers.	Norman Nan Ord, or Norman of the Hammer, one of Torquill's eight sons.
Kenneth, one of Ramorny's followers.	Tormot, Torquill's youngest son.
Edgar, one of the Prince's attendants.	Eva, Torquill's daughter.
William Watkins, the Englishman.	Niel Booshalloch, the MacIain's cow-herd.
Sir Patrick Charteris, of Kinfauns, Provost of Perth.	Mac Gillie Chattanach, chief of the Clan Chattan.
Gilbert, his butler.	Toahach Beg, his second at the combat.
Gerard, his attendant.	Ferquhard Day, the absentee from the Clan Chattan at the combat.
Kitt Henshaw, his boatman.	Donald Cormack, a highland robber chief.
The Rev. Sir Louis Lundin, town-clerk of Perth.	Henry of Wardlaw, Archbishop of St. Andrews.
Adam Craigdallie, eldest bailie of Perth.	Prior Anselm, of St. Dominic, the king's confessor.
Simon Glover, the old glover of Perth.	Brother Cyprian, a Dominican monk at the monastery.
Catharine Glover, his daughter, "THE FAIR MAID OF PERTH."	Father Francis, ditto, confessor to Simon Glover.
Old Dorothy, their housekeeper.	Father Clement Blair, a Carthusian monk. Catharine's confessor.
Oliver Proudpute, the boasting bonnet-maker.	Father Walthoof, a grey friar, confessor to the Duchess of Rothesay.
Magdalen, or Mandie Proudpute, his widow.	The Abbess Martha, of Elcho Nunnery, kinswoman to the Glovers.
Henbane Dwining, the pottingar, or apothecary.	Courtiers, Officers, Soldiers, Retainers, Citizens, Revellers, &c.
Allan Griffin, landlord of the Griffin inn.
Wingfield, the feather-dresser.
Wabster, Crookshank, Glass, Balneaves, Rollock, Chrysteson, citizens.
Stephen Smotherwell, the executioner.
Blind Harry, the minstrel.
Henry Gow, or Henry Smith, or "Gow Chrom," or "Hal of the Wynd,"

PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

VOLUME I.

A distant view of Perth, 28. Catharine, the fair maid of Perth, going to high mass with her father the glover, is accosted by a young nobleman, 36. Henry Smith the armourer, her lover, sups with them, 45. Conachar the apprentice, quarrels with Smith, and attempts to stab him, 51. Catharine entreats Smith to avoid fighting, 58. Smith, going to the glover's at daybreak, attacks a party who are breaking into the house, 76. The glover admits one of the party (the Prince) and lets him escape, 82. A man's hand picked up in the street, 84. Catharine kisses Smith while asleep on St. Valentine's morning, 95. Conachar leaves the glover's house for the Highlands, 106. Smith sues Catharine, but she refuses him, 114. The citizens hold a council about the affray in the street, 118; and resolve to go to Kinfauns and consult Sir Patrick Charteris, the provost, 126. History of his family, 130. On the way to his castle, Oliver, the bonnet-maker, interrupts a Highlander hawking, and is robbed, 142. Interview of the Provost with the citizens, 153. The hand is produced, and Sir Patrick promises his assistance, 158. Character of King Robert III. and his family, 160. His confession to Prior Anselm at the palace, 166. The glee-maiden sings under the palace window, 184. Tumult in the courtyard, 188. The young prince kisses the glee-maiden, and quarrels with his father-in-law, the Earl of Douglas, 196. The prince places the glee-maiden under the protection of Smith, 203; who takes her to his house, 222. The king holds a council, 230. The hand taken down from the city cross is produced by the Earl of Douglas, 233. The Earls of Douglas and March quarrel, and the latter quits the court in anger, 234. Feud between the Highland Clans Chattan and Quhele to be decided by combat of their leaders, 242. A commission issued for the punishment of heresy, 248. The king makes the prince dismiss Ramorny from his service, 254. Catharine and her confessor, Father Clement, alarmed by Highlanders among the rocks, 267. Conachar, now Eochin, appears as their chief, 269; and promises protection to Father Clement, 272. Ramorny wounded, is attended by Dwining the apothecary, 276. A follower of Ramorny employed to murder Smith, 285. Oliver the bonnet-maker stopped in the street by revellers in masques, 303; goes to Smith's house for protection, 306; and returning home in Smith's armour is murdered, 315. The Prince and other masquers break into Ramorny's sick room, 319. Ramorny shows the prince his mutilated arm, 324. Bonthron tells them he has murdered Smith, 325. Ramorny proposes treason to the prince, who threatens to expose him, 329.

VOLUME II.

The bonnet-maker's dead body found, and mistaken for that of Smith, 5. Uproar among the citizens, 6. Catharine rushes through the crowd to Smith's house, and finds him safe, 19. Her father comes in, 26; and persuades Smith to revenge the bonnet-maker, 31. The Town Council meet, and petition for ordeal of touching the bier for detection of the murderer, 35. The widow appoints the Provost and Smith her champions, 49-50. They charge Ramorny and his followers with the murder, which they deny, and the king appoints the ordeal, 65. Ramorny and the apothecary plan the escape of Bonthron, 71. The apothecary taken to the dead body, which bleeds at his approach, 82. He cures Oliver's sick child, 83. Ceremony of touching the bier held in the church, 86. The murderer refuses the ordeal, and demands that of combat instead, 94. The Smith offers to be champion for the widow, ib. The fight in the lists, 97. The murderer defeated, declares his guilt, and that he was instigated by the prince, ib. The king's brother, the Duke of Albany, gets the prince arrested, 102. The Smith dines with the town council, and receives their public thanks, 105. The murderer is hanged, 110; but cut down at night by the apothecary and restored to life, 118. Catharine tells her father they are accused of heresy, 127. The Provost recommends their instant flight, 134. They go to his castle, 138. Account of Conachar, alias Eachin's Highland family, 140. The Provost promises Catharine the Duchess of Rothesay's protection, 144. The glover goes to seek his protection in the Highlands, 149. The glover hears that Eachin, by the death of his father, is now chief of the Clan Quhele, 153. The funeral fleet cross Loch Tay, 161; and form procession for installation of the new chief, 171. The glover attends Eachin's sylvan banquet, 173; and rejects his proposal of marriage with Catharine, 189. Eachin declares himself a coward, and afraid of the approaching combat of the clans, 194. The glover overhears his plan of escape, by seducing away one of the opposite party, 203. News arrive of the heresy commission being withdrawn, 207. The prince in confinement, invites Ramorny to visit him, 209. They get into the prince's boat, 218; hear the glee-maiden's lute on the Tay, and take her into the boat, 222; land at night and ride to Falkland castle, 226. Catharine arriving there, is received by the prince, disguised as the duchess, 232. The prince is carried asleep into the castle dungeon, 242. Bonthron, as his jailer, insults him and leaves him to starve, ib. Catharine and the glee-maiden put food in at his window, 247-8. The glee-maiden escapes, and informs the Earl Douglas of the prince's situation, 250. The prince is murdered, 253. Ramorny threatens to throw Catharine from the castle wall, 255. His men refuse to defend the castle, 256. The Earl of Douglas arrives, 261. The prince's dead body found in the dungeon, 262. Ramorny declares that the king's brother had advised the prince's confinement, 264. The apothecary, Bonthron, and Sir John Ramorny, in circumstances of previous degradation, are executed, 264. The Smith sends Eachin a mailed coat on condition of his fighting him in it, 280. Earl Douglas informs the king's brother of the prince's death, 283. The clans of Chattan and Quhele attend mass previous to their combat, 287. A man missing in the Clan Chattan, 291; a proposal to leave out Eachin on the other side is refused, 294. Proclamation for a volunteer on the Chattan side, 296. Smith leaps into the lists, 297. The widow brings him armour, 298. The combat and the slaughter, 301. Eachin's eight foster-brothers, and his foster-father, cut down one by one in his defence, 305-7. The standard-bearers and minstrels join the fight, and destroy each other, 309. Eachin's comrades all killed, his heart fails, and he runs away from Smith, 313. The Earl of Douglas offers knighthood to Smith, which he declines, 314. The old king hears of the prince's death, 319. Charges his brother, the Duke of Albany, with it, and banishes him from his presence, 322. Eachin appears to Catharine and the glee-maiden, casts himself down a precipice, and is lost, 332. Smith protects the glee-maiden, and marries Catharine, the Fair Maid of Perth, 335-6.

ANNE OF GEIERSTEIN.

CHARACTERS INTRODUCED.

Queen Margaret of Anjou, widow of King Henry VI. of England; disguised as a mendicant at Strasburg cathedral.	René, the old King of Provence, Margaret of Anjou's father.
Mordaunt, her secretary at Aix.	Yolande of Anjou, his daughter.
Henry of Lancaster, Earl of Richmond.	Count Ferrand de Vaudemont, Duke of Lorraine, her son; first disguised as Laurenz Neipperg.
The Duke of Milan, an Italian prince, an ally of the Lancastrians.	The Seneschal, Hugh de St. Cyr.
Edward IV. King of England.	The Countess de Boisgelin.
George, Duke of Clarence,	Sigismund, Emperor of Austria.
Richard, Duke of Gloucester,	The Duke of Bretagne.
Hastings, Howard, & Stanley,	Peter Landais, his favourite minister.
Louis XI. King of France.	Sir Archibald von Hagenbach, a German noble.
"Oliver le Diable," his favourite minister.	Kilian of Kersberg, his esquire.
"Tristram of the Hospital, his provost-marshal.	Schonfelt, his lieutenant.
Trois Echelles, } his public execution-	Francis Steinernherz von Blutfacker, his executioner.
Petit André, } ers.	Magistrates, &c. of Bâle.
"Charles the Bold," Duke of Burgundy.	John Mengs, the innkeeper at Kirchhoff.
The Archbishop of Vienne, chancellor of Burgundy.	Old Timothy, the hostler
The Marshal of Burgundy, } officers of the Duke of Burgundy.	Geoffrey, the old waiter.
Sir Henry Colvin,	Father Gratian, the begging friar.
The Count de Campo Basso,	Brother Bartholomew, the guide towards Strasburg.
Le Sieur de Craon,	Thiebault, a Provençal.
Le Sieur d'Argentin,	Antonio, the Swiss guide from Lucerne.
Le Sieur de Contay,	Hans, the pious ferryman on the Rhine.
Monseigneur de la Croye,	John, Earl of Oxford, an exiled Lancastrian nobleman; first disguised as the elder Phillipson.
Toison d'Or, the Burgundian herald.	The Countess of Oxford, his wife.
The Mayor of Dijon.	Sir Arthur de Vere, their son; first disguised as the younger Phillipson.
Le Sieur de Myrebeau, } of the Committee of Estates	Martha Nixon, the Earl's old nurse.
Martin Block, } of Burgundy.

272 ANNE OF GEIERSTEIN—PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

Arnold Biederman, the Landamman of Unterwalden; alias Count Arnold of Geierstein.	Count Willewald, of Geierstein, Count Arnold's father.
Bertha, his late wife.	The Baron Herman Von Arnheim, Anne of Geierstein's grandfather,	} characters mentioned in Donnerhugel's narrative.
Rudiger Biederman,	Caspar, his master of the horse,
Ernest Biederman,	Dannischemend, the Persian sorcerer,
Sigismund Biederman, "the Simple,"	Hermione, his daughter,
Ulric Biederman,	The Countess of Waldstetten,
Rudolph Donnerhugel, their cousin.	The young Duke of Hochspringen,
Theodore Donnerhugel, their uncle.	The Bishop of Bamberg,
Count Albert of Geierstein, brother of Arnold Biederman, disguised as the Black Priest of St. Paul's; as the President of the Secret Tribunal; and as the Monk of St. Victoire.	The old Baroness of Steinfeldt,
ANNE OF GEIERSTEIN, "The Maiden of the Mist," his daughter; alias the Baroness of Arnheim.	Nicolas Bonstetten, the old deputy of Schwitz,
Sybilla of Arnheim, her mother.	Melchior, Sturmthal, the banneret of Berne,
Annette Vellechen, the Baroness Anne's attendant.	Adam Zimmerman, the burgher of Soleure,
William, a servant at Arnheim castle.	Sir Adrian de Bubenberg, a veteran knight of Berne.
Louis Sprenger, Annette's bachelor.	Members of the Secret Tribunal, or the Court of the Holy Vehm.
Marthon, an old cook at Arnheim castle.	The Abbot and others at St. Mary's Convent, on Mont St. Victoire, at Aix.
Ital Schreckenwald, Count Albert's steward.	Monks, Officers, Soldiers, Attendants, &c.
Melchior, a monk.
Count Heinrich, of Geierstein, Count Arnold's grandfather.

PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

VOLUME I.

The two Philipsons discovered crossing the mountains towards Lucerne, 26. They pass Mount Pilatre during an eruption, 32. Their guide loses his way, Arthur climbs along the edge of a precipice, 48. The rock slips from under him, and he clings to the root of a tree, 51. Anne of Geierstein comes to his assistance, 55. They proceed to the castle of Geierstein, where they meet his father, and her uncle and cousins, 69. They all dine in the old hall, 74. Arthur, with the English bow, shoots at and hits the pigeon, 88. Rudolph Donnerhugel challenges him to fight, 92. Arnold Biederman tells the elder Philipson his family history, that he is Count of Geierstein, and Anne his niece left to his care by her father in exile, 94. Duel between Arthur and Rudolph in the castle court at sunrise, in which Rudolph is wounded, 111. They are separated by the old landamman, and shake hands, 117. The deputation of the Swiss league assemble at Geierstein castle, 129. Their journey towards Bâle, on a mission to the Duke of Burgundy, 180. The magistrates of Bâle meet them, and say they cannot then be received into the city, 138. They proceed for the night to the ruins of Graffs-lust, 144; and station sentinels round the ruins, 148. Arthur keeps guard on the bridge, 155; and sees Anne of Geierstein cross it by moonlight and leave the ruins, 160. He joins Rudolph in his patrol, 166. Sees her again pass him in the forest, 178. Tells Rudolph of it, 176. Rudolph introduces him to a party of Swiss patriots, 179. Donnerhugel's narrative of the family of Arnheim, 197; of the Persian sorcerer coming to the baron for protection, 200; and after his departure, of his beautiful daughter's arrival, 205; of the Baron marrying her, 210; and of her mysterious disappearance after the christening of their daughter, the mother of Anne of Geierstein, 214. Rudolph and Arthur return to the ruins, ib.; the patrol on the bridge reports that he had seen Anne cross it and enter the ruins, 219. Arthur and his father leave the ruins at daybreak, 229. De Hagenbach, the governor of La Ferette, has notice of their approach, 237; and arms the garrison, 239. The Black Priest of St. Paul's appears before the governor, and warns him, 243. The two Philipsons brought bound before the governor in the prison, 252. They are examined, searched, and a sealed packet for the Duke of Burgundy is taken from the elder Philipson, 257. They are ordered to separate dungeons, 259. The governor opens the packet, 261; and orders the execution of the two prisoners, 263. Arthur is released by Anne of Geierstein and the Black Priest, 269. She disappears; the priest gives him a monk's robe, 272; conducts him to the city walls, and he escapes across the moat, 276; and joins Rudolph's party, 278. They advance towards the city, 284; enter it, and are surrounded by De Hagenbach's troops, 291; who are overpowered by a party of armed citizens, 295. Arthur, in search of his father with Arnold Biederman, enter his dungeon, and are locked in, but the door is afterwards opened, 296. Governor De Hagenbach executed by the mob, 299. The Swiss deputies invite the elder Philipson to a counsel in the church, 311. The packet returned to him, 316. He undertakes to procure the deputies an interview with the Duke of Burgundy, 319. The two Philipsons proceed towards Strasburg, 324; are overtaken by Anne of Geierstein and her two followers on horseback, hawking, 330. She warns them of danger, and directs them to alter their route and cross the Rhine, 331.

VOLUME II.

Arthur leaves his father, and crosses the Rhine, 6. The father enters the Chapel of the Ferry with the guide, 8. The Black Priest of St. Paul's enters, and discovers the guide's intended treachery, ib.; and accompanies the elder Philipson to an inn at the next village, 16. The elder Philipson goes to the inn at Kirch-hoff, 17; and joins the public supper of the surly landlord, 26; after which the Black Priest arrives, 34. Philipson is shown into a small bed-room, 38. In the night his bed is let down through a trap-door into a large apartment beneath, 41. He is bound and brought before the Secret Tribunal, sitting by torch-light, 42. Accused of having reviled the Institution, 52. Acquitted by the Black Priest, the presiding judge, 58. His bed raised again, 59; next morning he quits the inn, 60. Arthur, on his road towards Strasburg, meets Anne of Geierstein's attendant, who invites him to the castle of Arnheim, 64; where he is received by Anne, now Baroness of Arnheim, 85; who explains at dinner her mysterious appearances at the ruins of Graffs-Just, &c. 92; and he declares his rank as Sir Arthur De Vere, and his love of her, 95. Ital Schreckenwald, the steward, enters, 99; tells them of an insurrection in the neighbouring village, and that they must leave the castle, 100. She orders him to provide for Arthur's accompanying them, 102. In the morning the party mount and leave the castle, 106. As they pass through the village a sentinel awakes and fires, 108; the village is alarmed, but the party escape, 109. They reach Strasburg, and at parting, she gives Arthur a gold chain, 112. He joins his father, 115. They go to the cathedral, where they see Queen Margaret of Anjou disguised as a mendicant, 116. She makes herself known to Arthur, 120; and tells his father (the Earl of Oxford) of some new political movement, 127. At parting gives Arthur a gold chain, 132. The party, with one of the Duke of Burgundy's pursuivants, arrive at the duke's camp, 138. Interview between the duke and the Earl of Oxford, 136. The duke promises his assistance for Queen Margaret, 144; and at the Earl's entreaty, countermands execution of the Swiss deputies, 151. Arthur ordered by his father to go to Queen Margaret at King René's court at Aix, 157. The Duke overhears them, and enters their tent, 158. Arthur proceeds with an escort towards Aix, 166. The Duke goes in state to the council at Dijon, 171. The Committee of the Estates of Burgundy refuse him certain supplies, 178. The Swiss deputies called in, 182. Arnold Biederman sues for peace, and Donnerhugel speaks intemperately, 188. The Duke, enraged, dismisses them with defiance and threats, and breaks up the council, 194. Hears of a treaty between England and France, 197, and prepares for an attack upon the Swiss frontiers, 201. Character of the good old King René, 209. Arthur arrives at Aix with his guide, 215, and has an audience with the king, 220. The guide's account of the old king's musical mummeries, 228. Arthur goes to the convent on Mont St. Victoire, 232; where he has an audience with Queen Margaret, who tells him of her sorrows, 235. A monk brings him a letter from his father, and communicates with him, 244. On leaving the convent, he finds that the monk ought not to have been trusted, 249. He returns, but too late; the monk knew the queen's secret, and had escaped, 250. Queen Margaret persuades her father to sign a resignation of his kingdom of Provence to the Duke of Burgundy, 257; but he refuses to renounce the cause of his grandson, Count Ferrand, 268. Ferrand enters, and informs them of the victory gained by the Swiss over the duke, ib. Sigismund gives Arthur an account of the battle at Granson, 266. The queen bids Arthur leave Aix and join his father, 281. She dies in the ball-room, 284. The Earl of Oxford attends her funeral, 287. Sir Henry Colvin informs them of the Duke's second and total defeat at Morat, 296; and prays the Earl of Oxford to go to the duke's camp, 302. They go to the duke at the castle of La Rivière, ib. The duke reproached for inactivity, rouses himself and reviews his troops, 306; and orders another attack on the Swiss at Nancy, 314. Arthur receives a challenge from Donnerhugel, 315. The duke disturbed at night by a summons from the secret tribunal, 317. Arthur meets Donnerhugel, and kills him in combat, 321. The Count Albert of Geierstein rides up to him, and consents to his marriage with the count's daughter, 322. Arthur hears of a challenge between his father and the Count Campo Basso, 328; and tells the duke of his rencontre with Donnerhugel, 329. The Earl of Oxford and Arthur reconnoitre at daybreak, and find the outposts deserted by the Italian, Campo Basso, 334. The Swiss attack and fire the camp, 337. The earl and Arthur ride after the duke, 338; they find him and Count Albert dead in the snow, ib. They surrender to the Swiss party, 340. The earl, with his countess and Arthur, settle in Switzerland, and Arthur marries Anne of Geierstein, 347-8.

274 ANNE OF GEIERSTEIN—PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

COUNT ROBERT OF PARIS.

CHARACTERS INTRODUCED.

Alexius Comnenus, emperor of Greece.	The Logothete, or Chancellor of the Empire.
Irene, his empress.	Michael Cantacuzone, the grand sewer.
Anna Comnena, the historian, their daughter.	Douban, the emperor's physician.
Nicephorus Briennius, the Cæsar of the empire, her husband.	Michael Agelastes, the cynic philosopher.
The Sebastocrator, or Protosebastos, the highest state officer.	Nicanor, the protospathaire, or general.
Zosimus, the patriarch of the Greek Church.	Achilles Tatius, the acolyte, an officer of the Varangian guard.
	Phraortes, the Greek admiral.

276 COUNT ROBERT OF PARIS—PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

Zedekias Ursel, the former rival of the emperor, imprisoned.	Toxartis, a Scythian soldier.
Narses, a domestic slave of the emperor.	Diogenes, the negro slave of Agelastes.
Astarte, { attendants on the princess.	The Princess Zullichium, / in the intro-
Violante, {	Sir Artavan de Hautlieu, / duced story.
Hereward, one of the emperor's Varan-	COUNT ROBERT OF PARIS, one of the cru-gian guards.	sading princes.
Edward, brother of Hereward, killed in battle.	Brenhilda de Aspramonte, his coun-
Edric, a domestic at Hereward's bar-	ness.
racks.	The old Knight of Aspramonte, her father.
Engelbrecht, { Varangian guards.	The Lady of Aspramonte, her mother.
Old Osmund, {	Launcelot, their bard.
Vexbella, the wife of Osmund.	Marcian, Count Robert's armourer.
Bertha, alias Agatha, betrothed to Hereward.	Hugh, Count of Vermandois,
Martha, alias Urica, her mother.	Bohemond, Prince of Antioch,
Harpax, the centurion,	Godfrey, Duke of Bouillon,
Ismael, the infidel,	Count Baldwin, his brother,
Sebastes of Mytilene, the assassin,	Raymond, Count of Toulouse,
Stephanos Castor, the wrestler.	Tancred, Prince of Otranto,
Lysimachus, the artist.	Peter the Hermit,
Corydon, the shoemaker.	Ernest of Otranto, page to Prince Tan-
Demetrius, { citizens.	cred.
Læcarts, {	Polydore, his comrade.
	Crusaders, Arabs, Soldiers, Domestics, Slaves, &c.

PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

VOLUME I.

Description of the Golden Gate of Constantinople, 43. Hereward, the Varangian guard, discovered asleep there, 54. The Greek sentinel attempts to assassinate him, 64. He wakes, his officer arrives, and the Greek escapes, 65. Hereward goes with his officer, Achilles Tattius, to the Blacquernal palace, 79. Hereward, left in the black marble hall, is conducted to the apartment of the princess, 86; who reads aloud part of her history of the retreat of Laodicea, 105-8; and presents Hereward with a ring, 124. Her husband, the Cæsar, informs of the arrival of the crusaders, 139. Hereward is followed on the terrace by a black slave, 173; who conducts him to the ruins of the temple of Cybele, 175; where he sees Agelastes the Cynic, 180; who is afterwards joined by Achilles Tattius, 189. Their conspiracy, ib. The crusading princes pay homage to the emperor, 199. During the ceremony, Count Robert of Paris seats himself on the vacant throne, 206. He returns to Constantinople with his Countess Brenhilda, 215. They meet Agelastes, 222; who tells them a story of an enchanted princess and her lover, 225. They go home with him, 236. The countess kills a Scythian soldier on the road, 241. The emperor's family come on elephants to the house of Agelastes, 251. They all sup there, 259. Count Robert challenged by Hereward to fight, 269. The emperor gives Agelastes charge of the menagerie, 280. The count and his wife introduced to the emperor's state apartments, 235. He destroys one of the moving golden lions of Solomon at the throne, 237. The state banquet, 291. The count drinks from a drugged cup, 295.

VOLUME II.

At night, is carried from his bed to a dungeon in the Blacquernal palace, where he kills a tiger, and finds his way to the dungeon of Ursel, the blind prisoner, 5. An ourang outang let down into the dungeon, 19. The count wounds it, 25. The jailer, in search of it, is killed by the count, 29. Hereward, come to rescue the jailer, wrestles with the count, ib. The ourang outang saves the count's life, and escapes, 30. Agelastes and Tattius meet again at the ruins in conspiracy, 35. The Cæsar admitted to the ruins where the Countess Brenhilda is detained, 43. The count and Hereward escaped, enter the garden, and overhear an interview between the Cæsar and the countess, 57. She challenges the Cæsar to single combat, 65. The count remains concealed in Hereward's barracks, 71. Hereward reports to Tattius the escape of the count, 75. Hereward meets Bertha, his betrothed, in the garden, pursued by the ourang outang, 80. The early history of Bertha and her family, 85. The emperor discovers the conspiracy, 106, and permits Hereward to go over to the crusaders' camp, 115. Proclamation of combat between the Cæsar and Count Robert, 120. Bertha goes, instead of Hereward, to the crusaders' camp, 129; and is introduced to their council, 132. A detachment of their force ordered to witness the combat, 137. The troop, to elude their vow of not turning their backs upon the Holy Land, march backward to embark at Scutari, 141. The emperor, in disguise, is warned by Agelastes of danger in the city, 147. He goes to the patriarch's palace, and confesses, 149. Agelastes strangled by the ourang outang, in presence of the countess, 163. The emperor takes his daughter to Ursel's dungeon, and proposes him for her future husband, 168. She leans on Hereward on the dungeon staircase, 173. Goes to the empress's apartment, and is reconciled to her husband the Cæsar, 180. He is seized, 196. Ursel released, and has the use of his sight, 198. He views the city from the castle terrace, 201. The emperor arranges terms with him, 210. The lists prepared for the combat, 212. The sea-fight between the crusaders and the Greeks, seen from the high cape, near Constantinople, 217. Landing of the crusaders, 228. Achilles Tattius ordered away upon special duty, 232. Procession to the execution of the Cæsar, 240. He is pardoned at the altar of Constantine, 245. The emperor proceeds in state to the lists, joined by the crusaders' troop, 251. Ursel appears, and addresses the public, 256. The herald announces the death of Agelastes, and pardon of all the other conspirators, 259. Combat between Count Robert and Hereward, with battle-axes, 264. Hereward enlists under Count Robert's banner, 268, and marries Bertha, his betrothed, 278. Conclusion of the history of the emperor, ib.

THE SURGEON'S DAUGHTER,
AND
CASTLE DANGEROUS.

CHARACTERS INTRODUCED.

THE SURGEON'S DAUGHTER.		Madame Adela Montreville, or the Begum Mootee Mahul, called "The Queen of Sheba."
Dr. Gideon Gray, the surgeon at Middlemas.		Paupiah, the British governor's Hindoo steward,
Mrs. Gray.		Mr. Esdale, a surgeon,
Menie Gray, their daughter.		The Lieut.-Colonel of Fort George,
Bet Jamieson, a nurse at Dr. Gray's.		Mr. Butler, the military chaplain,
Jean Simson, } old women.	} at Middlemas.	Major Mercer,
Peg Tamson, }		Quarter-Master Calder,
Alison Jaup, }		Captain Capstern, captain of the Indiaman,
Mr. Goodriche, a Catholic priest,		Captain Seelencoper, of the military hospital at Ryde.
The King's messenger.		The Patients in the hospital.
Mr. Lawford, the town clerk.		Soldiers, Villagers, Domestic, Slaves, &c.
General Witherington; or Richard Tresham; first as Matthew Middlemas.
Mrs. General Witherington; or Zilia de Moncada; first as Mrs. Middlemas.
Richard Middlemas, their son; or Richard Tresham.
Matthias de Moncada, a merchant, Mrs. Witherington's father.		CASTLE DANGEROUS.
Tom Hillary, Mr. Lawford's apprentice; Captain Hillary.		The Lady Augusta Berkely (first in disguise as Augustine, the minstrel's son).
Adam Hartley, Dr. Gray's apprentice; Dr. Hartley.		Bertram, the English minstrel, her guide.
Mr. MacFittoch, dancing-master at Middlemas.		Sir John de Walton, governor of Douglas castle.
The Young Laird of Louponheight.		Sir Aymer de Valence, his lieutenant.
Winter, General Witherington's head servant.		The Earl of Pembroke, Sir Aymer's uncle.
Hyder Ali, Khan Behauder, the Nawaub of Mysore; disguised as the Scheik Halli.		Sir Phillip de Montenay, an old English Knight.
Prince Tippoo Saib, his son.		Sir Meredith, a Welsh knight.
The Fakir, Barak el Hadgi, emissary from Hyder Ali's Court.		Gilbert Greenleaf, the old archer at Douglas castle.
The Vakeel, or Government messenger.		Fabian Harbothel, Sir Aymer's squire.
Sadha Sing, the mourner on the roadside.		Anthony, } English archers.
		Bend-the-bow, }

CASTLE DANGEROUS—PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS. 279

Thomas Dickson, the farmer in Douglasdale.	Sir James Douglas, "the Black Douglas," (first disguised as "the Knight of the Tomb.")
Charles Dickson, his son.	Michael Turnbull, the Douglas' dark huntsman.
Lazarus Powheid, the old sexton at Douglas.	Hugo Hugonet, the Douglas' minstrel.
The Bishop of Glasgow.	Thomas the Rhymmer, or Thomas of Ercildoun.
Father Jerome, abbot of St. Bride's convent.	Henry Lord Clifford, an English general.
Sir Malcolm Fleming.	Soldiers, Huntsmen, Attendants, &c.
The Lady Margaret de Hautlieu, (first as Sister Ursula, at St. Bride's.)

PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

VOLUME I.

A stranger gentleman and lady arrive at Middlemas village, 88. The lady is confined and left with her infant in Dr. Gray's house, 88. Her father with officers come and take her away, leaving the child, 46. The boy, Richard Middlemas, learns his history from Dr. Gray, 67; to whom he and Adam Hartley become apprenticed, 78. The Race Ball at the village, 82. Middlemas quarrels with Hartley about Menie Gray, 87; leaves the village, 102; and enters as recruit for India, under Captain Hillary, 108. He is tricked, robbed, and confined in the sick-ward of the Military Hospital, at Ryde, 119; where he is visited by Dr. Hartley, 129; who cures General Witherington's child, 139. Middlemas is released from the hospital, 145; and introduced to General Witherington, and his wife, who prove his parents, 149. Death of Mrs. Witherington at her harp, 163. The General raves, 164. Interview betwixt Hartley and Middlemas, 158. They arrive in India, 171. Hartley visits Barak-el-Hadgi at the tomb, 175. Sees Menie Gray at a public breakfast, 183; obtains an interview with her at Madame Montreville's, and sees Middlemas disguised as Madame Montreville's black slave, 191. Hartley hears from Menie Gray of Middlemas's treachery, 209; and goes to Hyder Ali for justice, 212. Story of the mourner in the desert, 215. Hartley, in an interview with Hyder Ali in disguise, entreats assistance in the case of Menie Gray, 221. Tippoo Saib arrives at Bangalore, 230. Middlemas, as General under Tippoo, delivers Menie Gray as an addition to his harem, 231. Hyder Ali in disguise appears in the crowd before his son Tippoo, demands justice, and rescues Menie Gray, 233. Middlemas, convicted of treachery, is crushed to death by a trained elephant, at a signal from Hyder Ali, 237. Menie Gray is restored to Hartley, and returns to her native country, 239.

The Lady Augusta, in disguise, proceeds, with a minstrel guide, to visit Sir John de Walton, at Douglas castle, 273. They rest for the night at a farm-house in Douglasdale, 289. The minstrel conducts her to the convent of St. Bride, 301. Proceeds with Sir Aymer de Valence to the castle, 303; and tells the story of Thomas the Rhymer, and the mysterious book in the Douglas library, 323. They are admitted into the castle, 331. Sir John de Walton, governor of the castle, quarrels with Sir Aymer, his lieutenant, for admitting the stranger, 346. Grand hunting match, 351. The dark Douglas' huntsman defies De Walton in the forest, and escapes, 360.

280 CASTLE DANGEROUS—PRINCIPAL INCIDENTS.

VOLUME II.

De Walton visits the minstrel, in the library, and threatens him with torture, as a spy, 25. He takes a letter from the minstrel to the Lady Augusta, at the convent, and she refuses to see him, 37. Sir Aymer meets a Douglas' knight in the town, at night, and suddenly loses sight of him, 43. His interview with the old sexton in the ruined vault, inquiring for the knight, 49. He sends the sexton prisoner to the castle, 58; and goes to the convent to arrest the Lady Augusta, 62. She is suffered to be alone the previous night, 72. Sister Ursula comes to her at night by a private door, and the Lady Augusta explains to her the motive of her disguise and journey, 75. The sister informs her that she is the Lady Margaret de Hantlieu, and of her cruel treatment, &c. 82. They escape together from the convent, and the Lady Augusta leaves a letter for the minstrel, authorizing him to tell her secret, 90. De Walton and Sir Aymer learn it from him in the dungeon, and are reconciled to each other, 99. She is left alone by Sister Ursula in the forest, 117, and meets the Earl of Douglas, disguised as the Knight of the Tomb, 119. He takes her to his rendezvous, 130. She is blindfolded, and led by him and the dark huntsman to De Walton, in the forest, 133. Her liberty proposed, on condition the castle surrenders, 141. De Walton attacks and wounds the huntsman, 143; and fights with Douglas, 145. The Lady Augusta persuades them to a truce, and to attend divine service with her in the church, 148. She meets the minstrel there, 164. The Bishop of Glasgow, after service, visits the dying huntsman in the vault, 171. Conflict between the English and Scotch in the church, 179. Farmer Dickson's son killed, 182. Sir Aymer fights, and surrenders to Sir Malcolm Fleming, 185. A messenger arrives from the Earl of Pembroke (who was coming to the support of De Walton) with the news of his defeat, 187. De Walton stipulates for the surrender of Douglas castle, 189; and afterwards obtains the hand of the Lady Augusta, 192.

INDEX OF NAMES.

ABBESS of the Nunnery at Gloucester.....	Betrothed	i. 233
Abbess of the Ursuline Convent.....	Quentin Durward ii.	267
Abbot, (the) at Mont St. Victoire.....	Anne of Geier ...ii.	242
Abdallah, one of Sir Brian de Bois Guilbert's slaves.....	Ivanhoe	i. 52, 62
Abdallah el Hadgi, Saladin's envoy.....	Talisman	ii. 27
Abney, Albert Lee's friend.....	Woodstock	i. 80
Ackland (Sir Thos.), a royalist.....	ditto	ii. 264
Adie of Aikenshaw, a neighbour of Glending- ning.....	Monastery	ii. 145
Adonbec el Hakim, the physician, (a disguise assumed by Saladin).....	Talisman	i. 133
Agelastes (Michael), the cynic philosopher..	Count Robert ...i.	98, 158
Aikwood (Ringan), the Knockwinnock for- ester.....	Antiquary	ii. 56
Airlie (the Earl of), in King Charles's service	Leg. of Montrose ii.	63
Alasco, the astrologer (alias , Dr. Demetrius Doboobie).....	Kenilworth	i. 321
Albany (Murdoch, Duke of), nephew to Rob- ert, King of Scotland.....	Fair M. of Perth ii.	323
Albany (Robert, Duke of), brother of King Robert.....	ditto	i. 162
Alberick, Prince Richard's esquire.....	Betrothed	ii. 63
Aldovrand (Father), Sir Raymond's chaplain	ditto	i. 65
Aldrick (the Jesuit), the Countess of Derby's confessor.....	Peveril	i. 321
Alice, dame Whitecraft's servant girl.....	ditto	i. 422
Alice (the Lady).....	Monastery	i. 92
Alicia (the Lady), daughter of Waldemar Fitzurse.....	Ivanhoe	i. 157
Alison, an old domestic at Cumnor Place....	Kenilworth	ii. 19

- Allan (Mrs.), the housekeeper at Woodbourne Guy Mannering .ii. 200
 Allan-a-dale, one of Robin Hood's men..... Ivanhoe i. 183
 Allan, Lord Ravenswood..... Bride of Lam..... i. 45
 Allan (Major), in the royal army..... Old Mortality.... i. 208
 Allen (Long), in King Richard's guard..... Talisman ii. 38
 Ambrose, the Misses Arthuret's old domestic Redgauntlet..... ii. 148
 Ambrose (Brother), a monk attending Prior Aylmer Ivanhoe..... i. 98, ii. 63
 Ambrose (Father), or Edward Glendinning, abbot of Kennaquhair..... Abbot..... i. 178 afterwards disguised as a servant at Kinross..... ditto..... ii. 128
 Amelot, Sir Damian de Lacy's page..... Betrothed..... i. 818
 Amaury (Sir Giles), the Grand Master of the Templars..... Talisman i. 165
 Anderson (Eppie), a servant at Meg Dods'
 Inn St. Ronan's Well..ii. 181
 André (Petit), a public executioner..... Anne of Geier... i. 250
 André (Petit), a public executioner..... Quentin Durward i. 135
 Andrew, the gardener at Ellangowan..... Guy Mannering... i. 133
 Andrews, a private in the royal army..... Old Mortality ... i. 139
 Anjou (Prince John of), brother of King
 Richard..... Ivanhoe..... i. 120
 Anne (the Princess), the Lady of Beaujeau.. Quentin Durward i. 177
 Annabella, Queen Consort of Robert III. of Scotland..... F. Maid of Perth . i. 164
 Annapple, Hobbie Elliot's former nurse..... Black Dwarf..... i. 81
 Anne (the Lady), daughter of the Duke of York..... Peveil..... ii. 362
 Anselm (Prior) of St. Dominic, the old king's confessor..... F. Maid of Perth . i. 166
 Anster (Hob), a constable at Kinross village Abbot..... ii. 103
 Anthony, the old postilion at Meg Dods'..... St. Ronan's Well . i. 214
 Anthony, an English archer at Dickson's cottage..... Castle Dangerous . i. 289
 Anton, one of Henry Smith's men F. Maid of Perth..ii. 29
 Antonio, a Swiss lad, the guide from Lucerne Anne of Geier... i. 28
 Antrim (the Earl of), in King Charles's service..... Leg. of Montrose..ii. 71
 Arbroath (Lord), and other nobles of Queen
 Mary's party..... Abbot..... ii. 271
 Archibald (John), Duke of Argyle's attendant H. of Mid-Loth... ii. 155

- Argentin (le Sieur d'), one of the Duke of Burgundy's officers..... Anne of Geier... ii. 304
- Argyle (the Duke of), "MacCallum More" .. Rob Roy..... i. 218, 293
- Argyle (the Duke of)..... H. of Mid-Loth... ii. 150
- Argyle (the Duchess of)..... ditto..... ii. 215
- Argyle (the Marquis of)..... Leg. of Montrose.. ii. 122
- "Mac Callum More," or "Gillespie Grumach"..... ditto..... ii. 61
- afterwards disguised as Murdoch Campbell..... ditto..... ii. 138
- "Arion," and other masques at Kenilworth.. Kenilworth..... ii. 180
- Arlington (Henry Bennet, Earl of), a privy councillor..... Peveril..... ii. 111
- Armstrong (Archie), the court jester..... Nigel..... ii. 334
- Armstrong (Grace), Hobbie Elliot's bride elect..... Black Dwarf..... i. 48
- Armstrong (John), the Laird of Mangerton, "The Laird's Jock"..... Laird's Jock..... ii. 292
- Armstrong (Young), his son, the Scottish champion..... ditto..... ib.
- Arnheim (Sybilla of), Anne of Geierstein's mother..... Anne of Geier. i. 192, 211
- Arnheim (the Baron Herman Von), Anne of Geierstein's grandfather in Donnerhugel's narrative..... ditto..... i. 197
- Arnold, the torch-bearer at Rotherwood.... Ivanhoe..... i. 102
- Arnot (Andrew), one of the Scottish Archer guard..... Quentin Durward. i. 114
- Arthuret (Miss Seraphina), a Papist lady.... Redgauntlet..... ii. 139
- Arthuret (Miss Angelica), her sister..... ditto..... ii. 142
- Arundel (the Earl of), a crusader, one of the Lords Marchers..... Betrothed..... i. 70
- Ashton (Sir William), the Lord Keeper of Scotland..... Bride of Lam.... i. 46
- Ashton (Lady Eleanor), his wife..... ditto..... i. 48
- Ashton (Colonel Sholto Douglas), their eldest son..... ditto..... ii. 171
- Ashton (Lucy), their daughter, betrothed to Edgar Ravenswood, married to the laird of Bucklaw..... ditto..... i. 61
- Ashton (Henry), her younger brother..... ditto..... ii. 36
- Aspramonte (Brenhilda d'), Countess of Count Robert of Paris..... Count Robert..... i. 217

- Aspramonte (old Knight of), her father..... Count Robert ii. 91
 Aspramonte (Lady of), her mother..... ditto..... ii. 92
 Astarte, an attendant on the Princess Anna
 Comnena..... ditto..... i. 92
 Aston (Sir Jacob), of King Charles the First's party..... Woodstock..... i. 70
 Athelstane, the Thane of Coningsburgh, "The Unready"..... Ivanhoe..... i. 182
 Athole (Marquis of), a kinsman of Edgar Ravenswood..... Br. of Lam. i. 186, ii. 91
 Auchtermuchty (John), the carrier at Kinross..... Abbot..... ii. 218
 Avenel (the Lady Alice of), wife of Walter,
 (the Knight of)..... Monastery..... i. 92
 Avenel (the Lady Mary of)..... ditto..... ii. 78
 Avenel (Mary), daughter of the Lady Alice Avenel..... ditto..... i. 98
 Avenel (Julian), the usurper of Avenel castle
ditto..... i. 103
 Avenel (the White Lady of), a spirit..... ditto i. 100, 130, 177
 Aylmer (Mrs.), a neighbour of Sir Henry Lee Woodstock ii. 346
 Aymer, the prior of Jorvaulx Abbey..... Ivanhoe i. 48, 54
- BABIE, old Alice Gray's servant girl..... Bride of Lam...... i. 74
 Badger (Will), Sir Hugh Robsart's favourite domestic..... Kenilworth..... i. 201
 Bailie (the)..... Monastery..... i. 190
 Bailiff (the)..... Kenilworth..... i. 187
 Baillie (General), a parliamentary leader... Leg. of Montrose.ii. 207
 Baillie (Giles), a gipsy..... Guy Mannering... i. 117
 Bailzou (Annaple), a spae wife..... H. of Mid-Loth.... ii. 370
 Bajazet, a black page at St. James's palace.. Peveril..... ii. 159
 Balafré (le), alias Ludovic Lesly..... Queen. Durward... i. 111
 Balchristie (Janet), the Laird of Dumbiedikes's housekeeper..... H. of Mid-Loth.... i. 188
 Balderstone (Caleb), the old butler at Wolf's
 Crag Tower..... Bride of Lam...... i. 119
 Baldrick, an ancestor of the Berengers..... Betrothed..... i. 224
 Baldringham (the Lady Ermengarde of),
 Lady Eveline's grand-aunt..... ditto..... i. 191
 Baldwin, archbishop of Canterbury..... ditto..... i. 264
 Baldwin (Count), a crusader, brother of Godfrey, duke of Bouillon..... Count Robert..... i. 202
 Baldwin de Oyley..... Ivanhoe..... i. 168

- Balfour (John), of Burley, a leader of the Covenanters' army..... Old Mortality..... i. 78 afterwards disguised as Quentin
Mackell of Irongray..... ditto..... ii. 266
- Baliol (Edward), usurper of Scotland..... Redgauntlet..... ii. 9
- Baliol (Mrs.), Mr. Croftangry's friend in the introductory chapter..... F. Maid of Perth i. 19
- Baliol (Mrs. Bethune), in the introduction of the story..... High. Widow..... ii. 273
- Ballenkeirooh, a Highland chief, an old friend of Fergus Melvor..... Waverley..... i. 270
- Balneaves, a citizen of Perth..... F. Maid of Perth i. 119
- Balruddery, (the Laird of), a relation of Godfrey Bertram..... Guy Mannering.. i. 94
- Balue (Cardinal), in Louis the Eleventh's court..... Queen. Durward.. i. 172
- Balveny (Lord), kinsman of the Earl of Douglas..... F. Maid of Perth ii. 263
- Bamberg (the Bishop of), in Donnerhugel's narrative..... Anne of Geier... i. 207
- Baptisti Damioiti, a Paduan quack..... Aunt M.'s Mirror ii. 248
- Barak el Hadgi, an emissary from Hyder
Ali's court..... Surgeon's Daugh. i. 177
- Bardon (Hugh), the scout master of Prince
John..... Ivanhoe..... ii. 180
- Barnes, Colonel Mannering's servant at Woodbourne..... Guy Mannering .. ii. 70
- Bartholomew (Brother), the guide towards Strasburg..... Anne of Geier... i. 328
- Barstow, alias Fenwicke (Captain), the Jesuit, a secret correspondent of the Countess of Derby..... Peveril..... ii. 138
- Bauldie, the Quaker's stable boy..... Redgauntlet..... i. 109
- Bauldie, the old shepherd in the introduction of the story..... Black Dwarf... i. 16
- Bacon (Tom), Master Chiffinch's groom... Peveril... i. 446, ii. 81
- Bean Lean (Donald), alias Will Ruthven, or Ruffiu, a Highland robber chief..... Waverley..... i. 236 disguised as the pedlar on the roadside..... ditto..... ii. 53
- Bean (Alice), his daughter..... ditto..... i. 248
- Beardcliff (Deacon), at the Kippletringan
Inn..... Guy Mannering .. i. 147

- Beaujeu (Monsieur le Chevalier de), keeper of the gambling house. Nigel. i. 247
 Beaujeu (le Compte de), a French officer in the Chevalier's army. Waverley. ii. 235 Beaumanoir (Sir Lucas), Grand Master of the Knights Templars Ivanhoe ii. 186
 Beenie, the chamber-maid at Meg Dods' inn. St. Ronan's Well. . . ii. 131
 Beg (Callum), Fergus MacIvor's page. Waverley. i. 253 Bellenden (Lady Margaret), of the Tower of Tillietudlem, an old Tory lady Old Mortality i. 50
 Bellenden (old Major Miles), her brother. ditto. i. 180
 Bellenden (Miss Edith), her grand-daughter, betrothed to Lord Evandale, afterwards married to Henry Morton. ditto. i. 50, ii. 805 Bend-the-bow, an English archer, at Dick-son's cottage. Castle Dangerous. i. 239 Ben Israel, or Ben Samuel (Nathan), the physician, friend of Isaac the Jew. Ivanhoe. ii. 182, 237 Benjie (Little), or Benjamin Colthred, a spy employed by Cristal Nixon. Redgauntlet. i. 50 Bennet (Brother), a monk at St. Mary's convent. Monastery. i. 138
 Berengaria, Queen-Consort of Richard Cœur de Lion. Talisman. i. 222, 258
 Berenger (Sir Raymond), the old Norman warrior. Betrothed i. 34
 Berenger (the Lady Eveline), Sir Raymond's daughter, betrothed to Sir Hugo de Lacy ditto. i. 35, 50 Berkeley (the Lady Augusta), plighted, and afterwards married, to Sir John de Walton, first in disguise as Augustine the minstrel's son. Castle Dangerous. i. 276
 Bertha, or Agatha, the betrothed of Hereward Count Robert. ii. 81
 Bertram, the English minstrel. Castle Dangerous. i. 273
 Bertram (Mr. Godfrey), the Laird of Ellangowan. Guy Mannering. i. 59
 Bertram (Mrs.), his wife. ditto. i. 98
 Bertram (Henry), their son, in love with Julia Mannering. ditto. i. 75 alias Captain Vanbeest Brown. ditto. i. 232 alias Dawson ditto. i. 233 alias Dudley. ditto. ii. 128
 Bertram (Lucy), his sister. ditto. i. 171, ii. 328

Bertram (Miss Margaret), of Singleside, Lucy's maiden aunt.....	Guy Mannering . . . i. 181
Bertram (Sir Allan), an ancestor of the Laird of Ellangowan.....	ditto i. 60
Bertram (Dennis), ditto.....	ditto i. 61
Bertram (Donohoe), ditto.....	ditto ib.
Bertram (Lewis), father of ditto.....	ditto i. 62
Bertram (Captain Andrew), a relation of ditto	ditto ii. 97
Berwine, the Lady of Baldringham's favourite attendant.....	Betrothed i. 192
Bibbet (Master), General Harrison's secretary	Woodstock i. 244
Bickerton (Mrs.), landlady of the "Seven Stars" inn, York.....	H. of Mid-Loth. . . ii. 44
Bide-the-Bent (Mr. Peter), the minister of Wolf's Hope village.....	Bride of Lam. i. 208
Bidmore (Lord), the Rev. Josiah Cargill's patron.....	St. Ronan's Well. . i. 250
Bidmore (the Hon. Augustus), his son, Mr. C.'s pupil.....	ditto i. 250
Bidmore (Miss Augusta), Lord B.'s daughter, beloved by Mr. Cargill.....	ditto i. 251
Biederman (Arnold), the Landamman of Unter- walden, (alias Count Arnold of Geier- stein).....	Anne of Geier. . i. 69, 96
Biederman (Bertha), his late wife.....	ditto i. 100
Biederman (Rudiger), his son.....	ditto i. 88
Biederman (Ernest), ditto.....	ditto i. 92
Biederman (Sigismund), "the simple," ditto.	ditto i. 156
Biederman (Ulrick), ditto.....	ditto i. 93
Bigot (de), Prince John's seneschal.....	Ivanhoe i. 211
Bimbister (Margery), the old Ranzelman's spouse.....	Pirate i. 141
Bindoose (Master John), the sheriff's clerk, &c. at Marchthorn.....	St. Ronan's W. . i. 44, 211
Binks (Sir Bingo), a fox-hunting baronet at the Spa.....	St. Ronan's Well. . i. 47
Binks (Lady), his wife, formerly Miss Rachel Bonnyrigg.....	ditto i. 91
Bittlebrains (Lord), a friend of Sir W. Ashton	Bride of Lam. . . . ii. 81
Bittlebrains (Lady), his wife.....	ditto ib.
Blacklees (Tomalin), in King Richard's guard.....	Talisman ii. 39

- Blackchester (the Countess of), sister to Lord
Dalgarno Nigel i. 267
- Bladderskate (Lord), a Scottish judge Redgauntlet i. 240
- Blair (Father Clement), a Carthusian monk,
Catharine's confessor Fair M. of Perth . i. 256
- Blanche, one of Lady Eveline's attendants Betrothed i. 21
- Blandeville (Lady Emily), a neighbour of the Waverleys, afterwards married to Col.
Talbot Waverley i. 99
- Blane (Niel), the town piper and publican Old Mortality i. 66
- Blane (Jenny), his daughter ditto i. 67
- Blattergowl (the Rev. Mr.), the minister of Trotcosey Antiquary i. 223
- Bletson (Martin Joshua), one of the parliamentary commissioners Woodstock i. 230
- Blinksop, a smuggler Redgauntlet ii. 134
- Block, (Martin), one of the committee of the estates of Burgundy Anne of Geier ii. 179
- Blok (Nikkel), the butcher, one of the insurgents at Liege Quentin Durward . ii. 32
- Blondel de Nesle, King Richard's favourite minstrel Talisman ii. 111
- Blood (Col. Thomas), the Duke of Buckingham's emissary Peveil ii. 271
- Blount (Nich.) [afterwards knighted] the Earl of Sussex's master of the horse Kenilworth . i. 236, ii. 179
- Blower (Mrs. Margaret), the shipowner's widow at the Spa, afterwards married to Dr.
Quackleben St. Ronan's Well . i. 89
- Bohemond, Prince of Antioch, a crusader Count Robert i. 202
- Boisgelin (the young Countess de), at King
René's ball at Aix Anne of Geier ii. 256
- Bois-Guilbert (Sir Brian de), a preceptor of the Knights Templars Ivanhoe i. 50
- Bolton (Stawarth), an English officer Monastery i. 85
- Boniface (Father), the ex-abbot of Kennaqu-hair Abbot ii. 263
- first as Blinkhoolie, the old gardener at Kinross ditto ii. 138
- afterwards as the old gardener at Dundrennan ditto ii. 308
- Boniface (Abbot), of St. Mary's Monastery i. 134

- Bonstettin (Nicholas), the old deputy of Schwitz, one of the Swiss confederacy... Anne of Geier... i. 130
- Bonthon (Anthony), the murderer in Sir
John Ramorny's service..... Fair M. of Perth. i. 284
- Booshalloch (Neil), the Highland cow-herd.. ditto..... ii. 151
- Bothwell (Mrs. Margaret), in the introduction of the story..... Aunt M.'s Mirror li. 225
- Bothwell (Lady), Lady Forester's sister..... ditto..... ii. 238
- Bothwell (Sir Geoffrey), Lady B.'s husband. ditto..... ii. ib.
- Bothwell (Sergeant), alias Francis Stewart, in the royal army..... Old Mortality... i. 70
- Bouillon (Godfrey, Duke of), a crusader.... Count Robert... i. 202
- Bowyer (Master), usher of the black rod.... Kenilworth..... i. 270
- Brackel (Adrian), the mountebank, formerly master of Fenella, alias Zarah..... Peveril..... i. 403
- Bracy (Sir Maurice de), a follower of Prince
John..... Ivanhoe..... i. 138
- Bradbourne (Mistress Lillias), Lady Avenel's waiting woman..... Abbot..... i. 33
- Bradwardine and Tully Veolan (the Baron of), Mr. Cosmo Comyne Bradwardine... Waverley... i. 131, 162
- Bradwardine (Rose Comyne), his daughter, afterwards married to Waverley..... Waverley..... i. 151
- Bradwardine (Malcolm), of Inchgrabbit, a relation of ditto..... ditto..... ii. 293
- Breck (Alison), an old fishwife, a friend of the Mucklebackits..... Antiquary..... ii. 125
- Breck (Angus), a follower of Rob Roy..... Rob Roy..... ii. 206
- Brengwain, wife of Gwenwyn, Prince of Powys..... Betrothed..... i. 36
- Bretagne (the Duke of)..... Anne of Geier... ii. 347
- Brewer (Sam), a follower of Sir Geoffrey Peveril..... Peveril..... i. 155
- Bridlesley (Joe), the horse-dealer at Liverpool ditto..... i. 408
- Bridgenorth (Major Ralph), a roundhead, a neighbour of Sir Geoffrey Peveril..... ditto..... i. 71
- Bridgenorth (Mrs.), his wife..... ditto..... i. 72
- Bridgenorth (Alice), their daughter, afterwards married to Julian Peveril..... ditto..... i. 76
- Bridget (Mother), the abbess of St. Catherine,
Catherine Seyton's aunt..... Abbot..... i. 139
- Bridget (May), the milkwoman at Falkland
Castle..... Fair M. of Perth. ii. 250

- Bridgeward (Peter), the bridge-keeper near Kennaquhair Monastery i. 127
- Bridgeward (Peter), the bridge-keeper near Kennaquhair Abbot i. 238
- Bridoon (Corporal), in Lieutenant Nosebag's regiment Waverley ii. 267
- Briennius (Nicephorus), the Cæsar of the Grecian Empire Count Robert i. 182
- Britton (Sergt.), with Stawarth Bolton Monastery i. 89
- Broadfoot (Saunders), a messenger Heart of Mid-Loth. ii. 86
- Broken-girth-flow (Laird of), one of the Jacobite conspirators Black Dwarf i. 147
- Brown (Vanbeest), Dirk Hatteraick's lieutenant Guy Mannering ii. 10
- Brown (Jonathan), landlord of the Black Bear
at Darlington Rob Roy i. 140
- Browne (General), a visitor at Lord Wood-ville's Tap. Chamber ii. 272
- Broxmouth (John), a neighbour of Hob Miller's Monastery i. 226
- Buckingham (the Duke of), in Charles the Second's Court Woodstock ii. 358
- Buckingham (the Duke of), "Steenie," favourite of James I. Nigel i. 204
- Buckingham (Geo. Villiers, Duke of), Charles the Second's favourite Peveril ii. 101
- Buckingham (Mary, Duchess of) ditto ii. 112, 362
- Bucklaw (the Laird of), or Frank Hayston, afterwards Laird of Girmington, and married to Lucy Ashton Bride of Lam. i. 98, ii. 69
- Bullsegg (Mr.), the Laird of Killancureit, a friend of the Baron of Bradwardine Waverley i. 166
- Bulmer (Valentine), the titular Earl of Etherington, married to Clara Mowbray St. Roman's W. i. 150, ii. 88
- Bulmer (Ann), his mother, married to the Earl of Etherington, during the life of his countess ditto ii. 89
- Bunce (Jack), a comrade of the pirate, alias
Frederick Altamont, a ci-devant player. Pirate ii. 160
- Buncle, messenger to the Earl of Douglas ... Fair M. of Perth ii. 114
- Bubenbergh (Sir Adrian de), a veteran knight of Berne Arms of Geier ii. 292
- Burgundy (the Duke of), "Charles the Bold" ... ditto ii. 184

- Burgundy (the chancellor of), the archbishop of Vienne..... Anne of Geier... ii. 176
- Burgundy (the marshal of)..... ditto..... ii. 331
- Burleigh (Lord), the lord treasurer..... Kenilworth..... i. 286
- Burleigh (Lord), the parliamentary leader... Leg. of Montrose ii. 178
- Butler (Mr.), the military chaplain at Madras..... Surgeon's Daugh. i. 184
- Butler (Reuben), a presbyterian minister, married to Jennie Deans..... H. of Mid-Loth. ii. 312
- Butler (Benjamin), his father..... ditto..... i. 130
- Butler (Stephen or "Bible"), Reuben's grandfather..... ditto..... i. 128
- Butler (widow Judith), Reuben's grandmother..... ditto..... i. 180
- Butler (Euphemia or Femie), his child..... ditto..... ii. 245
- Butler (David)..... ditto..... ib.
- Butler (Reuben)..... ditto..... ib.
- CADWALLON, Prince Gwenwyn's favourite bard, afterwards disguised as Renanit
Vidal, minstrel to Hugo de Lacy..... Betrothed i. 35, 275, 279
- Calder (Quarter-master), at Madras..... Surgeon's Daugh. i. 188
- Calista of Mountfaucou (the Lady)..... Talisman. i. 224
- Calvert, the Earl of Glenallan's groom..... Antiquary..... ii. 186
- Cameron (Sergt. Allan Breack), under Capt.
Campbell..... High. Widow... ii. 348
- Campbell (the Lady Mary), daughter of the Duke of Argyle..... H. of Mid-Loth. ii. 215
- Campbell (the Lady Caroline), ditto..... ditto..... ii. 216
- Campbell (Sir Duncan), the Knight of Arden-vohr, in Argyle's army..... Leg. of Montrose ii. 74
- Campbell (Lady), his wife..... ditto..... ii. 107
- Campbell (Sir Duncan), the Knight of Auchenbreck, in Argyle's army..... ditto..... ii. 216
- Campbell (Murdoch), a servant; a disguise assumed by the Marquis of Argyle..... ditto..... ii. 188
- Campbell (General), "Black Colin Campbell," in the King's service..... Redgummet. ii. 306
- Campbell (Captain), or "Barcaldine," or
"Green Colin"..... High. Widow... ii. 355
- Campo Basso (the Count of), one of the Duke of Burgundy's officers..... Quentin Durward ii. 223
- Campo Basso (the Count of), ditto ditto... Anne of Geier... ii. 193

- Cantacuzene (Michael), the emperor's grand sewer Count Robert..... i. 282
- Cantrips (Mrs.), a former friend of Nanty Ewart..... Redgauntlet..... ii. 116
- Cantrips (Jessie), her daughter, betrayed by him..... ditto..... ib.
- Capstern (Capt.), captain of an Indiaman... Surgeon's Daugh. 189
- Caradoc of Menwygent, Prince Gwenwyn's younger bard..... Betrothed..... i. 46
- Carey (Patrick), the poet, brother of Lord Falkland Woodstock..... ii. 246
- Cargill (the Rev. Josiah), the minister of St. Ronan's..... St. Ronan's Well.. i. 249
- Carleton (Capt.), an officer in the guards... Peveril..... ii. 422
- Caroline, Queen-Consort of George the Second H. of Mid-Loth.... ii. 174
- Carrol, the deputy usher at Kenilworth Castle Kenilworth ii. 116
- Caspar, the Baron of Arnheim's master of the horse Anne of Geier... i. 198
- Castor (Stephanos), the wrestler, a citizen.. Count Robert..... i. 55
- Catharine, Queen-Consort of Charles the Second..... Peveril..... ii. 375
- Catherine of Newport, the lady of Julian Avenel..... Monastery..... ii. 76
- Cathleen, one of Flora M'Ivor's attendants... Waverley..... i. 288
- Caxon (old Jacob), the Antiquary's hair-dresser..... Antiquary..... i. 68
- Caxon (Jenny), his daughter, a milliner..... ditto..... i. 197
- Cedric of Rotherwood, or "Cedric the Saxon" Ivanhoe i. 68
- Chamberlain (Matthew), a tapster, old Roger Raine's successor..... Peveril..... ii. 18
- Chamberlain (the), at Say's court..... Kenilworth i. 286
- Champagne (Henry, Earl of), a crusader... Talisman..... ii. 89
- Chancellor (the Lord)..... Betrothed ii. 64
- Chaplain (the Bishop's)..... Quentin Durward ii. 37
- Charegite assassin (the), disguised as a Turkish marabout or enthusiast..... Talisman..... ii. 86
- Charles, Prince of Wales, "Babie Charles," son of James the First..... Nigel i. 802
- Charles the Second, king of England..... Woodstock ii. 60, 84
- first disguised as a gipsy woman at Woodstock ditto..... ii. 18
- afterwards as Louis. Kerneguy, Albert Lee's page..... ditto..... ii. 89

- Charles the Second, king of England..... Peveril.....ii. 141
- Charles Edward (the Chevalier),..... Redgauntlet.....ii. 148 first as Father Buonaventure..... ditto.....ii. 277
- "Charles the Bold," Duke of Burgundy..... Quentin Durward ii. 139
- Charlot, a messenger from Liege to King
 Louis..... ditto.....ii. 154
- Charteris (Sir Patrick), of Kinfauns, provost of Perth..... F. M. of Perth i. 134, 154
- Chattenach (MacGillie), chief of the Clan
 Chattan..... ditto.....ii. 291
- Chatterley (Rev. Simon), "the man of religion" at the Spa..... St. Ronan's Well i. 60
- Chaubert (Mons.), Master Chiffinch's
 cook..... Peveril..... i. 444
- Chiffinch (Master Thomas), alias Will Smith, a friend of Edward Christian, and Charles the Second's private emissary..... ditto....i. 444, ii. 84
- Chiffinch (Kate), his mistress..... ditto.....ii. 148
- "Children of the Mist," a wild race of Highlanders..... Leg. of Montrose ii. 164
- Chirnside (Luckie), the poulterer at Wolf's-
 Hope village..... Bride of Lam... i. 138
- Cholmondley of Vale Royal, a friend of Sir
 Geoffrey Peveril..... Peveril..... i. 156
- Christal (Martin)..... ditto.....ii. 139
- Christian (Edward), a conspirator, alias Richard Ganlesse, alias Simon Canter, father of Zarah, alias Fenella..... ditto i. 409, 419, ii. 109
- Christian (Col. William), his brother, shot for insurrection..... ditto..... i. 141
- Christie of the Clint Hill, one of Julian Avenel's retainers..... Monastery..... i. 168
- Christie (John), the ship-chandler at Paul's Wharf..... Nigel..... i. 76
- Christie (Dame Nelly), his pretty wife, carried off by Lord Dalgarno..... ditto..... i. 77
- Clarence (Geo., Duke of), brother of Edward the Fourth..... Anne of Geier...ii. 127
- Clarendon (the Earl of), lord chancellor to Charles the Second..... Woodstock.....ii. 352
- Clegg (Holdfast), the Puritan mill-wright.... Peveril..... i. 110
- Cleishbotham. (Mr. Jedediah), in the introduction of the story..... Black Dwarf.... i. 17

- Clement, one of Sir Reginald Front de Bœuf's attendants. Ivanhoe ii. 166
- Cleveland (Duchess of), one of Charles the Second's mistresses. Peveril ii. 276
- Cleveland (Captain Clement), alias Vaughan "The Pirate," son of the elder Vaughan and Ulla Troil, in love with Minna Troil Pirate i. 125, 143, ii. 226
- Clifford (Henry, Lord), an English general. Castle Dangerous . i. 328
- Clink (Jem), the turnkey at Newgate. Peveril ii. 202
- Clippurse (Lawyer), Sir Everard Waverley's lawyer Waverley i. 97
- Cobb (Ephraim), in Cromwell's troop. Woodstock i. 177
- Coleby (Major), a warder of the Tower of London Peveril ii. 261
- Colepepper or Peppercull (Capt.), the Alsatian bully Nigel i. 232, ii. 37
- Colkitto (Young), or Alaster MacDonald, a Highland chief Lag. of Montross . ii. 27
- Collier (Jem), a smuggler. Redgauntlet ii. 184
- Colvin (Henry), one of the Duke of Burgundy's officers. Anne of Geier ii. 184
- Comines (Philip des) the Duke of Burgundy's favourite minister. Quentin Durward . ii. 131
- Comnenus (Alexius), the emperor of Greece Count Robert i. 37
- Comnena (Anna), his daughter, the historian ditto i. 90
- Conachar, the old Glover's Highland apprentice, in love with Catherine Fair M. of Perth . i. 86
afterwards Eachin (or Hector) Mac-Ian, chief of the clan Qubele. ditto ii. 180
- Conrade (Marquis of Montserrat), a crusader. Tahamam i. 166
- Contay (le Sieur de), one of the Duke of Burgundy's officers Anne of Geier ii. 161
- Copely (Sir Thomas), in attendance on the Earl of Leicester. Kenilworth i. 138
- Cormack (Donald) a highland robber chief. Fair M. of Perth . i. 240
- Corsand (Mr.), a magistrate at the examination of Hatteraick Guy Mannering . . ii. 309
- Corydon, the shoemaker, a citizen. Count Robert ii. 272
- Coxe (Capt.), one of the masquers at Kenilworth. Kenilworth ii. 286
- Crabtree (Mr.), a gardener at Fairport Antiquary i. 211
- Crackenthorp (Father), the publican. Redgauntlet ii. 129
- Crackenthorp (Dolly), his daughter. ditto ii. 130

- Craigdallie (Adam), the eldest baillie of Perth, Fair M. of Perth. i. 84
- Craigengelt (Capt.), an adventurer, Bucklaw's companion..... Bride of Lam. ... i. 99
- Cramp (Corporal), with Capt. Thornton..... Rob Roy.....ii. 176
- Oranbourne (Sir Jasper), a friend of Sir Geoffrey Peveril..... Peveril..... i. 118
- Crane (Dame Alison), mistress of the Crane Inn at Marlbro'..... Kenilworth..... i. 192
- Crane (Gaffer), her spouse..... ditto..... ib.
- Crank (Dame), the papist laundress at ditto. ditto..... i. 195
- Craon (le Sieur de) one of the Duke of Burgundy's officers..... Anne of Geier.....ii. 308
- Crawford (Lindsay, Earl of), a young Scottish noble..... F. M. of Perth.ii. 58, 66
- Crawford (Lord), captain of the Scottish guard..... Quentin Durward. i. 155
- Creveccœur (the Count of), the Duke of Burgundy's envoy to France..... ditto..... i. 185
- Creveccœur (the Countess of)..... ditto..... ii. 267
- Croftangry (Mr. Chrystal), in the introduction of the story..... Fair M. of Perth. i. 16
- Crofts (Master), whom Sir Geoffrey Hudson the dwarf killed in a duel..... Peveril..... ii. 218
- Cromwell (Oliver)..... Woodstock..... i. 177
- Cromwell's daughter..... ditto..... i. 199
- Crookshank, a citizen of Perth..... Fair M. of Perth. i. 119
- Crosbie (Mr. William), provost of Dumfries, a friend of Mr. Fairford..... Redgauntlet. i. 247, ii. 87
- Crosbie (Mrs.), a cousin of the Redgauntlets. ditto..... ii. 58
- Crossbite (Mr.), a barrister..... ditto..... i. 78
- Crossmyloof (Mr.), the lawyer..... H. of Mid-Loth. ... i. 78
- Croye (Isabelle, Countess of), first disguised as Jacqueline. afterwards married to Quentin Durward..... Quen. Durw. i. 95, ii. 347
- Croye (the Countess Hameline of), her aunt, first disguised as Dame Perette, afterwards married to William de la Marck... ditto..... i. 95, 237
- Croye (Monsieur de la), one of the Duke of Burgundy's officers..... Anne of Geier.....ii. 298
- Cruikshanks (Ebenezar), landlord of the Golden Candlestick Inn..... Waverley..... i. 358
- Cuddie (or Cuthbert) Headrigg..... Old Mortality ... i. 52
- Culloch (Sawney), a pedlar..... Guy Mannering ... i. 248

- Cumberland (the Duke of), commander in chief of the King's forces..... Waverley ii. 257
- Cumberland (the Sheriff of)..... Abbot ii. 310
- Cunningham (Archie), one of the Scottish guard..... Quentin Durward .i. 148
- Curate (the), at the Black Bear Inn, Darlington..... Rob Roy..... i. 148
- Curate (the old)..... Kensworth i. 204
- Cuthbert, one of Henry Smith's men..... Fair M. of Perth .ii. 29
- Cyprian (Brother), a Dominican monk at the monastery..... ditto i. 204
- D'ACUNHA (Teresa), Lady Glenallan's waiting woman..... Antiquary ... ii. 148, 297
- Dalgarno (Lord Malcolm), a profligate young nobleman..... Nigel i. 211
- Dalgetty (Captain, afterwards Sir Dugald), in Montrose's army..... L. of Mont. i. 245, ii. 238
- Dalton (Mrs.), the Rev. Mr. Staunton's house-keeper..... H. of Mid-Loth.... ii. 118
- Dalzell (General Thomas), in the royal army..... Old Mortality ... ii. 103
- Damahoy (Miss Grizel)..... H. of Mid-Loth.... i. 71
- Damian, an esquire attending on the Grand Master of the Templars..... Ivanhoe ii. 192
- Damiotti (Dr. Baptisti), the Paduan quack.. Aunt M.'s Mirror ii. 248
- Dan of the Howlet Hirst..... Monastery ii. 145
- Dan of the Howlet Hirst..... Abbot i. 218
- Dangerfield (Captain), a hired witness to the popish plot..... Peveril..... ii. 24
- Dannischemend, the Persian sorcerer..... Anne of Geier ... i. 201
- D'Avenant (Will), a supposed descendant from Shakspeare..... Woodstock ii. 132
- Davie of Stenhouse, a friend of Hobbie Elliot..... Black Dwarf i. 86
- Davies (John), the Quaker's old fisherman .. Redgauntlet i. 208
- Dawfyd, "the one eyed," a robber chief.... Betrothed..... i. 361
- Day (Ferquhard), the absentee from the Clan Chattan ranks at the conflict..... Fair M. of Perth .ii. 205
- Deans (Douce Davie), the cowfeeder at Edinburgh..... H. of Mid-Loth.... i. 182
- Deans (Jeanie), his eldest daughter, afterwards married to Reuben Butler..... ditto.... i. 139, 146
- Deans (Mrs. Rebecca), his second wife..... ditto i. 146

- Deans (Effie or Euphemia), their daughter, afterwards married to Sir George Staunton H. of Mid-L. i. 147, 161
- Deborah Debbitch, the gouvernante at Lady
Peveril's Peveril i. 125
- Delasserre (Captain), a friend of Harry Bertram's Guy Mannering ... ii. 327
- Demetrius, a citizen Count Robert ii. 218
- Dennet, an old peasant at the Lists of Tem-plestowe Ivanhoe ii. 321
- Dennison (Jenny), Miss Edith Bellenden's attendant, afterwards married to Cuddie
Headrigg Old Mortality i. 161
- Derby (Countess of), and Queen of Man,
Charlotte de la Tremouille Peveril i. 133
- Derby (Philip, Earl of), her son, King of Man ditto i. 239
- Derrick (Tom), quarter-master of the pirate's vessel Pirate ii. 204
- Desborough (Colonel), one of the parliamentary commissioners Woodstock i. 230
- Devorgoil (Lady Jean), a friend of the Hazlewoods Guy Mannering ... i. 178
- Dhu (Mhich-Connel), or M'ilduy, a Highland
chief Leg. of Montrose ii. 211
- Dibble (Davie), the gardener at Monkbarne.. Antiquary i. 86
- Dick, the ostler at the Seven Stars inn at York H. of Mid-Loth. ... ii. 46
- Dick, "the Devil's Dick of Hellgarth" Fair M. of Perth . i. 144
- Dick (Old), of the Dingle Black Dwarf i. 87
- Dickson (Thomas), the farmer at Douglas Dale Castle Dangerous . i. 233
- Dickson (Charles), his son, killed in the church ditto i. 236
- Digges (Miss Maria), a friend of Lady Pen-feather St. Ron. Well. . i. 65, 106
- Diggory (Father), one of the monks at St.
Botolph's priory Ivanhoe ii. 266
- Dijon (The Mayor of) Anne of Geier ... ii. 172
- Dinah, the landlord's daughter at the Spa... St. Ronan's Well . i. 63
- Dingwall (Davie), the attorney at Wolf's-
Hope village Bride of Lam. ... i. 189
- Dingwell, one of Henry Smith's men F. Maid of Perth . ii. 29

- Dinmont (Dandie or Andrew), a store farmer at Charlie's-Hope Guy Mannering . . i. 245
- Dinmont (Ailie), his wife ditto i. 260
- Diogenes, the negro slave of the cynic philoso-opher Count Robert i. 173
- Ditchley (Gaffer), one of Sir Geoffrey Peveril's miners Peveril ii. 50
- Ditton (Thomas), the Rev. Mr. Staunton's footman H. of Mid-Loth. . . ii. 100
- Dixon, Mr. Richard Vere's servant Black Dwarf i. 125
- Dods (Meg), landlady of the inn at St. Ronan's Old Town St. Roman's Well . . i. 19
- Dogget, the warder at the castle of Garde
Doloureuse Betrothed ii. 107
- Donacha dhu na Dunaigh, the Highland robber near Roseneath H. of Mid-Loth. . . ii. 336
- Donald, an attendant of the MacAulays Leg. of Montrose . ii. 13
- Donald, the Duke of Argyle's gamekeeper at Roseneath H. of Mid-Loth. . . ii. 367
- Donnerhugel (Rudolph), one of the Swiss deputies, a cousin of the Biedermans ... Anne of Geier i. 76
- Donnerhugel (Theodore), his uncle, page to the former Baron of Arnheim ditto i. 216
- Doomster (the) H. of Mid-Loth. . . i. 382
- Dorcas, Squire Ingoldshy's servant Redgauntlet i. 292
- Dorcas, an old domestic at Cumnor Place ... Kenilworth ii. 19
- Dorothy (old), the Glover's housekeeper ... F. Maid of Perth . . i. 42
- Dorothy, the old miser's charwoman Nigel ii. 83
- Douban, the Emperor Alexis's physician .. Count Robert ii. 176
- Doublefee (old Jacob), the Duke of Buckingham's money-lender Peveril ii. 262
- Dougal, turnkey at Glasgow Tolbooth, an adherent of Rob Roy Rob Roy ii. 54
- Douglas (Sir James), "the Black Douglas," first disguised as the Knight of the Tomb Castle Dang. . ii. 119, 120
- Douglas (Archibald, Earl of) F. M. of Per. . i. 163, 195
- Douglas (Marjory of), his daughter, Duchess of Rothesay ditto i. 163, ii. 330
- Douglas (George), nephew of the regent, and devoted to Queen Mary Abbot ii. 23
- Dousterswivel (Herman), a German schemer. Antiquary i. 224
- Dowlas (Old Dame), the Duke of Buckingham's housekeeper Peveril ii. 262

- Dragon (the), one of the masques at Kenna-quhair abbey Abbot i. 190
- Driver, Mr. Pleydell's clerk Guy Mannering...ii. 116
- Dronedaughter (Tronda), the Yellowleys' old serving woman Pirate i. 89
- Drudgeit (Peter), Lord Bladderskate's clerk. Redgauntlet i. 216
- Dryfesdale (Jasper), the old steward at Lochleven castle Abbot ii. 58
- Dubourg (Monsieur), a merchant at Ber-deaux Rob Roy i. 109
- Dubourg (Clement), his son, a clerk of Mr.
Osbaldistone, sen. ditto i. 114
- Duchran (the Laird of), a friend of Baron
Bradwardine Waverley ii. 325
- Dudley, a young artist, a friend of Harry Bertram's Guy Mannering ... i. 235
- Duff (Jamie), the idiot boy, attending Mrs.
Bertram's funeral ditto ii. 26
- Dumbiedikes (the old Laird of) H. of Mid-Loth. ... i. 181
- Dumbiedikes (the young Laird of), in love with Jeanie Deans ditto i. 183
- Dummerar (Rev. Dr.), a friend of Sir Geoffrey Peveril Peveril i. 105
- Duntoustie (Mr. Daniel), a young barrister . Redgauntlet i. 216
- Dunbar and March (George, Earl of) F. M. of Per. i. 163, 180
- Dunbar (Eliz.), his daughter, betrothed to the Duke of Rothsay ditto i. 164
- Duncan (Captain), of Knockdunder, the Duke of Argyle's agent at Roseneath.. H. of Mid-Loth. ... ii. 280
- Dunois (the Count de) Quentin Durward. i. 169
- Dunover (Mr.), a poor gentleman in the introduction of the story H. of Mid-Loth. ... i. 28
- Duroch (Duncan), a follower of Donald Bean
Lean Waverley ii. 66
- Dutton (Mrs. Dolly), the Duke of Argyle's dairymaid H. of Mid-Lo. ii. 204, 220
- Durward (Quentin), a young archer of the Scottish guard, in love with Isabelle de Croye Quentin Lyrward. i. 60
- Dwining (Henbane), the pottingar or apothecary Fair M. of Perth. i. 124
- EARNSLIFF (Patrick), the young laird of... Black Dwarf..... i. 27

Eberson (Carl), William de la Marck's young son	Quentin Durward ..ii.	81
Edgar, an attendant on the Prince of Scotland	Fair M. of Perth ..i.	203
Edgar Ravenswood	Bride of Lam	i. 52
Edith (the Lady), mother of Athelstane	Ivanhoe	ii. 304
Edric, a domestic at Hereward's barracks ...	Count Robert	ii. 101
Edward, brother to Hereward, the Varangian guard	ditto	i. 120
Edward IV., King of England	Anne of Geier	ii. 126
Einion (Father), chaplain to the Welsh Prince	Betrothed	i. 38
Eleanor, Queen Consort of Henry II.	Woodstock	i. 226
Elgitha, a female attendant at Rotherwood ..	Ivanhoe	i. 75
Elizabeth, Queen of England	Kenilworth	i. 248
Ellesmere (Mistress), Lady Peveril's head domestic	Peveril	i. 125
Elliott (Halbert or Hobbie), the farmer at the Hough-Foot	Black Dwarf	i. 22
Elliott (Mrs.), his grandmother	ditto	i. 39
Elliott (John), his brother	ditto	i. 112
Elliott (Harry), his brother	ditto	i. 111
Elliott (Lilias), his sister	ditto	i. 39-40
Elliott (Jean), his sister	ditto	ib.
Elliott (Annot), his sister	ditto	ib.
Elshender the Recluse, or Canny Elshie	ditto	i. 32
Elspeth (old), of the Craighburnfoot, the old fisherman's mother, formerly servant to the Countess of Glenallan	Antiquary	ii. 64
Elspeth (auld), Dinmont's old servant	Guy Mann ..i.	266, ii. 308
Empson (Master), Charles the Second's flag-olet player	Peveril	ii. 146
Engelbrecht, one of the Varangian guards ...	Count Robert	ii. 120
Engelred, esquire to Sir Reginald Front de Bœuf	Ivanhoe	ii. 27
Enguerrand, brother to the Marquis of Montserrat	Talisman	ii. 86
Eppie, one of the Rev. Josiah Cargill's servants	St. Ronan's Well ..i.	267
Epps, Mr. Fairford's cook	Redgauntlet	i. 82
Erceldoun (Thomas of), or "Thomas the Rhymers"	Castle Dangerous ..i.	227
Erickson (Sweyn), a fisherman at Jarlshof ..	Pirate	i. 28
Erland, the father of Norna of the Fitful head	ditto	i. 312

- Errol (Gilbert, Earl of), lord high constable of Scotland Fair M. of Perth. ii. 95
- Erskine (the Rev. Dr.), minister of Grey Friar's church, Edinburgh..... Guy Mannering . . ii. 89
- Esdale (Mr.), a surgeon at Madras..... Surgeon's Daugh. i. 187
- Essex (the Earl of), lord high constable of England Ivanhoe..... ii. 336
- Etherington (the late Earl of), father of Tyrrel and Bulmer St. Ronan's Well . ii. 89
- Etherington (the titular Earl of).....
ditto . i. 150, ii. 89
- Eustace, one of Sir Reginald Front de Bœuf's attendants..... Ivanhoe ii. 109
- Eustace (Father), or Eustatius (Father) ... Monastery i. 136
- the sub-prior, and afterwards abbot of St. Mary's ditto ii. 235
- alias* William Allan, a former friend of Henry Warden, alias Henry Wellwood ditto ii. 190
- Eva, daughter of "Torquil of the Oak," betrothed to Ferquhard Day..... Fair M. of Perth ii. 205
- Evan Dhu of Lochiel..... L. of Montrose ii. 47, 66
- Evan Dhu Maccombich, Fergus MacIvor's
foster brother..... Waverley..... i. 224
- Evandale (W. Maxwell, Lord), in the royal army, a suitor of Edith Bellenden..... Old Mortality.... i. 57
- Evans (Master), King Charles the First's giant porter..... Peveril..... ii. 206
- Everard (Colonel Markham), of the Commonwealth party..... Woodstock..... i. 125
- Everard (Master), his father..... ditto..... i. 81
- Everett (Master), a hired witness of the popish plot..... Peveril..... i. 412
- Eviot, Sir John Ramorny's page..... Fair M. of Perth . i. 284
- Ewan of Brigglands, a yeoman under the Duke of Montrose..... Rob Roy..... ii. 227
- Ewart (Nanty or Anthony), the smuggler captain Redgauntlet..... ii. 100
- Executioner (public)..... Old Mortality.... ii. 183
- FAA (Gabriel), Meg Merrilies's nephew, the huntsman at Liddesdale..... Guy Mannering . . i. 279
- Faggot (Master Nicholas), Mr. Justice Fox-ley's clerk..... Redgauntlet i. 304

- Fairbrother (Mr.), counsel for Effie Deans... H. of Mid-Loth. i. 261
- Fairfax (Thomas, Lord), the Duchess of Buckingham's father... Peeveril... ii. 112
- Fairford (Allan), a young barrister, a friend of Darsie Latimer... Redgumlet... 3. 12
- Fairford (Mr. Alexander or Saunders), his father, a lawyer... ditto... i. 23
- Fairford (Peter), Allan's cousin... ditto... i. 142
- Faircrieve (Mr.), the magistrate's clerk... H. of Mid-Loth. i. 258
- Fairservice (Andrew), the gardener at Osbaldistone Hall... Rob Roy... i. 175
- Falconer (Mr.), the Laird of Balmawhapple, a friend of Baron Bradwardine... Waverley... i. 166
- Falconer (Major), Lady Bothwell's brother... Aunt M.'s Mirror ii. 248
- Family physician of Lady Bothwell... ditto... ii. 261
- Farmer (the)... Black Dwarf... i. 16
- Fat Captain (the), of Newgate... Peeveril... ii. 198
- Faw (Tibbie), the ostler's wife in Wandering Willie's tale... Redgumlet... i. 176
- Fca (old Euphane), the old Udaller's house-keeper... Pirate... ii. 6
- Featherhead (John, Esq.), an opponent of Sir Thomas Kittlecourt... Guy Mannering... i. 100
- Feltham (Black), a highwayman with Captain Colepepper... Nigel... ii. 302, 326
- Fenella, the deaf and dumb girl, the Countess of Derby's attendant, alias Zarah, daughter of Edward Christian... Peeveril i. 312, 326, ii. 436
- Ferrand de Vaudemont (Count), Duke of Lorraine... Arme of Geier... ii. 268
- first disguised as Lawrenz Neiperg... ditto... i. 179
- Finlayson (Luckie), landlady of the lodgings in Edinburgh... Guy Mannering... ii. 88
- Finniston (Luckie), a tenant of the Laird of Gudgeonford... ditto... i. 92
- Finniston (Duncan), her husband... ditto... 20.
- Fisher (Ralph), Roland Græme's assistant at Avenel Castle... Abbot... i. 99
- Fitzurse (Waldemar), a baron following Prince John... Isunkoe... i. 128
- Flammock (Wilkin), the Flemish burgees at the Castle of Garde Doloureuse... Betrothed... i. 56

- Flammock (Rose, or Roschen), his daughter,
 Lady Eveline's attendant..... Betrothed..... i. 64
- Fleecebumpkin (Master), Mr. Ireby's bailiff Two Drovers.... ii. 196
- Fleming (Archdeacon), to whom old Meg
 Murdockson confessed..... H. of M. Loth. ii. 236, 269
- Fleming (Lady Mary), one of Queen Mary's maids of honour..... Abbot..... ii. 12
- Fleming (Sir Malcolm), a former suitor of Lady Margaret de Hautlieu..... Castle Dangerous. ii. 83
- Fletcher (Dick), one of the pirates..... Pirate..... ii. 235
- Flibbertigibbet (Dickie Sludge)..... Kenilworth..... i. 166
- Flockhart (Widow), landlady of MacIvor's lodgings in the Canongate..... Waverley..... ii. 104
- Florise the Lady, Queen Berengaria's attendant..... Talisman..... i. 226
- Flyter (Mrs.), landlady of Frank's lodgings in Glasgow..... Rob Roy..... ii. 84
- Forester (Sir Philip), a libertine knight, afterwards in disguise at the ball-room..... Aunt M.'s Mirror. ii. 237
- Forester (Lady Jemima), his wife..... ditto..... ii. 238
- Foster (Captain), on guard at Tully Veolan ruin..... Waverley..... ii. 319
- Foster, the English champion..... Laird's Jock..... ii. 294
- Foster (Anthony), or "Tony-fire-the-Faggot," the Earl of Leicester's agent at Cumnor Place..... Kenilworth..... i. 54
- Foster (Janet), his daughter..... ditto..... i. 77
- Foster (Sir John), the English warden..... Monastery..... ii. 265
- Foxley (Squire Matthew), a magistrate..... Redgauntlet..... i. 302
- Francis (old Father), a Dominican monk,
 Simon Glover's confessor..... Fair M. of Perth ii. 129
- Francis (Father), at the convent at Namur.. Quentin Durward. i. 336
- Franciscan prior (the), at Namur..... ditto..... i. 317
- Front de Bœuf (Sir Reginald), one of the knights challengers..... Ivanhoe..... i. 123
- GALBRAITH of Garschattachin (Major Duncan), a militia officer..... Rob Roy.... ii. 148, 157
- Galeotti Martivalle (Martius)..... Quentin Durward i. 265
- Gamelyn de Guardover (Sir)..... Antiquary..... ii. 262
- Ganlesse (Richard), alias Simon Canter..... Peveril..... i. 410
- Gardiner (Richard), the Misses Arthuret's porter..... Redgauntlet..... ii. 137

- Gardiner (Colonel), colonel of Waverley's regiment..... Wav. i. 140, 317, ii. 151
- Gatheral (old), the Duke of Buckingham's steward..... Pevenil..... ii. 105
- Gatherill (old), Sir Geoffrey Pevenil's bailiff. ditto..... i. 95
- Geddes (Joshua), the Quaker..... Redgarmllet..... i. 88
- Geddes (Rachel), his sister..... ditto..... i. 111
- Geddes (Philip), their grandfather..... ditto..... i. 110
- Geierstein (Arnold, Count of),..... Anne of Geier... i. 96
- Geierstein (Count Albert of), as the black priest of St. Paul's..... ditto..... i. 243
- as the president of the secret tribunal afterwards as the monk at Mont St. Victoire..... ditto..... ii. 49
- Geierstein (Anne of), his daughter, "the Maiden of the Mist," alias the Baroness of Arnheim..... ditto... i. 56, ii. 69
- Geierstein (Count Heinrich of), Count Arnold's grandfather..... ditto..... i. 96
- Geierstein (Count Williewald of), Count Arnold's father..... ditto..... i. 97
- Geieslaer (Peterkin), one of the insurgents at Liege..... Quentin Durward ii. 63
- Gellatley (Davie), the Baron of Bradwardine's idiot servant..... Waverley..... i. 155
- Gellatley (old Janet), his mother..... ditto..... ii. 292-296
- Genvil (Ralph), a veteran in Hugo de Lacy's troop..... Betrothed..... ii. 22
- Geoffrey, the old ostler at John Meng's inn.. Anne of Geier... ii. 19
- Geraldin (Lord), son of the Earl of Glenallan, first as William Lovel, afterwards as Major Neville..... Antiqua. i. 20, ii. 294, 299
- Geraldin (Sir Aymer de), an ancestor of Lord Geraldin..... ditto..... ii. 185
- Gerard, Sir Patrick Charteris's attendant... Fair M. of Perth i. 158
- Gibbet (Master), Bletson's secretary.... Woodstock..... i. 244
- Gibbie (Goose), a half-witted lad in Lady Belenden's service..... Old Mortality... i. 52
- Gibson (Janet), a young dependant on Mrs. Margaret Bertram..... Guy Mannering... ii. 100
- Gilbert, Sir Patrick Charteris's butler..... Fair M. of Perth. i. 154
- Gilbertsleugh, cousin to Lady Margaret Belenden..... Old Mortality... i. 61

- Giles, Claud Halcro's serving boy..... Pirate ii. 141
 Giles, a warder of the tower..... Nigel ii. 189
 Giles, Sir Reginald Front de Bœuf's jailer... Ivanhoe ii. 54
 Giles (Will), the cooper's apprentice..... Bride of Lam.... i. 194
 Gilfillan (Habakkuk), or "Gifted Gilfillan," a Cameronian officer and enthusiast..... Waverley..... ii. 46
 Gillian (Dame), the Lady Eveline's tirewoman Betrothed..... i. 144
 Girder (Gilbert or Gibbie), the cooper at Wolf's-Hope village..... Bride of Lam.... i. 193
 Girder (Jean), his wife..... ditto..... i. 194
 Girmington (the Laird of)..... ditto i. 99, ii. 69, 70
 Gladsmoor (Mr.), the Earl of Glenallan's almoner Antiquary ii. 84
 Glasgow (the bishop of)..... Castle Dangerous ii. 167
 Glass, a citizen of Perth..... Fair M. of Perth i. 119
 Glass (Mrs.), the tobacconist, Jeanie Deans's friend in London..... H. M.-L. ii. 46, 149, 164
 Glenallan (Joscelind, Dowager Countess of) Antiquary ii. 68
 Glenallan (the Earl of), her son..... ditto ii. 85
 Glendale (Sir Richard), a conspirator with Redgauntlet..... Redgauntlet..... ii. 266
 Glendinning, or Brydone (Elspeth), the widow of Simon Glendinning..... Monastery i. 85
 Glendinning (Halbert), her son..... ditto..... i. 86, 291
 Glendinning (Edward), ditto..... ditto i. 87
 Glendinning (Sir Halbert), the Knight of Avenel..... Abbot i. 45
 Glenprosing (the old Lady), a neighbour of Yellowley's father..... Pirate i. 61
 Glossin (Gilbert), a lawyer, purchaser of the Ellangowan estate..... Guy Mannering... i. 100
 Gloucester (the Duke of), brother of King
 Charles the Second..... Woodstock..... ii. 855
 Gloucester (Richard, Duke of), brother of King Edward the Fourth..... Anne of Geier..... ii. 127
 Gloucester (the Earl of), in King Henry the Second's court..... Betrothed..... ii. 64
 Glover (Simon), the old Glover of Perth... Fair M. of Perth i. 34
 Glover (Catherine), his daughter, "the fair Maid of Perth"..... ditto..... ib.
 Glover (Hans), Gertrude Pavillon's bachelor Quentin Durward ii. 97
 Glowrowrum (the old lady), a friend of Magnus Troil..... Pirate..... i. 219

- Godfrey (Sir Edmondsbury), a magistrate killed by the Papists..... Peveril..... i. 458
- Goffe (Capt.), captain of the pirate vessel... Pirate..... ii. 202
- Goldiebirds (Messrs.), creditors of Sir Arthur
Wardour..... Antiquary..... ii. 244
- Goldthred (Lawrence), the mercer near Cum-nor Place..... Kenilworth..... i. 24
- Goodman Grist, the miller, a friend of the smugglers..... Redgauntlet..... ii. 136
- Goodriche (Mr.), a catholic priest at Middle-mas..... Surgeon's Daugh. i. 39
- Goodsire (Johnnie), the weaver near Charlie's-
hope farm..... Guy Mannering... i. 284
- Gordon (Rev. Mr.), chaplain in Cromwell's troop..... Woodstock..... i. 181
- Gosling (Giles), landlord of the "Black Bear" inn at Cumnor..... Kenilworth..... i. 16
- Gosling (Cicely), his daughter..... ditto..... i. 45
- Gourlay (Ailshie), a privileged fool or jester. Antiquary..... ii. 272
- Gourlay (Ailsie), an old sybil at Alice Gray's death..... Bride of Lam.... ii. 110
- Gow (old Neil), the fiddler, and his son Nathaniel..... St. Roman's Well. ii. 19
- Græme (Roland), the heir of Avenel..... Abbot..... ii. 276
- first, page to the lady of Avenel.... ditto..... i. 25
- afterwards page to Queen Mary.... ditto..... ii. 7
- Græme (Magdalene), his grandmother..... ditto..... i. 34
- or the Dame of Heathergill, afterwards as mother Nicueven at Kinross..... ditto..... ii. 108
- Græme (William), the Red Reiver at Westburnflat..... Black Dwarf.... i. 68
- Græme (Mrs.), his mother, the old hag..... ditto..... i. 98
- Grahame (Col. John), of Claverhouse, in the Royal army..... Old Mortality... i. 190
- afterwards the Viscount of Dundee. ditto..... ii. 198
- Grahame (Cornet Richard), his nephew.... ditto..... i. 77
- Graneangowl (Rev. Mr.), Sir Duncan Campbell's chaplain..... Leg. of Montrose. ii. 107
- Grantmesnil (Sir Hugh de), one of the knights challengers..... Ivanhoe..... i. 123, 148
- Gratian (Father), the begging friar at John Mengs' inn..... Anne of Geier... ii. 24

- Gray (old Alice), a former servant of the Ravenswoods Bride of Lam...... i. 72
- Gray (Dr. Gideon), the village doctor at Middlemas Surgeon's Daugh. i. 32
- Gray (Mrs.), his wife ditto..... i. 32
- Gray (Menie), their daughter ditto..... i. 59
- Greenhalgh, the Earl of Derby's messenger.. Peveril..... i. 312
- Greenhorn (Mr. Gilbert), an attorney..... Antiquary ...ii: 244, 268
- Greenhorn (Mr. Girnigo), his father..... ditto.....ii. 244
- Greenleaf (Gilbert), the old archer at Douglas Castle Castle Dangerous. i. 384
- Gregson (Widow), Darsie Latimer's landlady at Shepherd's Bush Redgauntlet..... i. 49
- Gregson (Gilbert), Father Buonaventure's messenger ditto.....ii. 177
- Grieve (Jockie), landlord of an alehouse near Charlie's-hope Guy Mannering . . i. 248
- Griffin (Allan), landlord of the "Griffin" Inn at Perth..... Fair M. of Perth.ii. 5
- Griffiths, the Earl of Derby's old steward... Peveril..... i. 318
- Griffiths (Mr. Samuel), Redgauntlet's agent in London Redgauntlet..... i. 21
- Grimesby (Gaffer), an old farmer at Marlboro' Kenilworth..... i. 192
- Grinderson (Mr. Gabriel), Mr. Greenhorn's partner Antiquary ...ii. 244, 268
- Grizzie, Mrs. Saddletree's maid-servant.... H. of Mid-Loth.... i. 395
- Grizzly, one of the Rev. Josiah Cargill's servants St. Roman's Well.ii. 128
- Grizzle, the chamber-maid at the Kippletrangan inn..... Guy Mannering . . i. 149
- Groatsetter (Miss Clara), niece of the old Lady Glowrowrum..... Pirate i. 219
- Groatsetter, (Miss Maddie), niece of the old Lady Glowrowrum..... ditto..... ib.
- Grumball (the Rev. Dr.), a conspirator with Redgauntlet..... Redgauntlet.....ii. 265
- Guarine (Philip), Sir Hugo de Lacy's esquire Betrothed..... i. 229
- Gudyill (old John), Lady Bellenden's butler. Old Mortality.... i. 53
- Guenevra, the dwarf servant at the Hermit of Engaddi's cell..... Talisman..... i. 102
- Gurth, the swineherd at Rotherwood..... Ivanhoe.....i. 40, 41
- Guthrie (John), one of the archers of the Scottish guard..... Quentin Durward i. 143

- Guyot (Bertrand), one of the archers of the Scottish guard..... Quentin Durward i. 288
- Gwenwyn, or Gwenwynwen, Prince of Powis Land..... Betrothed..... i. 33
- Gwynn (Nell), one of Charles the Second's mistresses..... Pevevil ... i. 240, ii. 300
- HACKBURN (Simon of), a friend of Hobbie Elliot's..... Black Dwarf..... i. 83
- Hadaway (Jack), a former neighbour of Nanty Ewart..... Redgauntlet..... ii. 117
- Hadaway (Mrs.), Lovel's landlady at Fairport..... Antiquary..... i. 209
- Hagenbach (Sir Archibald von), the Governor of La Ferette..... Anne of Geier i. 126, 284
- Halcro (Claud), the Udaller's old bard..... Pirate..... i. 196
- Haldimund (Sir Ewes), a friend of Lord Dalgarno's..... Nigel..... i. 311
- Halkit (Mr.), a young lawyer in the introduction of the story..... H. of Mid-Loth... i. 26
- Hall (Sir Christopher), an officer in the king's service..... Leg. of Montrose ii. 19
- Halliday (Tom), a private in the royal army..... Old Mortality... i. 78
- Hamet, one of Sir Brian de Bois Guilbert's black slaves..... Ivanhoe..... i. 52, 62
- Hamilton (Lady Emily), sister of Lord Evandale..... Old Mortality... ii. 211
- Hammerlein (Claus), the smith, one of the insurgents at Liege..... Quentin Durward ii. 32
- Hammorgaw (Mr.), precentor at Glasgow... Rob Roy..... ii. 45
- Hannah, Mr. Fairford's housekeeper..... Redgauntlet..... i. 82
- Hannah, Mr. Bindloose's housekeeper..... St. Ronan's Well i. 213
- Hans, the pious ferryman on the banks of the Rhine..... Anne of Geier... i. 338
- Hanson (Adrian), a Dutch merchant, killed at Boston..... Pevevil..... ? 294
- Hansen (Neil), a soldier in the castle of Garde Doloureuse..... Betrothed..... i. 85
- Happer, or Hob, the miller to St. Mary's convent..... Monastery..... i. 145
- Happer (Mysie), his daughter, afterwards disguised as a page with Sir Piercie Shafton, and at last married to him..... ditto..... i. 223

- Harbothel (Master Fabian), Sir Aymer de
Valence's esquire Castle Dangerous. i. 331
- Hardie (Mr.), a young lawyer, in the introduction of the story H. of Mid-Loth.... i. 26
- Harpax, the centurion in the "Immortal Guard" Count Robert..... i. 58
- Harrison (General), one of the parliamentary commissioners Woodstock i. 230
- Harrison, Lady Bellenden's old steward..... Old Mortality.... i. 51
- Harry (Blind), the minstrel..... Fair M. of Perth i. 118
- Hartley (Adam), afterwards Dr. Hartley, apprentice to Dr. Gray Surgeon's D.... i. 78, 129
- Hassan, the story-teller, in the Arabian physician's retinue Talisman ii. 58
- Hastie (Robin), the smuggler publican at Annan Redgauntlet..... ii. 99
- Hastings, Howard, and Stanley, with King
Edward the Fourth..... Anne of Geier... ii. 127
- Hatteraick (Dirk), alias Jans Jansen, a Dutch smuggler captain..... G. Mannering i. 88, ii. 86
- Hautlieu (Sir Artevan de), in the introduced story Count Robert..... i. 229
- Hautlieu (the Lady Margaret de), affianced to Sir Malcolm Fleming, first disguised as Sister Ursula..... Castle Dangerous ii. 76
- Hawkins, boatswain of the pirate vessel.... Pirate..... ii. 204
- Hay (Colonel), in the king's service Leg. of Montrose ii. 230
- Hay (John), the fisherman near Ellangowan.. Guy Mannering . . i. 95
- Hazlewood (Sir Robert), of Hazlewood, an old baronet ditto..... ii. 145
- Hazlewood (Charles), his son, in love with Lucy Bertram ditto..... i. 172
- Headman (the), or public executioner..... Talisman i. 266
- Heatherblutter (John), the Baron of Bradwardine's gamekeeper..... Waverley..... ii. 294
- Hector of the Mist, an outlaw, killed by Allan
MacAulay Leg. of Montrose ii. 40
- Henderson (Elias), the chaplain at Lochleven
Castle Abbot ii. 58
- Henreich, a German lanzknecht Quentin Durward i. 327
- Henrietta Maria, the late Queen-Consort of Charles the First..... Peveril..... ii. 211
- Henry the Second, King of England..... Betrothed..... ii. 61

- Henry the Second, King of England..... Talisman.....ii. 81
- Herbert (Sir William), a friend of Hugo de Lacy's Betrothed..... i. 281
- Hereward, one of the Varangian Guard..... Count Robert... i. 45, 66
- Heriot (Master George), the king's goldsmith Nigel i. 57
- Herman of Goodalricke (Sir)..... *Ivanhoe*ii. 219
- Hermione, the beautiful Persian lady..... Anne of Geier... i. 207
- Hermione (the Lady), or Lady Erminia Paulette, privately married to Lord Dalgarno Nigel i. 154
- Hermite (Tristan P), Louis the Eleventh's provost-marshal, first disguised as Maitre
Pierre's gossip Quentin Durward i. 63
- Hermite (Tristan P), or "Tristrem of the Hospital," Louis the Eleventh's provost-marshal Anne of Geier... i. 250
- Heron (Sir George), of Chip-chace, an officer with Sir John Foster Monastery ii. 268
- Herries (Lord), attending Queen Mary to Dundrennan *Abbot*ii. 307
- Hertford (the Marquis of), in Charles the Second's court..... *Woodstock*ii. 167
- Heskett (Ralph), landlord of the village ale-house Two Drovers.....ii. 199
- Heskett (Dame), his wife ditto.....ii. 200
- Hettly (May), an old servant of David Deans H. of Mid-Loth... i. 400
- Heukbane (Mrs.), the butcher's wife, a friend of Mr. Mailsetter..... Antiquary i. 197
- Hewit (Godfrey Bertram), natural son of Mr.
Godfrey Bertram..... Guy Mannering .ii. 811
- Higg, "the son of Snell," the lame witness at the trial of Rebecca *Ivanhoe*ii. 223
- High Sheriff (the), at Carlisle Waverley.....ii. 332
- Hilarius (Brother), the refectitioner at St.
Mary's Monastery..... i. 274
- Hildebrod (Duke), president of the Alsatian Club Nigel i. 334
- Hillary (Tom), the town-clerk's apprentice, afterwards Captain Hillary..... Surgeon's D. i. 73, 102
- Hinchup (Dame), a peasant at the execution of Meg Murdockson..... H. of Mid-Loth...ii. 222
- Hislop (John), the old carrier near St. Ronans St. Ronan's Well.. i. 49
- Hob Miller, of Twyford, one of the insurgents Betrothed.....ii. 82

- Hobbie o' Sorbietrees, one of the huntsmen near Charlie's-hope farm..... Guy Mannering... i. 282
- Hobbler (the Rev. Dr.), at Ellieslaw Castle,
one of the Jacobite conspirators..... Black Dwarf..... i. 147
- Hobby-horse (the), one of the masquers at Kennaquhair Abbey..... Abbot..... i. 190
- Hochspringen (the young Duke of), in Don-nerhugel's narrative..... Anne of Geier... i. 209
- Hodges (John), a servant of Waverley..... Waverley..... ii. 184
- Hodges (Joe), Bertram's landlord by the lake near Mervyn Hall..... Guy Mannering... i. 288
- Hodgeson (Gaffer), a Puritan..... Peveril..... i. 122
- Holdenough (Master Nehemiah), the Presbyterian preacher..... Woodstock..... i. 61
- Holiday (Herasmus), the schoolmaster in the Vale of Whitehorse..... Kenilworth..... i. 156
- Hookem (Mr.), Lawyer Clippurse's partner.. Waverley..... ii. 349
- Horst (Conrade), one of the insurgents at Liege..... Quentin Durward ii. 74
- Houghton (Sergeant), in Waverley's regiment Waverley..... ii. 184
- Howard, Hastings, and Stanley, with King
Edward the Fourth..... Anne of Geier... ii. 127
- Howatson (Luckie), the midwife at Ellangowan..... Guy Mannering... i. 70
- Howden (Mrs.), the salewoman..... H. of Mid-Loth... i. 70
- Howie (Jamie), Malcolm Bradwardine's bailie Waverley..... ii. 294
- Howlaglass (Master), a preacher, Justice
Maulstatutes' friend..... Peveril..... ii. 195
- Hubert, an archer under Sir Philip de Malvoisin..... Ivanhoe... i. 215
- Hudson (Sir Geoffrey), the celebrated dwarf, formerly page to the late Queen Henrietta Maria..... Peveril..... ii. 201, 207
- Hudson (Tam), a gamekeeper..... Guy Mannering... i. 247
- Hugh, the blacksmith, of Ringleburn, a friend of Hobbie Elliot..... Black Dwarf..... i. 88
- Hugh, Count of Vermandois, a crusader..... Count Robert i. 139, 205
- Hugo Hugonet, the Douglas minstrel..... Castle Dangerous . i. 328
- Humgudgeon (Corporal Grace-be-here), in Cromwell's troop..... Woodstock..... ii. 281
- Hundebert, the steward at Rotherwood..... Ivanhoe.... i. 74
- Hundwolf, the Lady of Baldringham's steward..... Betrothed..... i. 199

- Hunsdon (Lord), Queen Elizabeth's cousin . . . Kenilworth i. 248
- Huntingdon (the Earl of), of Queen Elizabeth's court ditto ii. 170
- Huntingdon (David, Earl of), the Prince Royal of Scotland, first as Sir Kenneth, the Knight of the Leopard, afterwards as Zohauk, the Nubian slave Talisman ii. 163
- Huntinglen (the Earl of), an old Scottish nobleman Nigel i. 192
- Huntly (the Marquis of), in the king's service Leg. of Montrose ii. 68
- Hutcheon, the auld domestic in Wandering Willie's tale Redgamblet i. 170
- Hutcheon, one of Julian Avenel's retainers . . . Monastery ii. 92
- Hyder Ali Khan Behauder, the Nawaub of Mysore Surgeon's D. ii. 228, 285
- Hymbercourt (Baron d'), one of the Duke of Burgundy's officers Quentin Durward ii. 130
- Hyndman (Master), usher to the council-chamber at Holyrood Abbot i. 270
- ILDERTON (Miss Lucy), Miss Vere's cousin . . . Black Dwarf i. 58
- Ilderton (Miss Nancy) Miss Vere's cousin . . . ditto ib.
- Ingelram (Abbot), of St. Mary's Monastery ii. 226
- Inglewood (Squire), a magistrate near Osbaldistone Hall Rob Roy i. 190
- Inglis (Corporal), in the royal army Old Mortality i. 228
- Ireby (Mr.), a country squire Two Drovers ii. 194
- Irene, the Empress of Greece Count Robert i. 91
- Irwin (Hannah), Clara Mowbray's confidante . . . St. Roman's Well ii. 154
- Isaac of York, the Jew Ivanhoe i. 88
- Ismail, "the infidel," one of the Immortal Guard Count Robert i. 59
- Ivanhoe (Sir Wilfred, Knight of), King Richard's favourite, Cedric of Rotherwood's disinherited son Ivanhoe i. 206
- first disguised as the palmer at Rotherwood ditto i. 64
- afterwards as "Desdichado," or the Disinherited Knight, at the tournament ditto i. 146-7
- Iverach, or Stewart (Allan), and other highlanders at the Clachan of Aberfoil Rob Roy ii. 148

- JABOS (Jock), the postilion at the Kippletrinning inn Guy Mannering . . . i. 56
- JAMES I. King of England Nigel i. 120
- JAMES (Prince), youngest son of King Robert III. F. M. of P. ii. 241, 328
- JAMIESON (Bet), the nurse at Dr. Gray's Surgeon's Daugh. i. 72
- JANET, the Ramsays' Scotch laundress Nigel i. 169
- JANET of Tomahourich (Muhme) Two Drovers. . . . ii. 187
- JANNIKEN (Little), apprentice to Henry Smith F. M. of P. i. 106, ii. 279
- JARVIE (Baillie Nicol), at Glasgow Rob Roy ii. 65
- JASPER, the old ploughman at Glendearg Tower Monastery i. 240
- JAUP (Alison), an old woman at Middlemas village Surgeon's Daugh. . . i. 34
- JAUP (Saunders), a farmer at old St. Ronan's St. Ronan's Well. . ii. 120
- JEHOIACHIM, the Quaker's servant Redgauntlet. . . . i. 110
- JELLICOT (old Goody), at the under keeper's hut Woodstock i. 134
- JENKIN, one of Julian Avenel's retainers. Monastery ii. 78
- JEPHSON, an old smuggler. Redgauntlet. . . . ii. 133
- JEREMY (Master), Lord Saville's head domestic Peveril. ii. 98
- JERNINGHAM (Master Thomas), the Duke of Buckingham's gentleman ditto ii. 104, 255
- JEROME (Father), the abbot at St. Bride's convent Castle Dangerous ii. 37
- JIM, Reginald Lowestoffe's boy Nigel i. 323
- "JIN VIN," (Jenkin Vincent) ditto i. 44
- JINKER (Lieutenant Jamie), the horse dealer at Doune Waverley ii. 78
- JOAN, one of the Princesses of France, affianced to the Duke of Orleans Quentin Durward i. 177
- JOB and Elspat, Sergeant Houghton's father and mother Waverley ii. 136
- JOBSON (Mr. Joseph), Squire Inglewood's clerk Rob Roy i. 191
- JOCK o' Dawston Cleugh Guy Mannering. . ii. 81
- JOCK (Slounging), one of MacGuffog the jailer's men ditto ii. 35
- JOHN or Jan, one of Squire Ingoldsby's servants Redgauntlet. . . . i. 295
- JOHN, the driver of the Queensferry diligence Antiquary i. 27
- JOHN (Prince), son of King Henry II. Betrothed. ii. 61

- John (Prince), brother of King Richard Talisman ii. 85
 John (Prince), of Anjou Ivanhoe i. 128
 Johnstone (Auld Willie), an old fisherman Guy Mannering . . ii. 130
 Johnstone (Young), his son ditto ib.
 Joliffe, Lady Penfeather's footman St. Ronan's Well . . i. 123
 Joliffe (Joceline), the under keeper of Woodstock forest Woodstock i. 71
 Jonathan, one of General Harrison's servants ditto i. 297
 Jonathan, an attendant on Lord Saville Peveril ii. 98
 Jones (Mrs.), Lady Penfeather's waiting woman St. Ron. W. i. 116, ii. 243
 Jonson (Ben) Woodstock i. 86
 Jopson (Jacob), the farmer at the village near Clifton Waverley ii. 258
 Jopson (Cicely), his daughter, afterwards married to Ned Williams ditto ib.
 Jorworth-ap-Jevan, Prince Gwenwyn's envoy Betrothed i. 47
 Joceline (Sir), an English knight, a crusader Talisman ii. 31
 Joseph, the old gardener at Shaw's castle St. Ronan's Well ii. 288
 Judge (the), at Carlisle Waverley ii. 331
 Judge (the), at Effie Deans's trial H. of Mid-Loth. . . i. 348
 Judge (the), at Robin Oig's trial Two Drovers ii. 212
 Judith (Aunt), Master George Heriot's sister Nigel i. 141
- KAIMES (Lord), a Scottish judge Redgauntlet i. 245
 Keelavine (Mr.), painter at the Spa hotel St. Ronan's Well i. 121
 Keltie (old), the innkeeper near Kinross Abbot ii. 219
 Kennedy (Frank), an excise officer murdered by the smugglers Guy Mannering . . i. 122
 Kenneth (Sir), "the Knight of the Leopard," a disguise assumed by David, Earl of Huntingdon Talisman i. 25
 Kenneth, one of Sir John Ramorny's followers Fair M. of Perth i. 79
 Kettledrummle (Gabriel), a Covenanter preacher Old Mortality i. 225, 282
 Kilderkin (Ned), at Greenwich Nigel ii. 164
 Kilian of Kersberg, Sir Archibald Von Hagenbach's esquire Anne of Geier i. 234
 Kirk (Mr. John), foreman of the jury on Effie Deans's trial H. of Mid-Loth. . . i. 380
 Kitchener (the), at St. Mary's Monastery i. 274
 Kitt Henshaw, the Provost's boatman F. M. of P. ii. 147, 222

- Kittlecourt (Sir Thomas), M. P., a neighbour of the Laird of Ellangowan..... Guy Mannering . . i. 98
- "Knight of the Tomb" (the) Castle Dangerous ii. 119
- Knighton, the Duke of Buckingham's groom Nigel i. 147
- Knockwinnock (Sybil), mother of "Malcolm Misbegot" Antiquary ii. 40
- LACY (Sir Hugo de), the constable of Chester, a crusader Betrothed i. 151, 163
- Lady (Sir Damian de), his nephew, afterwards married to Lady Eveline..... ditto i. 142
- Lacy (Randal de), Sir Hugo's kinsman, in several disguises..... ditto i. 152, 240, 332, 347
- "Lady of the Lake," and other masques at Kenilworth Kenilworth ii. 159
- Lady in the Sacque (the), the apparition... Tap. Chamber.... ii. 288
- Laidler (Donald), one of the prisoners at Por-tanferry..... Guy Mannering . . ii. 170
- Lambert (General), the parliamentary leader Woodstock ii. 291
- Lambskin (Mrs. Alice), companion to Mrs.
Baliol..... Highland Widow ii. 274
- Lambourne (Michael), a retainer of the Earl of Leicester Kenilworth..... i. 16
- Lamington, a follower of Sir Geoffrey Peveril Peveril i. 155
- Lampugh (Will), a smuggler Redgauntlet..... ii. 138
- Landais (Peter), the Duke of Bretagne's favourite minister Anne of Geier. . . ii. 347
- Landlord of the Gled's Nest..... Monastery..... ii. 164
- Laneham (Master Robert), clerk of the council-chamber door..... Kenilworth..... i. 294
- Laneham (Sybil), his wife, one of the revellers at Kenilworth castle..... ditto..... ii. 87
- Langcale (the Laird of), a leader in the Cov-enanters' army Old Mortality.... ii. 44
- Langley (Sir Frederick), a suitor of Miss Vere, one of the Jacobite conspirators.. Black Dwarf.... i. 67
- Lapraik (Laurie), Steenie Steenson's friend in Wandering Willie's tale..... Redgauntlet..... i. 167
- Lascaris, a citizen Count Robert ii. 219
- Latherum, the barber, at the Black Bear inn
at Darlington..... Rob Roy..... i. 148
- Latimer (Mr. Ralph), Darsie Latimer's pretended father Redgauntlet..... i. 140

- Lauderdale (Duke of), president of the Scottish privy council. Old Mortality. ii. 179
- Launcelot, bard to the Countess Brenhilda's father. Count Robert. ii. 94
- Lawford (Mr.), the town clerk of Middlemas Surgeon's Daugh. i. 48
- Lawrence (Tom), alias "Tyburn Tom" a highwayman. H. of Mid-Loth. ii. 55, 346
- Lawson (Sandie), landlord of the Spa hotel. . . St. Ronan's Well. i. 41
- "Le Glorieux," the Duke's jester. Quentin Durward ii. 168
- Lee (Sir Henry), an officer in attendance at Greenwich palace. Kenilworth. i. 278
- Lee (Sir Henry), ranger of Woodstock. . . . Woodstock. i. 59, 78
- Lee (Alice), his daughter, afterwards married to Markham Everard. ditto. i. 60, 78
- Lee (Colonel Albert), her brother, Charles the Second's friend. ditto. ii. 28
- Leicester (the Earl of), of Queen Elizabeth's court. Kenilworth. i. 108
- Leicester (the Countess of), formerly Amy Robsart, betrothed to Edmund Tressilian ditto. i. 66
- Leopold, Archduke of Austria, a crusader. . . Talisman. i. 186
- Lesley (Mr.), a friend of Captain MacIntyre's Antiquary. i. 270
- Leslie (General), a parliamentary leader. . . Leg. of Montrose. i. 242
- Lesly (Ludovic), "Le Balafre," an old archer of the Scottish guard, uncle of Quentin Durward. Quentin Durward i. 111
- Leven (the Earl of), a parliamentary leader Leg. of Montrose . . i. 242
- Levitt (Frank), a highwayman. H. of Mid-Loth. . . ii. 55
- Lickitup (the Laird of), Niel Blane's acquaintance. Old Mortality. i. 69
- Lightbody (Luckie), alias "Marion Loup the Dike" the cooper's wife's mother. . . . Bride of Lam. . . . i. 198
- Light o'heel (Janet), mother of Godfrey Bertram Hewit. Guy Manneving. . ii. 311
- Lincoln (the Bishop of). Kenilworth. i. 255
- Lindesay (Lord), one of the embassy to Queen Mary. Abbot. i. 816
- Lindesay, an archer of the Scottish guard. . . Quentin Durward i. 143
- Linklater (Laurie), yeoman of the king's kitchen, a friend of Ritchie Moniplies. . . Nigel. i. 87. ii. 166
- Littlejohn (Baillie), a magistrate at Fairport. Antiquary. ii. 198
- Little John and Robin Hood. Talisman. i. 137

- Lochleven (the Lady of), mother of the Regent Murray Abbot ii. 5
- Logothete (the), chancellor of the Grecian Empire Count Robert i. 162
- Longchamp, Bishop of Ely, high justiciary in England during King Richard's absence. Talisman ii. 85
- Loredani (Giacomo), King Richard's interpreter ditto i. 142
- Lorimer, on guard at Ardenvohr castle Leg. of Montrose ii. 118
- Lorn (M'Dougal of) ditto ii. 48
- Louis the Eleventh, King of France, first disguised as Maitre Pierre, a merchant... Queen Durward i. 65, 175
- Louis the Eleventh, King of France Anne of G. ii. 118, 180
- Louis of Bourbon, the Prince-Bishop of Liege Quentin Durward ii. 17
- Louis, Duke of Orleans ditto i. 171
- Louis, one of Julian Avenel's retainers Monastery ii. 95
- Louise, the glee-maiden F. M. of Perth i. 188, 190
- Louponheight (the young Laird of), at the ball at Middlemas Surgeon's Daugh. i. 88
- Lowestoffe (Reginald), a young Templar... Nigel i. 317
- Lowrie (Tam), the innkeeper at Marchthorn. St. Ronan's Well. ii. 188
- Lowther (Jack), a smuggler Redgauntlet ii. 184
- Lumley (Captain), in the Royal Army Old Mortality ... ii. 117
- Lundin (the Rev. Sir Louis), the town clerk of Perth F. Maid of Perth ii. 36
- Lundin (Dr. Luke), the chamberlain at Kinross Abbot ii. 96
- Lutin, Lord Dalgarno's gipsy page Nigel i. 232
- Lyle (Annot), daughter of the Knight of Ardenvohr, beloved by Allan MacAulay... Leg. of Montrose ii. 49
 afterwards married to the Earl of Menteith ditto ii. 271
- Lysimachus, an artist of Constantinople... Count Robert i. 55
- MACALPINE (Jeanie), landlady of the Clachan of Aberfoyle Rob Roy ii. 145
- MacAnaleister (Eachin), a follower of Rob Roy ditto ii. 266
- MacAulay (Allan), or "Allan of the Red Hand," in love with Annot Lyle Leg. of Montrose ii. 15
- MacAulay (Angus), a Highland chief ditto ii. 21
- MacBriar (Ephraim), an enthusiast preacher Old Mortality i. 285

- MacCallum (Dougal), the auld butler in Wandering Willie's tale..... Redgauntlet..... i. 106
- MacCandlish (Mrs.), landlady of the "Gordon Arms" inn at Kippletringan..... Guy Mannering... i. 146
- MacCasquil (Mr.), of Drumquag, a relation of Mrs. Margaret Bertram..... ditto..... ii. 106
- MacCombich or MacGregor (Robin Oig), a
Highland drover..... Two Drovers..... ii. 186
- MacCroskie of Crookstone (Deacon), a neighbour of the Laird of Ellangowan..... Guy Mannering... i. 94
- MacDougal of Lorn, a Highland chief..... Leg. of Montrose.. ii. 48
- MacEagh (Ranald), one of the "Children of the Mist," Allan MacAnlay's foe..... ditto..... ii. 180
- MacEagh (Kenneth), his grandson..... ditto..... ii. 196
- Macfie, the Laird of Gudgeonford, a neighbour of the Laird of Ellangowan..... Guy Mannering... i. 92
- Macfin (Miles), the cadie at Ediubro'..... ditto..... ii. 88
- MacFittoch (Mr.), the dancing-master at Middlemas..... Surgeon's Daugh. i. 84
- MacGrainer (Master), a dissenting minister at Kippletringan..... Guy Mannering... ii. 26
- MacGregor (Rob Roy), the outlaw, or Robert
Campbell..... Rob Roy.. i. 140, ii. 70
- MacGregor (Helen), Rob Roy's wife..... ditto..... ii. 186
- MacGregor (Hamish), MacGregor (Robert Oig), their sons..... ditto..... ii. 204
- MacGruthar (Sandie), a beggar..... Guy Mannering... i. 94
- MacGuffog (David), the keeper of Portan-ferry prison..... ditto..... ii. 33
- MacGuffog (Mrs.), his wife..... ditto..... ii. 167
- MacIan (Gilchrist)..... F. Maid of Perth ii. 136
- MacIlduy or Mhich-Connel Dhu, a Highland
chief..... Leg. of Montrose ii. 211
- MacIntyre (Mary), the Antiquary's niece... Antiquary..... i. 45, 88
- MacIntyre (Captain Hector), her brother... ditto..... i. 255
- MacIvor (Fergus), or "Vich Ian Vohr," the chief of Glennaquoich..... Waverley..... i. 258
- MacIvor (Flora), his sister..... ditto..... i. 274
- Mackitchinson, the landlord at the Queens-ferry inn..... Antiquary..... i. 80
- Maclean (Sir Hector), a Highland chief..... Leg. of Montrose ii. 47
- Macleary (Widow), landlady of the Tully
Veolan village alehouse..... Waverley..... i. 175

- MacLeish (Donald), Mrs. Baliol's postilion... High. Widow.... ii. 274
- Macleuchar (Mrs.), the book-keeper at the coach-office in Edinburgh..... Antiquary i. 23
- MacLouis, captain of the king's guard..... F. Maid of Perth. i. 200
- Maclure (Elizabeth), an old widow, a Covenantanter Old Mortality ii. 260
- MacMorlan (Mr.), Lucy Bertram's guardian Guy Mannering . . i. 167
- MacMorlan (Mrs.), his wife..... ditto..... i. 184
- MacMurrough, "Nan Fonn," Fergus MacIvor's family bard..... Waverley..... i. 271
- MacPhadraick (Miles), a Highland soldier.. High. Widow ii. 299
- Macraw (Francie), an old domestic at the Earl of Glenallan's..... Antiquary ii. 80
- Macready (Pate), a pedlar, Andrew Fairser-vice's friend..... Rob Roy..... i. 298
- MacTavish Mhor, or Hamish MacTavish, a Highland outlaw..... High. Widow.... ii. 290
- MacTavish (Elspat), or "the woman of the tree," his widow..... ditto..... ii. 286
- MacTavish (Hamish Bean), their son..... ditto..... ii. 298
- MacTurk (Captain Hector), "the man of peace" at the Spa hotel..... St. Ronan's Well. i. 59
- MacVittie (Ephraim), a Glasgow merchant.. Rob Roy..... ii. 89
- Macwheeble (Duncan), the Baron of Bradwardine's bailie..... Waverley..... i. 169
- Magistrates of Bâle..... Anne of Geier.... i. 138
- Mahony (Dugald), Evan Dhu's attendant ... Waverley..... i. 231
- Mailsetter (Mrs.), keeper of the Fairport post-office..... Antiquary i. 195
- Mailsetter (Davie), her son ditto..... i. 202
- Malachi, the canting smuggler's assistant... Redgauntlet..... ii. 87
- Malagrowthier (Sir Mungo), a crabbed old courtier..... Nigel..... i. 187
- Malvoisin (Sir Albert de), a preceptor of the Knights Templars Ivanhoe..... ii. 200
- Malvoisin (Sir Philip de), one of the knights challengers..... ditto..... i. 128, 148
- Mangerton (the Laird of), (John Armstrong) Laird's Jock . . . ii. 292
- Mannering (Colonel), or Guy Mannering... Guy Mannering i. 51, 149
- Mannering (Mrs.), his wife, (formerly Sophia Wellwood)..... ditto.... i. 81, 162
- Mannering (Julia), their daughter, (afterwards married to Henry Bertram)..... ditto... i. 199, 225

- Mannering (Sir Paul), Colonel M.'s uncle . . . Guy Mannering . . . i. 163
- Mansel (Sir Edward), lieutenant of the Tower of London Nigel ii. 190
- Mansel (Lady), his wife ditto ii. 226
- Marchmont (Miss Matilda), Julia Mannering's
confidante Guy Mannering i. 199
- Marcian, armourer to Count Robert of Paris. Count Robert i. 272
- Marck (William de la), or "the wild boar of Ardennes," a French noble Queen Durward ii. 71
- Mareschal of Mareschal Wells, one of the Jacobite conspirators Black Dwarf i. 180
- Margaret of Anjou, widow of King Henry the Sixth of England Anne of Geier ii. 116 first disguised as a mendicant at Strasburg cathedral ditto ii. 120
- Margery, Lady Eveline's old nurse Betrothed i. 144
- Markham, in the Earl of Sussex's train Kenilworth i. 244
- Martha (Dame), Major Bridgenorth's housekeeper Peveril i. 87
- Martha, the servant girl at Shaw's castle St. Ronan's Well ii. 285
- Martha (the Abbess), of Elcho nunnery, a kinswoman of the Glover's F. Maid of Perth ii. 180
- Martha, the old housekeeper at Osbaldistone
Hall Rob Roy i. 295
- Martha (alias Ulrica), mother of Hereward's betrothed Count Robert ii. 94
- Marthon, the old cook at Arnheim castle Anne of Geier ii. 82
- Marthon (alias Rizpah), a Bohemian woman, attendant of the Countess of Croye Queen Dur. i. 281, ii. 51
- Martigny (Marie, Countess de) St. Ronan's Well ii. 89
- Martin (Dame), Darsie Latimer's partner at the fishers' dance Redgauntlet i. 196
- Martin, the old verdurer, near the lodge Woodstock ii. 267
- Martin, the old shepherd, with the Lady of Avenel Monastery i. 93
- Martival (Stephen de), a steward of the field at the tournament Ivanhoe i. 126, 153
- Mary, Queen of Scots Abbot ii. 7
- Masters (Doctor), the queen's physician Kenilworth i. 244
- Mattie, Bailie Nicol Jarvie's maid-servant, and afterwards his wife Rob Roy ii. 64
- Maugrabin (Zamet), a Bohemian, hung near Plessis Quentin Durw. i. 180

- Maugrabin (Hayraddin), his brother, afterwards disguised as Rouge Sanglier, the pseudo herald from Liege..... Qu. Durw. i. 303, ii. 277
- Maulstatute (Master), a magistrate..... Pevevil......ii. 186
- Mause (old), Cuddie Headrigg's mother, a Covenanter..... Old Mortality.... i. 52
- Maxwell, the deputy chamberlain at Whitehall..... Nigel..... i. 120
- Maxwell (Mr. Pate), the Laird of Summer-trees, "Pate in Peril," one of the conspirators with Redgauntlet..... Redgauntlet.....ii. 52
- Mayflower (Phœbe), a servant of Sir Henry Lee..... Woodstock..... i. 118
- Meg Merrilies, the gipsy woman..... Guy Mannering... i. 70
- Meg Murdockson, the old gipsy thief..... H. of Mid-Loth.... i. 298
- Meiklehose (Isaac), one of the elders of Rose-nearth parish..... ditto.....ii. 297
- Meiklewham (Mr. Saunders), "the man of law," at the Spa hotel..... St. Ronan's Well.. i. 59
- Melchior, a monk attending the black priest of St. Paul's..... Anne of Geier.... i. 278
- Melville (Major), a magistrate at Cairn-vreckan village..... Waverley.....ii. 14
- Melville (Sir Robert), one of the embassy to Queen Mary..... Abbot..... i. 316
- Mengs (John), the surly innkeeper at Kirchoff village..... Anne of Geier....ii. 26
- Menbeith (the Earl of), a kinsman of the Earl of Montrose..... Leg. of Montrose.. i. 244
- Meroer (Major), at the presidency at Madras Surg. Daughter... i. 183
- Meredith (Mr.), one of the conspirators with Redgauntlet..... Redgauntlet.....ii. 266
- Meredith (Mr. Michael), "the man of mirth," at the Spa hotel..... St. Ronan's Well.. i. 60
- Meredith (Sir), a Welch knight..... Castle Dangerous.ii. 191
- Mertoun (Basil), alias Vaughan, formerly a pirate..... Pirate..... i. 18, ii. 314
- Mertoun (Mordaunt), his son, in love with Brenda Troil..... ditto..... i. 81
- Mervyn (Mr. Arthur), Julia Mannering's guardian..... Guy Mannering.. i. 192
- Middleburgh (Mr. James), the magistrate in Edinburgh..... H. of Mid-L. i. 221, 294

Middlemas (Mr. Matthew), a name assumed by General Witherington.....	Surgeon's Daugh. ... i. 40
Middlemas (Mrs.).....	ditto ib.
Middlemas (Richard), the surgeon's apprentice, afterwards disguised as Sadoc, a black slave in India.....	ditto i. 170
Milan (the Duke of), an Italian prince.....	Anne of Geier ... ii. 125
Milton (John).....	Woodstock ii. 140
Mitford (Colonel), a friend of Sir Geoffrey Peveril.....	Peveril ii. 420
Misbegot (Malcolm), natural son of Sybil Knockwinnock, and an ancestor of Sir Arthur Wardour.....	Antiquary ii. 40
Mixit (Dr.), the apothecary at "the Black Bear" inn at Darlington.....	Rob Roy i. 148
Moffat (Mabel), Redgauntlet's domestic.....	Redgauntlet ... i. 59, 67
Moidart (John of), captain of the Clan Rannald in Montrose's army.....	Leg. of Montrose ii. 180
Monçada (Zilia de).....	Surgeon's Daugh. ... i. 47
Monçada (Matthias de), her father, a merchant.....	ditto ib.
Moniplies (Richie), Ld. Nigel's Scotch servant	Nigel i. 52
Monk (General).....	Woodstock ii. 352
Monmouth (the Duke of), commander in chief of the royal army.....	Old Mortality ... ii. 119
Montenay (Sir Philip de), an English knight.	Castle Dangerous ii. 106
Montfauçon (the Lady Calista of), Queen Berengaria's attendant.....	Talisman i. 224
Mont-Fitchet (Sir Conrade), a preceptor of the Knights Templars.....	Ivanhoe ii. 188
Monthermer (Guy), a nobleman in Henry the Second's service.....	Betrothed ii. 39
Montjoie, the chief herald of France.....	Quentin Durward ii. 133
Montreville (Madame Adela), or the Begum Mootee Mahul.....	Surgeon's Daugh. i. 181
Montserrat (Conrade, Marquis of), a crusader	Talisman i. 166
Montrose (the Duke of), commander in chief of the royalist army.....	Rob Roy ii. 217
Montrose (the Marquis of).....	Woodstock ii. 87
Montrose (James Grahame, Earl of), the king's lieutenant in Scotland.....	Leg. of Montrose ii. 67
first disguised as Anderson, servant to the Earl of Menteith.....	ditto i. 244

- Moonshine (Saunders), a smuggler..... Bride of Lam....ii. 197
 Mordaunt, Queen Margaret's secretary at Aix Anne of Geier...ii. 258
 Morgan, one of Prince Gwenwyn's soldiers.. Betrothed..... i. 40
 Mornay, the old seneschal at Earl Herbert's tower at Peronne..... *Quentin Durward*ii. 186
 Morolt (Dennis), Sir Raymond's old esquire.. Betrothed..... i. 55
 Morris, a domestic of the Earl of Derby.... Peveril..... i. 369
 Morris (Mr.), Frank Osbaldistone's timid fellow traveller with the portmanteau.... Rob Roy..... i. 138
 Morrison (Hugh), a lowland drover..... Two Drovers.....ii. 189 Mortcloke (Mr.), the undertaker at Mrs. Margaret Bertram's funeral..... Guy Mannering..ii. 95
 Mortemar (Alberick of), an exiled noble, alias
 Theodorick, the hermit of Engaddi.... Talisman..... i. 291
 Morton (the Earl of), in Queen Mary's service Monastery.....ii. 258
 Morton (the Earl of), a member of the privy council of Scotland..... Abbot..... i. 276
 Morton (the Rev. Mr.), the pastor of Cairn-vreckan village..... Waverley.....ii. 12
 Morton (Henry), a suitor of Miss Edith Bellenden's, and a leader in the Covenant-ers' army with Balfour..... Old Mortality.... i. 56 or Major General Melville, while abroad..... ditto.....ii. 247
 Morton (Ralph), of Milnwood, his uncle.... ditto..... 104
 Morton (Colonel Silas), of Milnwood, Henry
 Morton's father..... ditto..... i. 61
 Mortsheugh (Johnie), the old sexton..... Bride of Lam....ii. 111
 Mowbray (Mr. John), lord of the manor of St.
 Ronan's..... St. Ronan's Well i. 54
 Mowbray (Clara), his sister, betrothed to Frank Tyrrel, but married to Valentine
 Bulmer..... ditto..... i. 97
 Mucklebackit (Saunders), the old fisherman at Musselcrag..... Antiquary..... i. 114
 Mucklebackit (Maggie), his wife..... ditto..... i. 160
 Mucklebackit (Steenie), their eldest son,
 (drowned)..... ditto.....ii. 68
 Mucklebackit (little Jenny), their child.... ditto..... i. 162
 Mucklewrath (Habakkuk), a fanatic preacher Old Mortality...ii. 11
 Mucklewrath (John), the smith at Cairn-vreckan village..... Waverley.....ii. 6
 Mucklewrath (Dame), his wife, a virago.... ditto.....ii. 8

- Multon (Sir Thomas de), of Gilsland, Lord de Vaux, a crusader, King Richard's master of the horse..... Talisman..... i. 100
- Mumblazen (Master Michael), the old herald, a dependant on Sir Hugh Robsart..... Kenilworth..... i. 201
- Mumps (Tib), the landlady of the alehouse on the road to Charlie's-hope farm..... Guy Mannering... i. 246
- Murray (the Earl of), in Queen Mary's service..... Monastery..... ii. 247
- Murray (the Earl of), regent of Scotland.... Abbot..... i. 272
- Musgrave (Sir Miles), an officer in the king's service..... Leg. of Montrose..ii. 19
- Myrebeau (le Sieur de), one of the committee of the Estates of Burgundy..... Anne of Geier...ii. 178
- Mysie, Lady Margaret Bellenden's female attendant..... Old Mortality.... i. 182
- Mysie, the old housekeeper at Wolf's Crag tower..... Bride of Lam.... i. 124
- NARSES, a domestic slave of the Emperor of Greece..... Count Robert..... i. 191
- Nectabanus, the dwarf, at the hermit of Engaddi's cell..... Talisman..... i. 100
- N. Holdenough, a Presbyterian preacher.... Woodstock..... i. 61
- Neilson (Mr. Christopher), a surgeon at Glasgow..... Rob Roy..... ii. 104
- Nelly, Mrs. Dinmont's servant girl..... Guy Mannering... i. 268
- Neville (Sir Henry), King Richard's chamberlain..... Talisman..... i. 248
- Neville (Miss Eveline), married to the Earl of Glenallan, mother of Lord Geraldin.. Antiquary..... ii. 189
- Neville (Major), an assumed name of Lord Geraldin..... ditto..... ii. 294
- Neville (Mr. Geraldin), uncle to Lord Geraldin..... ditto..... ii. 297
- Newcastle (the Duchess of), at Charles the Second's court..... Peveril..... ii. 380
- Newcastle (the Marquis of), in King Charles the First's service..... Leg. of Montrose i. 242
- Nicanor, the Protospathaire, a Greek general..... Count Robert... i. 72, 97
- Nicholas (Brother), a monk at St. Mary's convent..... Monastery..... i. 102

- Nicodemus, one of General Harrison's servants Woodstock i. 297
- Nixon (Cristal), Mr. Redgauntlet's agent... Redgauntlet i. 61, 67
- Nixon (Martha), the Earl of Oxford's old nurse Anne of Geier... ii. 389
- Norman, Sir William Ashton's forester..... Bride of Lam.... i. 66
- Norman-nan-Ord, or Norman of the hammer Fair M. of Perth.. ii. 278
- Norna of the Fitful-Head, "the Reimkennar," alias Ulla Troil, mother of Cleveland the Pirate, and aunt of Minna and Brenda.. Pirate i. 90
- North (Lord), one of the judges..... Peveril..... ii. 814, 821
- Nosebag (Mrs.), wife of a lieutenant in the dragoons, Waverley's inquisitive travelling companion..... Waverley ii. 266
- Novit (Mr. Nichil), the old Laird of Dumbiedikes's lawyer..... H. of Mid-Loth.... i. 188
- OGRES (Dr. Titus), the champion of the Popish Plot Peveril..... ii. 328
- Ochiltree (old Edie), a king's bedesman, or blue-gown, the wandering beggar..... Antiquary i. 61
- Oig Mac Combich or Mac Gregor (Robin)... Two Drovers..... ii. 186
- O'Kean (Lieut.), a former admirer of Mrs.
Margaret Bertram..... Guy Mannering.. ii. 99
- Olave, brother of Norna's father, and grand-sire of Minna and Brenda..... Pirate i. 812
- Oldbuck (Jonathan), the Antiquary, Laird of Monkbarns Antiquary i. 21
- Oldbuck (Miss Griselda), his sister..... ditto i. 82
- Old Mortality, the itinerant antiquary..... Old Mortality... i. 85
- Olifant (Basil), a kinsman of Lady Margaret Bellenden ditto ii. 142
- Olifaunt of Glenvarloch (Lord Nigel)..... Nigel i. 76
- Oliver-le-Dain, or Oliver-le-Diable, Louis the Eleventh's favourite minister..... Quentin Durward i. 173
- Oliver-le-Dain, or Oliver-le-Diable, Louis the Eleventh's favourite minister..... Anne of Geier... ii. 164
- Orleans (Louis, Duke of)..... Quentin Durward i. 171
- Ormond (the Duke of), a privy councillor.. Peveril..... ii. 187, 804
- Ormston (Jock), a sheriff's officer at Fair-port Antiquary ii. 198
- Orrock (Puggie), a sheriff's officer at Fair-port ditto..... ib.

- Osbaldistone (Mr.), senior, a London merchant Rob Roy i. 106
- Osbaldistone (Francis), his son, in love with Diana Vernon ditto i. 106
- Osbaldistone (Sir Hildebrand), Frank's uncle ditto i. 164
- Osbaldistone (Percival), "the sot," Sir Hildebrand's son ditto i. 106
- Osbaldistone (Thornclyff), "the bully," Sir Hildebrand's son ditto i. 156
- Osbaldistone (John), "the game-keeper," Sir Hildebrand's son ditto i. 164
- Osbaldistone (Richard), "the horse-jockey," Sir Hir Hildebrand's son ditto i. 165
- Osbaldistone (Wilfred), "the fool," Sir Hildebrand's son ditto ib.
- Osbaldistone (Rashleigh), "the scholar," Sir Hildebrand's son ditto i. 166
- Osmund, an old Varangian guard Count Robert ii. 127
- Oswald, the cup-bearer at Rotherwood Ivanhoe i. 74
- Otranto (Tancred, Prince of), a crusader Count Robert ii. 133
- Otranto (Ernest of), page to Prince Tancred ditto ii. 129
- Outram (Lance), Sir Geoffrey Peveril's park-keeper Peveril i. 128
- Overdees (Rowley), a highwayman Guy Mannerling i. 248
- Overton (Col.), in Cromwell's troop Woodstock i. 182
- Owen (Sam.), Darsie Latimer's groom Redgauntlet i. 28
- Owen, Mr. Osbaldistone senior's confidential clerk Rob Roy i. 108
- Oxford (the young Earl of), of Queen Elizabeth's court Kenilworth ii. 170
- Oxford (John, Earl of), an exiled Lancastrian first disguised as the elder Philipson, a merchant Anne of Geier ii. 122
- Oxford (the Countess of), his wife ditto i. 26
- Oxford (the Countess of), his wife ditto ii. 347
- PACOLET, or Nick Strumpfer Pirate ii. 109
- Paget (the Lady), a lady of the Queen's bed-chamber Kenilworth i. 309
- Paterson (Pate), Bryce Snailsfoot's serving boy Pirate ii. 179
- Patrick, an old domestic at Shaw's castle St. Ronan's Well ii. 250
- Pattieson (Mr. Peter), in the introduction of the story H. of Mid-Loth i. 21

- Pattieson (Mr. Peter), in the introduction of the story..... Bride of Lam.... i. 26
- Patullo (Mrs.), Lady Ashton's waiting woman ditto.....ii. 98
- Parish clerk (the)..... Kenilworth i. 26
- Pauline (Mademoiselle), or Monna Paula, the Lady Hermione's attendant..... *Nigel*ii. 10
- Pauplah, the British Governor's steward at Madras Surgeon's Daugh. i. 205
- Pavillon (Meinheer Hermann), the syndic at Liege Quentin Durward ii. 29
- Pavillon (Mother Mabel), his wife..... ditto.....ii. 87
- Pavillon (Trudchen or Gertrude), their daughter, betrothed to Hans Glover..... ditto.....ii. 84
- Pearson (Capt. Gilbert), Cromwell's officer in attendance Woodstock..... i. 181
- Pedlar (the)..... *Monastery*ii. 242
- Peebles, "Poor Peter Peebles," the pauper litigant..... Redgauntlet..... i. 216
- "Peel the Causeway," a friend of the smugglers..... ditto.....ii. 136
- Peggy, the laundry maid at Colonel Manner- ing's..... Guy Mannering... ii. 142
- Peggy, the old widow Maclure's grandchild Old Mortality... ii. 261
- Pembroke (the Earl of), uncle to Sir Aymer de Valence..... Castle Dangerous i. 819
- Pembroke (the Rev. Mr.), chaplain at Waverley Honour..... Waverley..... i. 106
- Penfeather (Lady Penelope), the lady patroness at the Spa..... St. Ronan's Well... i. 54
- "Pengwern" (the torch of), (Prince Gwyn)..... Betrothed..... i. 33
- Pengwinion (Mr.), a Jacobite conspirator with Mr. Redgauntlet..... Redgauntlet..... ii. 265
- Penny (Jock), a highwayman..... Guy Mannering... i. 248
- Pest (Mr.), a barrister..... Redgauntlet... i. 142, 248
- Peter the Hermit, with the crusaders..... Count Robert... ii. 138
- Petit Andre, an executioner..... Quentin Durward i. 135
- Peveril (William), a natural son of William the Conqueror, and ancestor of Peveril of the Peak..... Peveril..... i. 67
- Peveril (Sir Geoffrey), "Peveril of the Peak," a cavalier..... ditto..... i. 68
- Peveril (Lady Margaret), his wife..... ditto..... i. 69

- Peveril (Julian), their son, in love with Alice Bridgenorth Peveril i. 86, 286
 Phil (little), the old fisherman's lad. Redgauntlet i. 269
 Philip (Father), sacristan of St. Mary's. Monastery ... i. 118, 128 Philip Augustus, King of France, one of the crusading princes. Talisman i. 204
 Philipson (Arthur), son of the elder Philipson, a disguise assumed by Sir Arthur de Vere Anne of Geier ... i. 26
 Phraortes, the Greek admiral. Count Robert ii. 218, 252
 Pignal (Monsieur de), Alice Bridgenorth's dancing-master Peveril i. 254
 Pike (Gideon), old Major Bellenden's valet.. Old Mortality i. 180
 Pinnet (Orson), the keeper of the bears. Kenilworth i. 301 Pirner (John), the old fisherman at St. Ronan's St. Ronan's Well i. 79, 217
 Plantagenet (Lady Edith), Richard Cœur-de-Lion's kinswoman, afterwards married to the Prince of Scotland. Talisman i. 90, 259
 Pleydell (Mr. Paulus), an advocate in Edinburgh, first the sheriff at Ellangowan... G. Mannering i. 185, ii. 76
 Plumdamas (Mr. Peter), the grocer. H. of Mid-Loth ... i. 70
 Poinder (George), one of the city officers. ditto i. 285 Policy (Mrs.), the housekeeper at Holyrood palace, in the introduction of the story.. Fair M. of Perth i. 15
 Polwarth (Alick), a servant of Waverley's.. Waverley ... ii. 229, 329
 Polydore, a comrade of Ernest, Prince Tancred's page. Count Robert ii. 129
 Pontoy's (Stephen), a veteran in Hugo de
 Lacy's troop. Betrothed ii. 27
 Porter (the gigantic). Kenilworth ii. 109
 Porteous (Capt. John), an officer of the city guard, hanged by the mob. H. of Mid-Loth i. 52, 118
 Porteous (Mrs.), his widow. ditto ii. 375
 Portsmouth (the Duchess of), La Belle Louise de Querouaille, one of Charles the Sec-ond's mistresses. Peveril ii. 87, 376
 Pott (Mr.), the librarian at the Spa. St. Ronan's Well .. ii. 185
 Pott (Mrs.), his wife. ditto ii. 186
 Poundtext (Peter), an "indulged pastor" with the Covenanters' army. Old Mortality ... ii. 112 Powheid (Lazarus), the old sexton in Douglas-town Castle Dangerous .. ii. 48
 Prior (the), at Dundrennan Abbey. Abbot ii. 307

- Pritchard (William), commander of H. M. sloop the "Shark"..... Guy Mannerling.. i. 141
- Protocol (Mr. Peter), an attorney in Edinburgh..... ditto.....ii. 101
- Protosebastos (the), or Sebaatorator, a state officer..... Count Robert .i. 182, 200
- Proudfute (Oliver), the bonnet-maker of Perth..... F. Maid of Perth i. 88
- Proudfute (Magdalen or Maudie), his widow. ditto.....ii. 24
- Purefoy (Master), Dr. Rochecliffe's former tutor..... Woodstock i. 337
- QUACKLEBEN (Dr. Quentin), "the man of medicine," at the Spa..... St. Ronan's Well. i. 56
- Quentin (Black), Sir John Ramorny's groom Fair M. of Perth. i. 287
- Quid (Mr.), the tobacconist, a relation of Mrs. Margaret Bertram..... Guy Mannerling..ii. 105
- Quitam (Mr.), the lawyer at the Black Bear inn at Darlington..... Rob Roy..... i. 147
- Quodling (the Rev. Mr.), the Duke of Buckingham's chaplain..... Peveril.....ii. 360
- RACHAEL, a servant girl at Lady Peveril's... ditto..... i. 181
- Raine (old Roger), the tapster near Sir Geoffrey Peveril's..... ditto..... i. 114
- Raine (Dame), his widow, afterwards Dame Chamberlain..... ditto.....ii. 18
- Raleigh (Walter, afterwards Sir Walter), in the Earl of Sussex's train..... Kenilworth.i. 286, ii. 178
- Ralph (Rough), Lance Outram's helper in the park..... Peveril.....ii. 75
- Ramorny (Sir John), the Prince of Scotland's master of the horse..... Fair M. of Perth.ii. 64
- Ramsay (David), the old watchmaker near Temple Bar..... Nigel..... i. 41
- Ramsay (Margaret), his daughter, afterwards married to Lord Nigel..... ditto..... i. 187
- Randal, the boatman at Lochleven Castle... Abbot.....ii. 7
- Raoul, Sir Raymond Berenger's old huntsman Betrothed..... i. 70
- Raredrench (Master), the apothecary..... Nigel..... i. 60
- Ratcliffe (Mr. Hubert), a friend of Sir Edward Mauley's..... Black Dwarf..... i. 126
- Batcliffe (James), a noted thief..... H. of Mid-L. i. 228, 258

- Ratray (Sir Rullion), of Ranagullion, Sir
Mungo Malgrowther's duelling friend.... Nigel i. 139
- Raymond, Count of Thoulouse, a crusader.. Count Robert..... i. 214
- Rebecca, daughter of Isaac the Jew..... Ivanhoe..... i. 180
- Rebecca (Mistress), Mrs. Margaret Bertram's favourite waiting woman..... Guy Mannering . .ii. 105
- Red Cap (Mother), an old nurse..... Nigel i. 170
- Redgauntlet (Sir Alberick), an ancestor of that family..... Redgauntlet.....ii. 10
- Redgauntlet (Sir Edward), his son, killed by Sir Alberick's horse..... ditto.....ii. 11
- Redgauntlet (Sir Robert), an old Tory, in Wandering Willie's tale..... ditto..... i. 164
- Redgauntlet (Sir John), son of Sir Robert, in Wandering Willie's tale..... ditto..... i. 170
- Redgauntlet (Sir Redwald), son of Sir John.. ditto..... i. 190
- Redgauntlet (Sir Henry Darsie), son of Sir
Redwald..... ditto... i. 260, ii. 184
- Redgauntlet (Lady), his wife..... ditto.....ii. 184
- Redgauntlet (Sir Arthur Darsie), their son, alias Darsie Latimer..... ditto... i. 19, ii. 209
- Redgauntlet (Miss Lillas), his sister, alias
"Greenmantle," afterwards married to Alan Fairford..... ditto... i. 66, ii. 174
- Redgauntlet (Sir Edward Hugh), the Jacobite conspirator, uncle of Darsie Latimer first as Laird of the Lochs..... ditto.....ii. 188
ditto..... i. 53
afterwards as Mr. Herries of Bir-renswork..... ditto..... i. 79 and called Mr. Ingoldsby..... ditto... i. 325, ii. 291
- Reinold, Sir Raymond Berenger's butler ... Betrothed..... i. 68
- René, King of Provence, father of Queen
Margaret of Anjou..... Anne of Geier.....ii. 218
- Reuben, a servant at the Jew's friend's house Ivanhoe..... i. 180
- Rewcastle (old John), a Jedburgh smuggler,
one of the Jacobite conspirators..... Black Dwarf..... i. 147
- Richard (Cœur-de-Lion), King of England, leader of the crusade..... Talisman..... i. 106
- Richard (Cœur-de-Lion), King of England.. Ivanhoe.....ii. 273 first disguised as the Black Knight at the Tournament, called "Le Noir Faineant," or "Black Slug-gard" ditto..... i. 203

- Richard, or "the Knight of the Fetterlock". Ivanhoe.....ii. 261
- Richard (Prince), eldest son of King Henry II. Betrothed.....ii. 61
- Richmond (the Duchess of), at Charles the Second's court..... Peveril..... i. 240
- Richmond (the Earl of), Henry of Lancaster Anne of Geier.....ii. 289
- Rickets (Mabel), an old nurse at Mr. Osbaldistone's..... Rob Roy..... i. 142
- Rimegap (Joe), one of Sir Geoffrey Peveril's miners..... Peveril.....ji. 65
- Ringhorse (Sir Robert), a magistrate..... St. Ronan's Well. i. 217
- Ringan, one of Henry Smith's men..... F. M. of Perth.....ii. 29
- Ringwood, a young Templar..... Nigel.....ii. 292
- Rintherout (Jenny), a servant at Monkbarne. Antiquary..... i. 45
- Rob the Rambler, the blind fiddler's comrade Redgauntlet..... i. 156
- Rob Roy MacGregor, or Robert Campbell the outlaw..... Rob Roy... i. 140, ii. 70
- Robb (Duncan), the grocer near Ellangowan. Guy Mannering... i. 92
- Robert III., King of Scotland..... Fair M. of Perth. i. 161
- Robert, Count of Paris, one of the crusading princes..... Count Robert..... i. 218
- Robert, a servant of Sir Arthur Wardour... Antiquary..... ii. 242
- Roberts, Master Heriot's cash keeper..... Nigel..... i. 147
- Roberts (John), a smuggler..... Redgauntlet..... ii. 126
- Robin, the butler to Ralph Morton..... Old Mortality... i. 125
- Robin Hood, or Dickon Bend-the-Bow, first as Locksley the archer at the Tournament. Ivanhoe... i. 214, ii. 278
- Robin Hood and Little John..... Talisman..... i. 137
- Robin (of Redcastle), one of Julian Avenel's followers..... Monastery..... ii. 188
- Robbins (Zerubbabel), in Cromwell's troop.. Woodstock..... ii. 818
- Robsart (Amy), Countess of Leicester..... Kenilworth... i. 66, 147
- Robsart (Sir Hugh), of Lidcote hall, her father
ditto..... i. 146
- Rochecliffe (Dr. Anthony), the plotting royalist, formerly Joseph Albany..... Woodstock..... ii. 264
- Rochester (the Earl of), or Lord Wilmot, King
Charles the Second's favourite..... ditto..... ii. 121, 352
- Rochester (the Earl of)..... Peveril..... ii. 82
- Rollock, a citizen of Perth..... Fair M. of Perth i. 119
- Ronaldson (Neill), the old Ranzelman at Jarls-hof..... Pirate..... i. 138
- Rosamond Clifford, "the Fair Rosamond,"
King Henry the Second's mistress..... Talisman..... ii. 81
- Rosamond Clifford, ditto..... Woodstock..... i. 224

- Ross (Lord), an officer in the king's army... Old Mortality... ii. 62
- Rothsay (Duke of), the Prince of Scotland,
King Robert the Third's eldest son.... Fair M. of Perth. i. 198
- Rothsay (Margaret, Duchess of)..... ditto. i. 168, ii. 329
- Rougedragon (Lady Rachel), Lilius Redgauntlet's former guardian..... Redgauntlet..... ii. 194
- Rouslaer (Meinheer)..... Quentin Durward ii. 29
- Rowena (the Lady), of Hargottstanstede, a ward of Cedric the Saxon, afterwards married to Ivanhoe..... Ivanhoe..... i. 83
- Rowley, one of Julian Avenel's retainers.... Monastery..... ii. 92
- Rubrick (the Rev. Mr.), chaplain to the Baron of Bradwardine..... Waverley..... i. 170
- Rupert (Prince), in King Charles the Second's service..... Woodstock..... i. 116
- Rupert (Prince), ditto..... Leg. of Montrose. i. 242
- Rupert (Prince), ditto..... Peveril... i. 156, ii. 210
- Ruthven (Lord), one of the embassy to Mary, Queen of Scots..... Abbot..... ii. 23
- Rutland (the Duchess of), of Queen Elizabeth's court..... Kenilworth... ii. 178
- Rutledge (Archie), the constable at Osbaldistone Hall..... Rob Roy..... ii. 307
- Rutledge (Job), a smuggler..... Redgauntlet..... ii. 90
- Rymer (Mr. Robert), poet at the Spa..... St. Ronan's Well. i. 121
- SADDLETREE (Mr. Bartoline), the learned saddler..... H. of Mid-Loth.... i. 71
- Saddletree (Mrs.), his wife..... ditto..... i. 77
- Sadhu-Sing, the mourner of the desert..... Surgeon's Daugh. i. 215
- St. Asaph's (the Dean of), of Queen Elizabeth's court..... Kenilworth..... i. 304
- St. Botolph (the prior of)..... Ivanhoe..... ii. 262
- Saint-Cyr (Hugh de), King René's seneschal at Aix..... Anne of Geier... ii. 223
- Saint-Maur, one of Sir Reginald Front de Bœuf's attendants..... Ivanhoe..... ii. 109
- Saladin, the Soldan of the East..... Talisman..... ii. 184
- first as the Emir Ilderim of Kurdistan, and called "Sheerkohf"... ditto..... i. 40, 79
- afterwards as Adonbeck El Hakim, the physician..... ditto..... i. 188
- Salisbury (the Earl of), or William with the

- long sword, King Richard's natural brother, one of the crusading princes.. Talisman.....ii. 81
- Sampson (Dominie), or Abel Sampson, the tutor at Ellangowan House..... Guy Mannering... i. 65
- Saunders, Sir Geoffrey Peveril's groom..... Peveril..... i. 159
- Saunderson (Saunders), butler, &c. to Baron Bradwardine..... Waverley..... i. 158
- Saville (Lord), a young nobleman with Chiffinch..... Peveril..... ii. 92
- Scambister (Eric), the Udaller's old butler.. Pirate..... i. 220
- Scholey (Laurence), the Udaller's servant.. ditto..... ii. 189
- Schonfelt, Sir Archibald von Hagenbach's lieutenant..... Anne of Geier... i. 239
- Schreckenwald (Ital.), Count Albert's steward ditto..... ii. 99
- Schwanker (Jonas), the Archduke of Austria's jester..... Talisman..... i. 190
- Scriever (Jock), Bailie Macwheeble's apprentice..... Waverley..... ii. 314
- Scroggs (Sir William), one of the judges... Peveril i. 415, ii. 82, 820
- Scrow, Mr. Glossin's clerk..... Guy Mannering.. ii. 34
- Seaforth (the Earl of), in King Charles's service..... Leg. of Montrose.. ii. 68
- Sebastes of Mytilene, the assassin..... Count Robert.... i. 60
- Sebastroator (the), or Protosebastos, a state officer..... ditto.... i. 182, 200
- Secretary (the), at Say's Court..... Kenilworth..... i. 287
- Sedley (Sir Charles), in Charles the Second's court..... Woodstock..... ii. 100
- Seelencoper (Captain), superintendent of the military hospital at Ryde..... Surgeon's Daugh. i. 125
- Selby (Captain), an officer in the guards... Peveril..... ii. 392
- Selby, a messenger..... Redgauntlet.... ii. 187
- Sellock (Cisly or Sisley), a servant girl at Lady Peveril's..... Peveril..... ii. 58
- Seth, a servant at the Jew's friend's house.. Ivanhoe..... ii. 67
- Settle (Elkana), the poet..... Peveril..... ii. 108
- Seyton (Catherine), one of Queen Mary's maids of honour..... Abbot..... i. 142
- Seyton (Lord), her father, a supporter of Queen Mary's cause..... ditto..... i. 255
- Seyton (Henry), his son..... ditto..... ii. 219
- Shaftesbury (Anthony Ashley Cooper, Earl of)..... Peveril.... i. 818, ii. 88

- Shafton (Ned), one of the prisoners in Newgate with old Sir Hildebrand Osbaldistone Rob Roy.....ii. 299
- Shafton (Sir Piercie), or the Knight of Wilverton, a fashionable cavalier, grandson of old Overtitch, the tallor..... Monastery .i. 288, ii. 295
- Shakebag (Dick), a highwayman with Captain Colepepper..... Nigel.....ii. 302, 326
- Shakspeare..... Woodstock..... i. 85
- Shakspeare..... Kenilworth..... i. 298
- Sharpe (Right Rev. James), Archbishop of St. Andrew's, murdered by Balfour and his party..... Old Mortality.... i. 78
- Sharper (Master), the cutler in the Strand.. Peveril.....ii. 338, 426
- Sharpitlaw (Gideon), the police-officer..... H. of Mid-Loth.. i. 260
- "Sheba" (the Queen of), a name given to Madame Montreville..... Surgeon's Daugh..i. 181
- "Shemus an Snachad," or "James of the needle," MacIvor's tallor..... Waverley.....ii. 96
- Shoolbred (Dame), Henry Smith's foster-mother..... Fair M. of Perth i. 228
- Shortcake (Mrs.), the baker's wife, a friend of Mrs. Mailsetter's..... Antiquary..... i. 196
- Shortell (Master), the mercer at Liverpool.. Peveril..... i. 412
- Shrewsbury (Lord), the earl marshal..... Kenilworth.....ii. 217
- Sibbald, an attendant on the Earl of Menteith Leg. of Montrose.ii. 46
- Sigismund, Emperor of Austria..... Anne of Geier. i. 140, 238
- Silverquill (Sam), one of the prisoners at Portanferry..... Guy Mannering..ii. 175
- Simmons (Widow), the seamstress, a neighbour of the Ramsays..... Nigel..... i. 48
- Simson (Jean), an old woman at Middlemas village..... Surgeon's Daugh.. i. 38
- Simson (Tam), the drunken barber..... St. Ronan's Well. i. 42
- Skelton (Sam), a smuggler..... Redgauntlet.....ii. 136
- Skreigh (Mr.), the precentor, at the Kippletringan inn..... Guy Mannering.. i. 148
- Skurliewhitter (Andrew), the scrivener..... Nigel..... i. 117
- Sludge (Gammer), the Schoolmaster's landlady, near White Horse vale..... Kenilworth..... i. 158
- Sludge (Dickie), her grandson, or "Flibbertigibbet"..... ditto..... i. 166
- Sma'trash (Eppie), the ale-woman at Wolf's-Hope village..... Bride of Lam.... i. 138

- Smith (Henry), or Henry Gow, or "Gow Chrom," or "Hal of the Wynd," the armourer, Catherine Glover's lover Fair M. of Perth . i. 48
- Smotherwell (Stephen), the executioner ditto . . . ii. 74, 110
- Snail, the collector of customs, near Ellangowan House Guy Mannering . . i. 125
- Snailsfoot (Bryce), the jagger or pedlar Pirate i. 89
- Soles, a shoemaker, a witness at the examination of Dirk Hatteraick Guy Mannering . . ii. 807
- Solsgrace (Master Nehemiah), the Presbyterian pastor Peveřil i. 96
- Sowerbrowst (Mr.), the maltster St. Roman's Well . ii. 12
- "Spears of Spyinghow" (the three), in Fitzurse's troop Ivanhoe ii. 179
- Spenser Kenilworth i. 292
- Spittal, or Spitfire (Will), Roger Wildrake's serving boy Woodstock ii. 225
- Spontoon, Col. Talbot's old confidential servant Waverley ii. 271
- Sprenger (Martin or Louis), Annette Veilchen's bachelor Anne of Geier . ii. 74, 83
- Spruch-sprecher (the), or sayer of sayings to the Archduke of Austria Talisman i. 190
- Spur'em (Dick), one of McGuffog's men Guy Mannering . . ii. 85
- Stanchells, the head jailer at the Glasgow tolbooth Rob Roy ii. 64
- Standish (Mr. Justice), a magistrate ditto ii. 300
- Stanley (Frank), nephew of Col. Talbot Waverley ii. 270
- Stanley, in the Earl of Sussex's train Kenilworth i. 288
- Staples (Lawrence), the head jailer at Kenilworth Castle ditto ii. 189
- Stanton (George), afterwards Sir George H. of Mid-Loth. . . ii. 368
- first as George, or Geordie Robertson, a felon ditto i. 47
- disguised as Madge Wildfire at the riot ditto i. 108
- the betrayer of Effie Deans ditto i. 248
- Stanton (the Rev. Mr.), his father, rector of Willingham ditto ii. 98
- Stenson (Willie), or "Wandering Willie," the blind fiddler Redgauntlet i. 151
- Stenson (Maggie), or Epps Anslie, his wife ditto i. 154
- Stenson (Steenie), the piper in Wandering Willie's tale ditto i. 165

- Steinernherz-von-Blut-Sacker (Francis), the Scharf-gerichter Anne of Geier... i. 249
- Steinfeldt (the old Baroness of), in Donnerhu-gel's narrative ditto i. 211
- Stephen, one of Sir Reginald Front de Bœuf's
attendants Ivanhoe ii. 109
- Stephen (Count), the Count of Crèveccœur's nephew Quentin Durward ii. 119
- Stevens, a messenger of the Earl of Sussex . Kenilworth i. 217
- Stewart (Prince Charles Edward), the "Chevalier," or the "Pretender" Waverley.....ii. 87
- Stewart (Prince Charles Edward), first disguised as Father Buonaventure..... Redgauntlet .ii. 148, 277
- Stewart (Col.), governor of the Castle of Donne Waverley.....ii. 76
- Strauchan (old), Sir Kenneth's esquire..... Talisman.... i. 134, 247
- Strickalthrow (Merciful), in Cromwell's troop Woodstock ii. 219
- Stubbs, the beadle at Willingham H. of Mid-Loth. .ii. 99
- Stubbs (Miss Sissy, or Cecilia), a neighbour of the Waverleys Waverley i. 119
- Sturmthal (Melchior), the Banneret of Berne, one of the Swiss deputies Anne of Geier... i. 180
- Suddlechop (Dame Ursula, or Ursley), a gossip and nurse Nigel i. 165
- Suddlechop (Benjamin), the barber, her spouse ditto i. 49
- Sussex (the Earl of), of Queen Elizabeth's court, a rival of the Earl of Leicester's.. Kenilworth..... i. 296
- Swanston, a smuggler Redgauntlet.....ii. 90
- Sweepclean (Saunders), a king's messenger Antiquary ii. 256
- Swertha, the elder Mertoun's old housekeeper Pirates i. 28
- Sydall (Anthony), the house-steward at Osbaldistone Hall Rob Roy.....ii. 306
- TACKIT (Tibb), the old shepherd's wife Monastery i. 98
- Taffril (Lieutenant), of H. M. gun brig
"Search," in love with Jenny Caxon ... Antiquary i. 278
- Talbot (Colonel), a friend of Waverley's.... Waverley ii. 150
- Tallboy (old), the forester of St. Mary's convent Monastery i. 275
- Tam o' Todshaw, a huntsman, near Charlie's-
hope farm Guy Mannering.. i. 282

- Tamson (Peg), an old woman at Middlemas village Surgeon's Daugh. i. 84
- Tancred, Prince of Otranto, one of the crusading princes Count Robert.... ii. 188
- Tatius (Achilles), the "Acolyte," or Follower of the emperor, an officer in the Varangian guard ditto..... i. 66, 72
- Ternotte, one of Lady Eveline's attendants.. Betrothed..... i. 216
- Theodorick, the hermit of Engaddi, or Alberick of Mortemar, an exiled nobleman ... Talisman..... i. 72
- Theresa (Sister), with Flora MacIvor at Carlisle Waverley..... ii. 846
- Thiebault, a Provençal, one of Arthur's escort to Aix Anne of Geier.... ii. 169
- Thomas the Rhymmer, or Thomas of Ercildoun, an ancient Scottish bard Castle Dangerous . i. 827
- Thoresby (Broad), in Fitzurse's troop Ivanhoe..... ii. 179
- Thornhaugh (Colonel), in Cromwell's troop.. Woodstock..... i. 143
- Thornton (Captain), an English officer Rob Roy ii. 167, 174
- Thoulouse (Raymond, Count of), one of the crusading princes Count Robert.... i. 214
- Thwacker (Quarter-master), in the dragoons Redgauntlet..... ii. 132
- Tider (Robin), a servant of the Earl of Leicester Kenilworth..... ii. 312
- Timothy, the old ostler at John Mengs's inn . Anne of Geier.... ii. 19
- Tims (Corporal), in Waverley's regiment ... Waverley ... ii. 134, 182
- Tinto (Dick), the painter St. Ron. Well... i. 26, 52
- Tinto (Dick), the painter, in the introduction of the story Bride of Lam.... i. 27
- Tippoo Saib (Prince), son of Hyder Ali Surgeon's Daugh. i. 229
- Tirlsneck (Johnnie), the beadle at Old St. Ronans St. Ronan's W. ii. 16, 39
- Toby, the waiter at the Spa hotel ditto..... i. 68
- Toison d'or, the Burgundian herald..... Quentin Durward.i. 189
- Toison d'or, the Duke of Burgundy's herald. Anne of Geier.... ii. 174
- Tomahourich (Muhme Janet of), an old sybil, Robin Oig's aunt..... Two Drovers.... ii. 187
- Tomkins (Joseph), Cromwell's emissary ... Woodstock..... i. 63 formerly Philip Hazeldine..... ditto..... ii. 215 alias "Master Fibbet," Col. Desborough's secretary ditto..... i. 244
- Topham (Master Charles), the usher of the black rod Peveril..... i. 411

- Torfe (George), the provost of Orkney Pirate ii. 215, 256
- Tormot, Torquil of the Oak's youngest son . Fair M. of Perth. ii. 311
- "Torquil of the Oak," Eachin MacIain's foster-father ditto ii. 143
- Toshach Beg, at the combat ditto ii. 294
- Touchwood (Mr. Peregrine Scrogie), the traveller, a relation of the Mowbrays St. Ron. W. i. 227, ii. 264
- Tough (Mr.), an old barrister Redgauntlet i. 244
- Touthope (Mr. Clerk), a Scotch attorney Rob Roy ii. 20
- Town Clerk (the), of Fairport Antiquary i. 211
- Toxartis, a Scythian soldier, killed by the Countess Brenhilda Count Robert i. 240
- Tracy, in the Earl of Sussex's train Kenilworth i. 248
- Tramp (Gaffer), a peasant at the execution of old Meg Murdockson H. of Mid-Loth. ii. 221
- Trapbois, the old miser at Alsatia Nigel i. 343
- Trapbois (Martha), his daughter, afterwards married to Richie Moniplies ditto i. 344, ii. 76
- Tresham (Richard), Richard Middlemas Surgeon's Daugh. i. 170
- Tresham (Mr.), Mr. Osbaldistone senior's partner Rob Roy i. 328
- Tressilian (Edmund), to whom Amy Robsart was betrothed Kenilworth i. 31
- Tristrem of the hospital Anne of Geier i. 250
- Troil (Magnus), the old Udaller of Zetland Pirate i. 18
- Troil (Minna), his eldest daughter, in love with the pirate ditto i. 43
- Troil (Brenda), her sister, afterwards married to Mordaunt Mertoun ditto ib.
- Trois Echelles, an executioner Quentin Durward i. 135
- Trois Echelles Anne of Geier i. 250
- Trotter (Nelly), the fishwoman near St. Ronan's old town St. Ronan's Well i. 51
- Trumbull (Mr. Thomas), or Tom Turnpenny, the canting smuggler Redgauntlet ii. 85
- Tuck (Friar), the holy clerk of Copmanhurst Ivanhoe i. 246
- Tunstall (Frank), one of David Ramsay's apprentices Nigel i. 45
- Turnbull (Michael), the Douglas' huntsman Castle Dangerous i. 359
- Turnpenny (Mr.), the banker at Marchthorn St. Ron. W. i. 168, 223
- Turntipit (old Lord), one of the privy council Bride of Lam. i. 97
- Twigtythe (Rev. Mr.), the clergyman at Farmer Williams's Waverley ii. 263

- Tyre (Archbishop of), with the crusaders ... Talisman i. 144
- Tyrie, one of the archers of the Scottish guard Quentin Durward. i. 148
- Tyrie (the Rev. Mr. Michael), minister of Glenorquhy Highland Widow .ii. 384
- Tyrrel, or Martigny (Frank), in love with Clara Mowbray, son of the late Earl of Etherington, and his wife La Comtesse de Martigny St. R.'s W. i. 80, ii. 84, 97
- ULRICA, daughter of the late Thane of Torquillstone, or the old dame Urfried, at the castle Ivanhoe ii. 6, 42
- Una, one of Flora MacIvor's attendants Waverley i. 283
- Unreason (the abbot of), or Father Howleglas, one of the masques at Kennaquhair Abbot i. 185
- Urrie (Sir John), a military leader Leg. of Montrose .ii. 207
- Ursel, the imprisoned rival of the Emperor Alexius Count Robert ii. 9
- Ursula (Sister), a name assumed by the Lady Margaret de Hautlieu Castle Dangerous .ii. 76
- VALENCE (Sir Aymer de), Sir John de Walton's lieutenant ditto i. 300
- Vanbeest Brown (Captain), alias Harry Bertrain Guy Mannering .. i. 232
- Vanda, the spirit of the lady with the red hand Betrothed i. 225
- Vanwelt (Jan), Rose Flammock's supposed suitor ditto i. 111
- Varney (Richard, afterwards Sir Richard), the Earl of Leicester's master of the horse Kenilworth i. 72
- Vehmique Tribunal (the), the Secret Tribunal, or Court of the Holy Vehme Anne of Geier... ii. 49
- Veilchen (Annette), Anne of Geierstein's attendant ditto ii. 65
- Vere (Sir Arthur de), son of the Earl of Oxford ditto ii. 122
- first as Arthur Philipson ditto ii. 26
- Vere (Mr. Richard), the Laird of Ellieslaw, a Jacobite conspirator Black Dwarf i. 121
- Vere (Miss Isabella), his daughter, afterwards married to young Earnscliff ditto .. i. 58

- Vernon (Diana), niece to Sir Hildebrand Osbaldistone Rob Roy... i. 163, ii. 333
- Vernon (Sir Frederick), her father, first disguised as Father Vaughan ditto..... i. 304 called his Excellency the Earl of Beauchamp ditto..... ii. 301
a political intriguer ditto ii. 311
- Vexhelia, the wife of Osmond, the old Varan-gian guard Count Robert ii. 157
- Vincent (Jenkin), or "Jin Vin," one of old Ramsay's apprentices, in love with Margaret Ramsay..... Nigel i. 44
- Violante, an attendant on the Princess Anna
Comnena Count Robert..... i. 22
- Vipont (Sir Ralph de), a knight of St. John, one of the knights challengers Ivanhoe i. 124, 148
- Vorst (Peterkin), the sleeping sentinel at the Castle Betrothed..... i. 129
- WABSTER (Michael), a citizen of Perth F. M. of Perth... i. 84
- Wakefield (Harry), the English drover, killed by Robin Oig..... Two Drovers..... ii. 194
- Wakeman (Sir George), the queen's physician Peveril..... ii. 82
- Wallace Inn (Landlord of the) Black Dwarf i. 16
- Waldeck (Martin), the miner, the subject of an introduced story Antiquary i. 239
- Waldstetten (the Countess of), a relative of the baron of Arnheim Anne of Geier... i. 207
- Walkinshaw (Miss), the Pretender's mistress
Redgumlet .. ii. 164, 271
- Wallenrode (the Earl of), a Hungarian noble, a crusader Talisman i. 208
- Walsingham (Lord), of Queen Elizabeth's court Kenilworth..... ii. 308
- Waltheof (Father), a grey friar, confessor of the Duchess of Rothsay..... Fair M. of Perth.. ii. 230
- Waltheoff, (the Abbot), of St. Withold's convent Ivanhoe i. 269
- Walton (Sir John de), governor of Douglas castle Castle Dangerous . i. 337
- Wamba, "the son of Witless," the jester at Rotherwood Ivanhoe..... i. 41, 42
- Warden (the English) Abbot ii. 311

- Warden (Henry), the Protestant chaplain at Avenel castle..... Abbot i. 26
- Warden (Henry), the Protestant preacher... Monastery ii. 53 alias Henry Wellwood ditto ii. 190
- Wardlaw, the land steward at Osbaldistone
Hall Rob Roy ii. 809
- Wardlaw (Henry of), Archbishop of St. Andrews F. M. of P. i. 168, ii. 185
- Wardour (Sir Arthur), of Knockwinnock
Castle Antiquary i. 71
- Wardour (Isabella), his daughter, afterwards married to Lord Geraldin ditto i. 76, ii. 300
- Wardour (Capt. Reginald), her brother. ditto ii. 294
- Wardour (Sir Richard), or "Richard with the Red Hand," an ancestor of Sir Arthur ... ditto ii. 262
- Watkins (William), the Prince of Scotland's English attendant Fair M. of Perth. i. 384
- Waverley (Capt. Edward) Waverley i. 93
- Waverley (Mr. Richard), his father. ditto ib.
- Waverley (Sir Everard), Edward's uncle. ... ditto ib.
- Waverley (Mistress Rachel), Sir Everard's sister ditto i. 100
- Wayland (Launcelot), or Wayland Smith, the farrier in the vale of Whitehorse. Kenilworth i. 177 afterwards disguised as the pedlar at Cumnor Place. ditto ii. 5
- Weatherport (Captain), a naval officer Pirate ii. 810, 820
- "Weir" (Major), Sir Robert Redgauntlet's favourite baboon, in Wandering Willie's tale Redgauntlet i. 170
- Wetheral (Stephen), or Stephen Steelheart, in Fitzurse's troop. Ivanhoe ii. 179
- Wetzweiler (Tiel), or "Le Glorieux," the Duke of Burgundy's court jester. Quentin Durward ii. 168
- Whackbairn (Mr.), the schoolmaster at Lib-erton H. of Mid-Loth. ii. 24
- Whalley (Richard), the regicide, in the introduced story Peveil ii. 295
- Whitaker (Richard), Sir Geoffrey Peveil's old steward. ditto ii. 94
- Whitcraft (John), the innkeeper and miller at Altringham ditto i. 417, 425
- Whitcraft (Dame), his pretty wife ditto i. 419

- "Whistler" (the), the young outlaw who shot his father, Sir George Staunton..... H. of Mid-Loth. ii. 397
- Wiever the preacher, an old conspirator..... Peveril. ii. 352, 420
- Wild Wenlock, a kinsman of Sir Hugo de
Lacy, besieged by insurgents..... Betrothed ii. 20, 33
- Wildblood, "young Dick Wildblood of the Vale," a friend of Sir Geoffrey Peveril's Peveril. i. 114
- Wildfire (Madge), the mad woman..... H. of Mid-Loth. i. 266
- Wildrake (Roger), a dissipated Royalist..... Woodstock i. 139
- Wilkinson (James), Mr. Fairford's servant... Redgauntlet i. 31
- Will-o'-the-Flat, one of the huntsmen near Charlie's-hope farm..... Guy Mannering. i. 282
- William, King of Scotland..... Talisman ii. 163
- William, a serving lad at Arnheim castle... Anne of Geier. ii. 80
- Williams (Ned), Cicely Jopson's sweetheart.. Waverley ii. 259
- Williams (Farmer), his father..... ditto ii. 261
- Willie, Andrew Skurliewhitter's clerk..... Nigel ii. 291
- Willieson (William), a brig-owner, one of the Jacobite conspirators..... Black Dwarf. i. 148
- Willoughby (Lord), of Queen Elizabeth's Court..... Kenilworth. i. 300
- Wilmot (Lord), or the Earl of Rochester Woodstock. ii. 121, 152
- Wilsa, Dame Ursley Suddlechop's mulatto girl..... Nigel i. 168
- Wilson (Alison), the old housekeeper at Miln-wood..... Old Mortality. i. 88
- Wilson (Andrew), the criminal who was hung,
Geordie Robertson's comrade..... H. of Mid-Loth. i. 46
- Wilson (Christie), in the introduction of the story..... Black Dwarf i. 19
- Wilson (John), Col. Mannering's groom.... Guy Mannering . . i. 119
- Wilson (Bob), Sir William Ashton's groom.. Bride of Lam. ii. 36
- Win-the-Fight (Master Joachim), Maj. Bridge-north's attorney..... Peveril. i. 186
- Winchester (the Bishop of) Nigel ii. 276
- Windsor (the Rev. Mr.), a friend of Master
George Heriot..... ditto i. 153
- Wing-the-Wind (Michael), a servant at Holyrood palace, a friend of Adam Woodcock Abbot i. 263
- Wingate (Master Jasper), the steward at Av-enel castle..... ditto i. 58
- Wingfield, the feather dresser, a citizen of Perth..... Fair M. of Perth ii. 40

- Wingfield (Ambrose), employed at Osbaldistone Hall Rob Roy ii. 810
- Wingfield (Lancie) ditto ib.
- Winklebrand (Louis), De Bracy's lieutenant
..... Ivanhoe ii. 172
- Winnie (Annie), an old sybil at old Alice Gray's death Bride of Lam. ii. 111
- Winter, General Witherington's head servant Surgeon's Daugh. i. 186
- Winterblossom (Mr. Philip), "the man of taste," at the Spa St. Roman's Well. i. 57
- Wisheart (the Rev. Dr.), the Earl of Montrose's chaplain Leg. of Montrose ii. 258
- Witherington (General), alias Richard Tresham, first as Mr. Matthew Middlemas ... Surgeon's Daugh. i. 47
- Witherington (Mrs. General), his wife, alias
Mrs. Middlemas, formerly Zilia de Mon-cada ditto ib.
- Wittenbold, a Dutch commandant in the king's service Old Mortality. ii. 255
- Woodcock (Adam), the falconer at Avenel castle Abbot i. 65
- afterwards the "Abbot of Unrea-son," at the revels ditto i. 185
- Woodstall (Henry), in King Richard's guard .. Talisman ii. 39
- Woodstock (the Mayor of) Woodstock. i. 64
- Woodville (Lord), a friend of Gen. Browne .. Tap. Chamber ... ii. 274
- Wylie (Andrew), Bailie Nicol Jarvie's former clerk Rob Roy ii. 111
- Wyvil (William de), a steward of the field at the tournament Ivanhoe. i. 126, 153
- YELLOWLEY (Mr. Triptolemus), the experimental agriculturist Pirate i. 59
- Yellowley (old Jasper), his father ditto i. 63
- Yellowley (Mistress Baby, or Barbara), his sister and housekeeper ditto i. 64
- Yoglan (Zacharias), the old Jew chemist in London Kenilworth i. 226
- Yolande of Anjou, daughter of King René ... Anne of Geier. ii. 128
- York (James, Duke of), brother of King
Charles the Second Woodstock. ii. 355
- York (James, Duke of), brother of King
Charles the Second Peveril. ii. 376

- York (Geoffrey, Archbishop of), one of the high justiciaries of England in King
Richard's absence Talisman.....ii. 85
- ZEDEKIAH, one of General Harrison's servants Woodstock i. 297
- Zimmerman (Adam), the old burgher of So-leure, one of the Swiss deputies Anne of Geier.... i. 130
- Zohauk, the Nubian slave, a disguise assumed by Sir Kenneth *Talisman*ii. 31
- Zosimus, the patriarch of the Greek Church Count Robert.... i. 93
- Zulichium (the enchanted Princess of), in the introduced story ditto i. 229

INDEX TO THE NOTES.

ABBESS of Wilton.....	Rob Roy	i. 223
Abbot of Unreason.....	Abbot	i. 185
Abercromby, of Tullibody.....	Waverley	i. 236
Aberfoil, clachan of.....	Rob Roy	ii. 179
Advocates, faculty of.....	Bride of Lam.	ii. 8
"Affair of 1715"—"Another opportunity".....	Redgauntlet	ii. 64
"Affair of 1745".....	ditto	i. 230
Ahriman, hymn to.....	Talisman	i. 67
Alarm of invasion.....	Antiquary	ii. 287
Amhurst, Nicholas.....	Waverley	i. 137
Anderson of Whitburgh.....	ditto	ii. 146
Andrea de Ferrara.....	ditto	ii. 172
Annesley (James), life of.....	Guy Mannering	i. 43
Ancient hospitality.....	Bride of Lam.	i. 216
Apparition to Mrs. C——.....	Redgauntlet	i. 188
Apparitions, Defoe's history of.....	Old Mortality	ii. 225
Appeal to Parliament.....	Bride of Lam.	ii. 8
Arboriculture.....	H. of Mid-Loth.	i. 134
Argyle (John), Duke of, (1736).....	ditto	i. 388
Arlington (Bennet), Earl of.....	Peveril	ii. 111
Armour, Silk.....	ditto	ii. 189
Arnaults, or Albanese.....	St. Ronan's Well	ii. 10
Assassins, employment of, in England.....	Peveril	ii. 108
Assises de Jerusalem.....	Talisman	i. 177
Avenel Castle.....	Monastery	ii. 67
——, Julian.....	ditto	ii. 94
BAHR-GEIST, apparition of the.....	Betrothed	i. 213
Balfour (John), of Kinloch, (Burley).....	Old Mortality	ii. 299
Balmawhapple, Laird of.....	Waverley	ii. 155

Balue, the Cardinal	Quen. Dur. i. 201, ii. 192
Bannatyne Club	High. Widow ... ii. 191
Bargally, anecdote of the Laird of	Guy Mannering ... i. 29
Bargany, Lairds of	Ivanhoe i. 318
Bell-tolling to church in Scotland	H. of Mid-Loth. ... ii. 295
Berserkars	Pirate i. 32
Bevis, the hound	Woodstock ii. 360
"Bibles and bottles of ale"	Bride of Lam. ... i. 216
Bicker of St. Magnus	Pirate ii. 141
Birls of prey	ditto ii. 200
Black Chanter, the	Fair M. of Perth ii. 310
—— Mail	Waverley i. 221
—— Watch, the	High. Widow ... ii. 252
Blood, Colonel	Peveril ii. 310
——, Narrative of	ditto ii. 274
——, History of	ditto ii. 441
Bloody Sykes, Douglasdale	Castle Dangerous ii. 145
Bohemians, or Gipsies	Quentin Durward i. 147
——, religion of the	ditto i. 307
Bohemond, prince of Antioch	Count Robert i. 40
Bolton, Stawarth	Monastery i. 87
Book of Common Prayer, vindication of the	Woodstock i. 67
Borderers, good faith of the	Monastery ii. 222
"Borrowing days"	H. of Mid-Loth. ... ii. 42
Bothwell Bridge, royal army at	Old Mortality ... ii. 108
——, Sergeant	ditto i. 71
Bourne (Geordy), a profligate	Monastery ii. 94
Brandanes (the), of Bute	F. M. of Perth ... i. 179
Brown Square, Edinburgh	Redgauntlet i. 37
Bruce (King Robert), and Melrose Abbey	Abbot ii. 317
—— and Macdougall of Lorn	High. Widow ... ii. 281
—— and the Spider	F. Maid of Perth i. 55
Buckingham, Duke of, (temp. of James I.)	Nigel i. 205
Building-feus, in Scotland	St. Ronan's Well ... i. 24
Burbage (Richard), the actor	Nigel i. 268
Burgundy (Charles), Duke of, and Louis XI.	Quentin Dur. ii. 134, 182
Burgundy (Charles the Bold), Duke of, and Louis XI.	Anne of Geier ... ii. 341
CALUMNIATORS of the fair sex	H. of Mid-Loth. ... i. 298
Cameronians, the	Redgauntlet i. 186
——, persecutors of	ditto i. 180
Cameronians' gibbet	Old Mortality ... ii. 76

Cannibalism imputed to the Cavaliers.....	Woodstock	ii. 51
Canting heraldry	Waverley	i. 204
Carbuncle on the Ward-hill.....	Pirate	i. 814
Card-playing	Quentin Durward ..	i. 188
Carey, Patrick.....	Woodstock	ii. 245
Carrick, King of.....	Ivanhoe	i. 817
Carspharn, John, or Semple.....	H. of Mid-Loth. ...	i. 154
Cassilis, tyranny of the Earl of.....	Ivanhoe	i. 318
Caterans	Waverley	i. 250
Cattle (wild), in Scotland.....	Castle Dangerous ..	i. 855
Cavaliers and Roundheads	Peveril	i. 128
ditto ditto	Woodstock	ii. 51
Chase, language of the	Ivanhoe	i. 92
Chapman's drouth	Pirate	i. 106
Charles, Prince, Edward.....	Waverley	ii. 239
———, "fighting Charlie of Liddesdale" ..	Guy Mannering ..	i. 244
Charity, usages of.....	St. Ronan's Well ..	ii. 216
Chevaliers army	Waverley	ii. 94
Child murder.....	H. of Mid-Loth. ...	i. 258
Chillingham, wild cattle at.....	Castle Dangerous ..	i. 355
Christian (William), trial and execution of ..	Peveril	i. 144
Christian (William), portrait of.....	ditto	i. 245
City Guard, Edinburgh.....	H. of Mid-Loth. ...	i. 58
Clan surnames.....	Guy Mannering ..	i. 281
Claverhouse. See Grahame.
Clerk (Lady Mary), of Pennycuick.....	Monastery	i. 87
Clifton, skirmish at.....	Waverley	ii. 252
Climent, Cooper	(Introduction) Old Mortality ...	i. 25
Coleman's Correspondence (Popish Plot)....	Peveril	i. 454
Coleridge (S. T.), lines of.....	Ivanhoe i. 141. Cas. Da. 309
Collier and Salter.....	Redgauntlet	ii. 258
Colkitto (MacDonald)	Leg. of Montrose ..	ii. 170
Cologne, Archbishop of	Anne of Geier	ii. 280
Combat on the North Inch of Perth.....	Fair M. of Perth ..	ii. 810
Comines, Philip des	Quen. Durw. ..	ii. 181, 245
Conan, the jester.....	Waverley	i. 281
Concealments for theft and smuggling.....	Redgauntlet	ii. 111
Coningsburgh Castle.....	Ivanhoe	ii. 293
Constable St. Paul.....	Quentin Durward ..	i. 98
Constantinople, city of	Count Robert	i. 44
Coronation of King George III., anecdote of	Redgauntlet	ii. 201
Covenanter, a, shot by Captain Creighton...	High. Widow	ii. 212

Covenanters' belief in proof against shot.....	Old Mortality	i. 261
————, Feuds	ditto	ii. 65
————, Retreats	ditto	ii. 277
————, Predictions.....	ditto	ii. 284
————, Intercourse with the invisible world	H. of Mid-Loth	i. 245
Craignethan Castle.....	Old Mortality	i. 187
Cramp speech, the.....	Redgauntlet	i. 24
Creehope Linn.....	Old Mortality	ii. 277
Crossraguel, Abbot of.....	Joanhoe	i. 318
Crusader's return.....	Waverley	i. 113
Cuckoo's nest.....	Nigel	i. 254
Cumberland, Duke of, 1745.....	Waverley	ii. 253
Cuming (Walter), of Guissock.....	Rob Roy	ii. 181
Cumnor, Black Bear of.....	Kenilworth	i. 59
Cutlar Macculloch.....	Peveril	i. 448
DALZELL, General, of Binns.....	Old Mortality	ii. 120, 180
Dancing-girl, sale of a.....	Peveril	i. 404
Dandie Dinmont.....	Guy Mannering	i. 260
"Dark Gray Man".....	Abbot	ii. 137
—— Ladye, of Coleridge.....	St. Ronan's Well	i. 97
Davidson, James, prototype of Dandie Dinmont.....	Guy Mannering	i. 261
Deaf and dumb vassal.....	Peveril	ii. 456
Defoe's history of apparitions.....	Old Mortality	ii. 225
Derby, concealment of the Countess of.....	Peveril	i. 128
Dick, Sir William, of Braid.....	H. of Mid-Loth	i. 307
Dickson, Thomas, death of.....	Castle Dangerous	ii. 183
Dislike of the Scots to pork.....	Ni	ii. 162. Waver i. 267
Dobson's Linn.....	Old Mortality	ii. 277
Dogs trained to theft.....	St. Ronan's Well	ii. 204
Donn (Robert), poems of.....	Two Drovers	ii. 218
Doomster, or Dempster of Court.....	H. of Mid-Loth	i. 382
Douglas, castle of.....	Castle Dangerous	i. 251
——, family pedigree of.....	Monastery	ii. 288
——, water of.....	Castle Dangerous	i. 251
——, George.....	Abbot	ii. 259
Doune castle.....	Waverley	ii. 72
Dream of Mr. R——d.....	Antiquary	i. 123
Drowning man, reluctance to save a.....	Pirate	i. 128
Drows, or Trows.....	ditto	i. 165
Drumclog, skirmish at.....	Old Mortality	i. 277

- Duff, "Davie, the thane of Fife," Introduction Surgeon's Douch. i. 6
- Dundas, of Arniston, the elder, Lord President Guy Mannering. ii. 119
- Dwarfie stone of Hoy Pirate i. 313
- Dyer's Weekly Letter Waverley i. 98
- Durham Garland, the Guy Mannering. i. 83
- Duke's walk, the, Holyrood Bride of Lam. ii. 228
- EDINBURGH, "Newest New" town of Fair M. of Perth. i. 15
- Edinburgh magistrates, temp. Porteous mob H. of Mid-Loth. i. 306
- Eglinton, Countess of High. Widow. ii. 258
- Eleho, Lord, 1745 Waverley. ii. 239
- Elphinstone, Lady Old Mortality. i. 190
- Elpeth's death Antiquary ii. 231
- English Jacobites Waverley. ii. 89
- Episcopal clergy of Scotland ditto i. 167
- Epithets Monastery i. 263
- of poets Castle Dangerous. i. 307
- Erskine, Rev. Dr. John Guy Mannering. i. 89
- Estates, Scottish, forfeited and repurchased .. Waverley. i. 258
- Eudorchawg, or gold chains of the Welsh. ... Betrothed. i. 147
- "Fair and False" Talisman i. 250
- Fairies Monastery i. 97
- Fairy boy of Leith H. of M.-Loth. i. 242
- superstition Mon. ii. 73. R. Roy ii. 142
- Familists, the Woodstock ii. 206
- Family fools Waverley i. 160
- Fanshaw, Lady, night vision seen by Betrothed. i. 218
- Fate of genius in the seventeenth century ... Nigel i. 266
- Feather, token of a, the signal of danger ... Woodstock ii. 259
- "Feckless Fanny" H. of Mid-Loth. ii. 230
- Field-piece in the Highland army Waverley. ii. 129
- Fire, ordeal by Fair M. of Perth. ii. 89
- Fisherwomen, Scottish Antiquary ii. 62
- Foppery of the sixteenth century Monastery ii. 134
- Fordun, Translation of Fair M. of Perth i. 10
- Forest Laws Ivanhoe i. 44
- Fortune-telling rhymes Pirate ii. 20
- Foster, Anthony Kenilworth. i. 58
- French cookery Nigel i. 252
- Fuller's rents Peveril. ii. 372
- Funeral of a Highland chief Fair M. of Perth ii. 168

GAITA, a female warrior.....	Count Robert	i. 215
Galilee, of a Catholic cathedral.....	Fair M. of Perth	i. 171
Galiotti, Martius, the astrologer.....	Quentin Durward	i. 275
———, death of.....	ditto	ii. 213
Ganlesse, Richard.....	Peveul	i. 441
Gardiner, Colonel, conversion of.....	Waverley	i. 141
———, death of.....	ditto	ii. 152
Gemmells, Andrew, in introduction.....	Antiquary	i. 14
George IV., visit to Scotland.....	Fair M. of Perth	i. 15
Gipjies of Yetholm.....	Guy Mannering	i. 291
Gipsy superstitions.....	ditto	i. 292
——— cookery.....	ditto	ii. 196
Glendonwyne of Glendonwyne House.....	Abbot	i. 53
Glune-amie.....	Fair M. of Perth	i. 67
Godfrey, Sir Edmondsbury, funeral scene of.....	Peveul	i. 454
Gordon, Francis, death of.....	H. of Mid.-Loth.	ii. 270
Goss-hawk.....	Abbot	i. 134
Grahame of Claverhouse.....	Old Mortality	i. 190
———, proof against shot.....	ditto	i. 261
———, his charger.....	ditto	i. 265
———, letter to the Earl of Linlithgow..	ditto	i. 279
———, at Drumclog.....	ditto	i. 277
———, Cornet.....	ditto	i. 248
———, Sir James, of Netherby, riotous attack upon his dam-dike.....	Redgauntlet	i. 288
Grant, of Glenmoriston.....	Waverley	ii. 242
Grierson, Sir Robert, of Lagg.....	Redgauntlet	i. 188
Groaning malt, the.....	Guy Mannering	i. 75
Guildres, Duke of.....	Quentin Durward	i. 91
HACKSTON, David of Rathillet.....	Old Mortality	i. 79
Hagenbach, Sir Archibald de.....	Anne of Geier	i. 300
Handfasting, in wedlock.....	Monastery	ii. 89
Hangman, or Lockman.....	H. of Mid.-L.	i. 225
Harlaw, battle of.....	Antiquary	ii. 227
Haunted Isles.....	Pirate	ii. 40
Hazleside Place, Douglasdale.....	Castle Dangerous	i. 295
Hedge Priests.....	Ivanhoe	ii. 166
Henry Wynd.....	Rob Roy	ii. 123
Herald, disguised.....	Quentin Durward	ii. 285
Heriot, George.....	Nigel	i. 73
Highland discipline.....	Waverley	i. 264
——— hunting.....	ditto	i. 305

- Highland policy..... Waverley i. 260
 ——— laird and purse..... Old Mortality... i. 149
 Highlands, civilization of the..... Leg. of Montrose.ii. 87
 Highlanders, fidelity of the..... High. Widow... ii. 329
 Hobby-horse, the..... Abbot i. 190
 Holyrood Abbey, Boece's narrative of..... High. Widow... ii. 178
 Home (John), at Doune castle..... Waverley..... ii. 72
 Honeywood (Colonel), skirmish at Clifton... ditto..... ii. 254
 Howard, Lord Henry..... Nigel i. 238
 Hudson, Geoffrey..... Peveil ii. 212
 ———, Dr. Michael..... Woodstock i. 341
 Hunt, St. Johnstone's..... Fair M. of Perth.ii. 7
 Hunting jargon of the Normans..... Ivanhoe i. 92
 Huntinglen, Lord..... Nigel i. 198
- IMPRISONMENT for debt..... Antiquary ii. 219
 Inability of evil spirits..... Abbot i. 226
 Incantations..... Antiquary i. 296
 Inch Cailleach..... Rob Roy ii. 78
 Indulgences of the monks..... Monastery ii. 227
 Inglis, Captain Peter..... Old Mortality... ii. 265
 Iron, bar of, in heraldry..... Ivanhoe ii. 89
 Iron bars, range of, in torture..... ditto i. 316
 Iron rasp, or risp..... High. Widow... ii. 249
 Italian rhymes..... Kenilworth ii. 176
- JACOBITES, English..... Waverley..... ii. 89
 James VI., his personal appearance..... Nigel i. 123
 ———, his hunting-bottle..... ditto ii. 178
 ———, scene with, in Greenwich Park.. ditto ii. 181
 ———, his timidity..... ditto ii. 182
 Jeddart-staff..... Nigel ii. 282. Abbot i. 69
 John's coffee-house..... Redgauntlet i. 238
 Johnstones of Annandale..... Mon. ii. 70. F. M. of P. i. 144 Johnstone, the chevalier, his memoir of the rebellion..... Waverley..... ii. 289
 Julio, Dr..... Kenilworth i. 334
- KAIM of Urie..... High. Widow... ii. 133
 Keiths, family of..... ditto..... ii. 138
 Kelpie, or water spirit..... H. of Mid-Loth... i. 63
 Kenilworth Castle, furniture of..... Kenilworth ii. 190
 Kennedys of Bargany..... Ivanhoe i. 318

Kettle of fish	St. Roman's Well i. 191
Kilpont, Lord	Leg. of Montrose i. 221
"Kind gallows of Crieff"	Waverley i. 246
Kincedder, Lord	High. Widow ii. 182
Kirke, Rev. Robert, of Aberfoyle	Rob Roy ii. 142
"Kittle nine steps"	Redgauntlet i. 22
Knox, John, reproof of dancing	H. of Mid-Loth. ... i. 168
LABARUM, the, or banner of Constantinople.....	Count Robert i. 201
Lady Lake	Nigel ii. 238
Lambourne, Michael, or Mike	Kenilworth i. 59
La Marck, Count of	Quentin Durward ii. 344
Laneham, Robert	Kenilworth i. 296
Langside, battle of	Abbot ii. 302
Lawn Market, "to gang up the"	Guy Mannering .. ii. 28
Lawyers' sleepless nights	ditto ii. 231
Lee-penny, account of the	Talisman i. 10
Leicester and Sussex, Earls of	Kenilworth i. 232
——, death of the Earl of	ditto ii. 332
Letter-franks	Redgauntlet i. 29
Letters from the dead to the living	Peveril ii. 118
Lewis, island of	Leg. of Montrose ii. 87
Leyden, Dr. John	Antiquary ii. 288
Liddesdale	Guy Mannering .. ii. 108
——, men of	Antiquary ii. 287
Liege, murder of the Bishop of	Quentin Durward ii. 80
——, attack upon the city of	ditto ii. 326
Lindsay, Hon. Lady Anne	Pirate ii. 90
Localities of the tale	Guy Mannering .. i. 26
Lochaber axe	Waverley i. 227
Loch Awe	Highland Widow ii. 278
—— Tay	Fair M. of Perth ii. 166
Lochwood castle	Monastery ii. 79
Lockhart, President Sir George	Bride of Lam. ... i. 78
Locking the door during dinner	Old Mortality ... i. 127
Louis XI. of France, meeting of, with the Duke of Burgundy	Quentin Dur. ii. 134, 182
——, prayer of	ditto ii. 195
Love, parliament of	Anne of Geier .. ii. 208
Luggie, a conjurer	Pirate ii. 142
Lum Cleeks	Guy Mannering .. i. 279
Lundin, Dr. Luke	Abbot ii. 96

MACALPIN, Sergeant More.....	Leg. of Montrose i. 227
Macfarlane's lantern.....	Waverleyii. 49
———— geese.....	Monasteryi. 238
MacGregor, master of Glenstrae.....	High. Widowii. 266
MacPherson, Cluny.....	Waverleyii. 252
MacVicar, Rev. Mr.....	dittoii. 177
Madge Wildfire.....	H. of Mid-Loth.ii. 280
Mago Pico, memoirs of.....	St. Ronan's Well. i. 255
Maida, Sir Walter Scott's dog.....	Woodstockii. 360
"Mair wrecks e'er winter".....	Piratei. 136
Malagrowth, Sir Mungo.....	Nigeli. 151
Man, Isle of, popular pastimes in the.....	Peveaili. 235
————, Sodor, or Holm-Peel in.....	dittoi. 304
————, castle Rushin.....	dittoi. 314
————, superstitions of.....	dittoi. 330
————, Mauthe dog, apparition in.....	dittoi. 307, 8
Mandrin, the French smuggler.....	Betrothedii. 69
Marks upon unborn babes.....	Redguntletii. 137
Marshall, Willie, king of the gipsies.....	Guy Manneringii. 28
Mary, Queen, resignation of her crown.....	Abbotii. 43
————, supposed conspiracy against her life.....	dittoii. 214
————, demeanour of.....	dittoii. 254
————, escape from Loch Leven.....	dittoii. 259
Mass, abridged.....	dittoi. 188
Massacre of Glencoe.....	High. Widowii. 313
Maypoles.....	Old Mortalityi. 47
Meg Dods' cookery.....	St. Ronan's Well ii. 316
Melrose, drawbridge near to.....	Monasteryi. 127
Melville, Sir James.....	Kenilworthii. 168
Menzies, James of Culdaraes.....	High. Widowii. 331
Mhic Allastair Mohr.....	Nigelii. 176
Middleton's "Mad world, my masters".....	Bride of Lam.ii. 86
Milton's Sonnets.....	Leg. of Montroseii. 170
Minstrelsy.....	Ivanhoei. 260
Moderate Presbyterians.....	Old Mortalityii. 111
Monboddo, Lord.....	Guy Manneringii. 227
Moniplies, Richie, behind the arras.....	Nigelii. 256
Mons Meg.....	Rob Royii. 132
Monsters of the northern Seas.....	Piratei. 39
Montrose, Marquis of.....	dittoi. 242
Morgenstern, a military weapon.....	Leg. of Montroseii. 18
Morrice dancers.....	F. Maid of Perthii. 88

Morton, Henry, apparition of.....	Old Mortality	ii. 225
Mother Nicneven.....	Abbot	ii. 106
Moussa, castle of, in Zetland.....	Ivanhoe	ii. 298
Muffled man.....	Abbot	ii. 225
Multon, Sir Thomas, of Gilsland.....	Talisman	i. 129
Mumps Ha'.....	Guy Mannering	i. 244
Murray, Lord George.....	Waverley	ii. 146, 253
Muschat, Nicol.....	H. of Mid-Loth.	i. 187
Muschat's Cairn.....	ditto	i. 188
NAIRNE, Miss.....	Waverley	ii. 179
Negro slaves.....	Ivanhoe	i. 52
Nell Gwyn.....	Peveril	ii. 301
Nick Sticks.....	Antiquary	i. 199
Norna, character of.....	Pirate	ii. 198
Norse fragments.....	ditto	i. 36
Nun of Kent.....	Abbot	i. 171
OATH upon the dirk.....	Waverley	ii. 274
Oggam, character of the.....	ditto	i. 348
Odin, promise of.....	Pirate	ii. 86
"One quile".....	Nigel	i. 117
Ordeal by fire.....	F. Maid of Perth	ii. 89
Ormiston, the black laird of.....	Monastery	ii. 94
Out, "to go out," or "to have been out," in 1745.....	Waverley	ii. 79
PAGE of a Welsh prince.....	Betrothed	i. 43
Pages in the seventeenth century.....	Nigel	i. 234
——, Ladies'.....	Peveril	i. 159
Parliament House, of Edinburgh.....	Redgauntlet	i. 23
Pate in Peril, escape of.....	ditto	ii. 64
Paton (Capt. John), of Meadowhead.....	Old Mortality	ii. 284
Penny weddings.....	Nigel	ii. 336
Peronne, castle of.....	Quentin Durward	ii. 145
Perth, view of from the Wicks of Baigle.....	F. M. of Perth	i. 80
——, High-street of.....	ditto	i. 76
——, Curfew-street.....	ditto	ib.
——, Glovers.....	ditto	i. 107
——, East port.....	ditto	i. 136
——, Council room.....	ditto	ii. 35
——, Church of St. John.....	ditto	ii. 45
——, Skinners' yards.....	ditto	ii. 95

Perth, Earl of Errol's lodgings.....	F. M. of Perth . ii.	102
——, Houghmanstares.....	ditto	ii. 276
——, Gardens of the Dominicans.....	ditto	ii. 288
——, Combat on the North Inch of.....	ditto	ii. 317
Peter Peebles.....	Redgauntlet	i. 216
Pict, treatment of a supposed.....	Pirate	i. 37
Pictish burgh.....	ditto	ii. 106
Pistols.....	Nigel	ii. 232
Plantie Cruives in Zetland.....	Pirate	i. 26
Poets, epithets of.....	Castle Dangerous	i. 307
Poisoning, Science of.....	F. Maid of Perth	i. 291
"Poor man of mutton".....	Bride of Lam	ii. 40
Popinjay, festival of the.....	Old Mortality	i. 47
Popish Plot, witnesses of the.....	Pevevil	i. 486
——, narratives of.....	ditto	i. 414
——, first check to.....	ditto	ii. 82
Popular pastimes in the Isle of Man.....	ditto	i. 235
Pork, dislike of the Scots to.....	Ni	ii. 162. Waver
Porteous (Captain John), memorial concern- ing the murder of.....	H. of Mid-Loth	i. 116
Porteous mob.....	ditto	i. 123
Presbyterian Clergy.....	Pevevil	i. 194
Proclamation against the Scots coming to England.....	Nigel	i. 92
Proof against shot given by Satan.....	Old Mortality	i. 261
Puritans, persecution of the.....	Pevevil	i. 230
QUAIGHS.....	Bride of Lam	i. 99
Quaker, residence with the.....	Redgauntlet	i. 124
RAID of Caleb Balderstone.....	Bride of Lam	i. 210
Raleigh, Sir Walter.....	Kenilworth	i. 236
——, Court favour of.....	ditto	i. 257
Ramsay, David, watchmaker.....	Nigel	i. 54
Ranger of the forest.....	Ivanhoe	i. 44
Ratcliffe, Jem.....	H. of Mid-Loth	ii. 376
Raymond, Count of Thoulouse.....	Count Robert	i. 272
"Red-hand-taken".....	F. Maid of Perth	ii. 263
Red soil of Germany.....	Anne of Geier	ii. 57
Rere-suppers.....	Woodstock	i. 316
Reluctance to save a drowning man.....	Pirate	i. 128
Rhymes, fortune-telling.....	ditto	ii. 20
Richard Cœur de Lion.....	Ivanhoe	ii. 148

- Robin Hood and Little John, representation of Abbot..... i. 191
 Rob Roy Waverley..... i. 236
 Romances of the seventeenth century..... Old Mortality..... k. 186
 Rothsay, Duke of F. Maid of Perth. i. 162 ——— death of..... ditto..... ii. 323
 Roxburgh (John), Duke of, and death of his servant..... Antiquary..... ii. 231
 Royal marriages..... F. Maid of Perth i. 34
 Rushin castle, Isle of Man..... Peveiril..... i. 314
- SAINT BRIDGET, Nunnery of..... Abbot..... i. 164
 ——— Cuthbert, cell of..... ditto..... i. 116
 ——— Hubert..... Quentin Durward i. 72
 ——— Johnston's hunt..... F. Maid of Perth ii. 7
 ——— Ronald..... Pirate..... i. 107
 Sale of winds..... ditto..... i. 118
 Schwarz-reitters..... Quen. Durward.. ii. 107
 Scottish archers..... ditto..... i. 156
 ——— bar, convivial habits of the..... Guy Mannering .. ii. 119
 ——— dinner-table..... Waverley..... i. 268
 ——— domestics..... Old Mortality . . . i. 91
 ——— inns..... St. Ronan's Well. i. 21
 ——— judges..... Redguntlet..... i. 256
 ——— wild cattle..... Ken. i. 315. Cas. D. i. 355
 Seton (George), fifth Lord..... Abbot..... i. 257
 Shafton, Sir Piercie..... Monastery..... ii. 297
 Sharpe (Archbishop), murderers of..... Old Mortality . . i. 78, 79
 Shawfield's mob..... H. of Mid-Loth. .. ii. 239
 Sheriff of London..... Peveiril..... ii. 393
 Silk armour..... ditto..... ii. 189
 Skimmington, the..... Nigel..... ii. 59
 Skirmishes on the Streets..... ditto..... i. 240
 Smith, or Wynd, Henry..... F. Maid of Perth ii. 10
 Snow-balls..... Rob Roy..... ii. 108
 Sodor, or Holm Peel, Isle of Man..... Peveiril..... i. 304
 Sommervilles, family of the..... High. Widow..... ii. 192
 Stag's horn..... Waverley..... i. 302
 Stamford, battle of..... Ivanhoe..... i. 305
 Steel, David, a Covenanter, shot by Creichton..... High. Widow..... ii. 212
 Stewart family, pedigree of the..... Monastery..... ii. 290
 ——— James of Ardvairlich..... Leg. of Montrose i. 210
 Standing Stones of Stennis..... Pirate..... ii. 279

Stubbs, punishment of, by mutilation.....	Nigel	ii. 234
Stukely, Thomas.....	Monastery	i. 286
Swinton, Mrs. Margaret.....	Pevenil	i. 128
Sword dance, the.....	Pirate	i. 244
TALLA-LINNS, meeting at.....	H. of Mid-Loth	i. 815
Tappit-Hen.....	Guy Mannering	ii. 118
Templars, death of their Grand Master.....	Talisman	ii. 169
Tillietudlem Castle.....	Old Mortality	i. 187
Titus Livius.....	Waverley	i. 132
Tolbooth (Old), of Edinburgh.....	H. of Mid-Loth	i. 102
Traitor's gate.....	Nigel	ii. 186
"Trepanned and concealed".....	Redgauntlet	ii. 51
Troubadours.....	Anne of Geier	ii. 205
Tulchan, Bishop's.....	Ivanhoe	i. 317
Tully Veolan house and garden.....	Waverley	i. 152, 154
Turner, Sir James.....	L. of M. i. 212, ii. 114	Old Mortality i. 186
Turner, Mrs. Anne.....	Nigel	i. 180
ULRICA's death song.....	Ivanhoe	ii. 129
Urry, Sir John.....	Pirate	i. 243
VARANGIAN guard of Constantinople.....	Count Robert	i. 51, 52
Vehmique tribunals.....	Anne of Geier	ii. 47
WALKER, Peter, his Lives of the Camero-nians.....	H. of Mid-Loth	i. 167
——, Rev. Mr., of Dunnottar.....	Old Mortality	i. 27
Walladmoor, a rival romance.....	Betrothed	i. 21
"Wandering Willie's tale".....	Redgauntlet	i. 188
Waterfall, a.....	Waverley	i. 286
Wayland Smith, legend of.....	Kenilworth	i. 221
Welsh houses.....	Betrothed	i. 42
—— Courage of the.....	ditto	i. 80
—— archers.....	ditto	i. 124
——, Gold chains of the.....	ditto	i. 147
—— Cruelties.....	ditto	i. 157
Whalley, the regicide.....	Pevenil	i. 299
White spirit, the.....	Monastery	i. 297
Winton, Earl of.....	Hgh. Widow	ii. 264
Witchcraft.....	Waverley	i. 201
Wooden Mare.....	Old Mortality	i. 151
Wraiths.....	L. of Montrose	ii. 201

YAWKINS, the prototype of Dirk Hatteraick Guy Mannering ..	i.	27
Yetholm, gipsies of.....	ditto	i. 291
Yorke, Rowland	Monastery	i. 286
ZETLAND, antique coins in.....	Pirate	ii. 146
————— corn mills.....	ditto	i. 186
————— fishermen.....	ditto	ii. 24
————— government of.....	ditto	i. 72

GLOSSARY.

A.

A', all.
 Aa, aw, awe.
 Ableeze, blazing.
 Aboon, abune, above.
 Abulyements, habiliments; accoutrements.
 Aefauld, simple.
 Aff, off.
 Aff hands, hands off.
 Afore, before.
 Aft, oft.
 Aften, often.
 Afterhend, afterwards.
 Ahint, behind.
 Agee, ajee, awry; off the right line; obliquely; wrong.
 Aiblins, perhaps.
 Ain, own.
 Aines, since, once.
 Ainsells, own selves.
 Air, ear, early.
 Airn, iron.
 Airt, to direct.
 Airts, points of the compass.
 Aits, oats; ait-meal, oat-meal.
 Aiver, aver, a work-horse.
 Ajee, awry.
 Alane, alone.
 A-low, a fire; in a flame.
 Aitoun, old town.
 Amaist, almost.
 Ambry, aumry, almary, close cupboard for keeping cold victuals, bread, &c.
 An, if.
 Anes-errand, of set purpose; sole errand.
 Anent, opposite; respecting.
 Aneuch, enough.

Ante-nup, antenuptial fornication between persons who are afterwards married to each other.
 Archilowe (of unknown derivation), a peace offering.
 Ark, meal-ark; a large chest for holding meal.
 Arles, earnest-money.
 Arriage and carriage, plough and cart service.
 Ass, ashes.
 Assoilzie, assollize, acquit.
 Aucht, aught, to possess or belong to. "Whae's aught it?" to whom does it belong?
 Aught, possession; property. "In ane's aught," in one's keeping.
 Atweel, I wot well.
 Auld, old.
 Auld-farran, sagacious.
 Auld-warld, old-fashioned; antique. Auld-warld stories, ancient stories.
 Aver, work-horse.
 Aweel, well.
 Awes, owes.
 Awmous, alms.
 Awmry, v. Ambry.
 Awn, owing.
 Awsome, awful; terrible.
 Ax, ask.

B.

Ba', hand ball.
 Bab, bunch; tassel.
 Back, bucket, coal-scuttle. Ass-backet, ashe-scuttle. Adj. muckle-backit, broad-backed.
 Baff, blow; bang; heavy thump.
 Bayganet, bayonet.

- Baik, beck; curtsey; reverence.
 Bailie, alderman or magistrate.
 Bairns, children.
 Baith, both.
 Baittle, rich pasture.
 ——— grass grund, rich close-cropped sheep pasture.
 Ballant, ballad.
 Baldrick, girdle.
 Ban, curse.
 Band, bond.
 Banes, bones.
 Bang, spring; a bound.
 Bannet, bonnet.
 Bannock, flat round cake.
 Bannock-fluke, turbot.
 Bangster, a violent fellow who carries everything before him.
 Bargaining, disputing; battling.
 Barken, encrust.
 Barkit, tanned.
 Barla fummil, barley, an exclamation for a truce by one who has fallen down in wrestling or play, "By our Lady, upset! I am down!"
 Barlev, barly (from parley) a cry among boys at their violent games, for a truce.
 Barm, yeast.
 Barns-breaking, idle frolic.
 Barrace, bounds; lists for combatants.
 Barrow-tram, shaft of a wheelbarrow.
 Bartizan (in fortification), battlement.
 Batts, botts.
 Baudrons, puss; a cat.
 Bauks, uncultivated places between ridges of land.
 Bauld, bald, also bold.
 Bawbee, halfpenny.
 Bawbee rows, halfpenny rolls.
 Bawson-faced, having a white oblong spot on the face.
 Baxter, baker.
 Be, "let be," let alone; not to mention.
 Beal, biel (Gael.) mouth, opening; also suppurate.
 Bean, bien, bein, well to do; comfortable and well provided.
 Bear, barley that has more than two rows of grain in the ear.
 Bedesman, one that prays for, or to; a poor pensioner.
 Bedral, a beadle; also bed-rid.
 Beflummied, palavered; flattered.
 Begrutten, exhausted with weeping.
 Begunk, begoke, trick.
 Beild, bield, shelter.
 Bein, wealthy; well provided.
 Belike, perhaps.
 Believe, belyve, by and by; speedily.
 Bell-the-cat, to contend with, especially of superior rank or power; to use strong measures regardless of consequences.
 Bell-wavering, wandering.
 Ben (be-in), the inner apartment.
 "To bring far ben," to treat with great respect and hospitality.
 Bend-leather, thick sole-leather.
 Benison, blessing.
 Bent, a kind of grass; metaphorically, the hill; the moor. "Ta'en the bent," taken the field; run away.
 Bicker, wooden vessel, made by a cooper for holding liquor, brose, &c.
 Bide, stay; endure; reside; "Bide a blink," stay a moment.
 Biding, abiding, waiting; residing.
 Bield, v. Beild.
 Bien, v. Bein.
 Big, build; also, great, large.
 Bigging, building.
 Biggit, buil.
 Biggonets, linen caps of the fashion worn by the Beguine sisterhood.
 Bike, byke, bink, wild bees' nest.
 Billy (the infantine pronunciation of brither), brother.
 Bind (in drinking), as much liquor as one can carry under his band or girdle. "I'm at my bind," I've got my full measure.
 Bink, bench; bank; acclivity.
 Binn, bing, heap of unthrashed corn.
 Binna, be not.
 Birkie, a child's game at cards; also a lively young fellow.
 Birling, drinking; administering liquor; also making a grumbling noise like an old-fashioned spinning-wheel or handmill in motion.

- Birly-man, the petty officer of a burgh of barony.
- Birn, burden. "Skin and birn," full account of a sheep, by bringing the skin with the tar mark, and the head with the brand on the nose; the whole of anything.
- Birr, noise; vehemence; stimulate.
- Birse, bristles. "Set up his birse," roused him to his mettle; put him in a towering passion.
- Bit (used as a diminutive). "Bit burn," small rivulet. "Bit lassock," little girl.
- Bit, small space; spot. "Blithe bit," pleasant spot.
- Bite, a bit. "Bite of bread," a mouthful of bread.
- Bittle, beetle, a wooden bat for beating of linen.
- Bittock, little bit; a short distance; (Ock is used as a diminutive, as in lassock for lass.)
- Blackaviced, dark-complezioned.
- Black-fishers, poachers, who kill salmon in close-time.
- Blackit, blackened
- Black-mail, security-money paid to freebooters.
- Black-nebs, democrats; factious, discontented revilers.
- Blasting, puffing and blowing; also boasting.
- Blate, bashful; modest.
- Blawart, blawort, bluebottle, bluewort, centaurea cyanus.
- Blaw-in-my-lug, boast in mine ear; flatterer, parasite.
- Blawing in one's lug, flattering; using circumlocution.
- Blearing your ee, blinding you with flattery.
- Bleeze, blaze.
- Blether, bladder.
- Blethers, babbling; foolish talk.
- Blink, glance of the eye; glimpse; a twinkling.
- Blithe, glad; pleasant.
- Blood-wite, compensation, or fine for bloodshed.
- Bluid, blood.
- Blunker, bungler; one that spoils everything he meddles with.
- Boast, talking to intimidate.
- Bob, dance; up and down.
- Bodach, old man; bug-a-boo.
- Bode, what is bidden; offer.
- Boddle, a copper coin, value the sixth part of an English penny, equal to two doits, or Scottish pennies.
- Bogilly, full of goblins.
- Bogles, goblins; bugbears; scarecrows.
- Bole, boal, a locker in the wall of a cottage, for keeping books, &c.
- "Window-bole," a window with blinds of wood, with one small pane of glass in the middle, instead of casement.
- Bolt, arrow.
- Bonnally, bonnaile, a parting cup with a friend, in earnest of wishing him a prosperous journey.
- Bonnie, wawlie, toys, trinkets.
- Wawlie (a drisy) is commonly used figuratively to express what is beautiful.
- Boot, but, a balance of value in barter. "Into the boot," given into [instead of] the boot.
- Booth, shop.
- Bordel, brothel.
- Borrell-loons, low rustic rogues.
- Borrowing-days, the three last days of March, O. S.
- "March borrowed frae Aprile,
Three days, an' they were ill;
The first o' them was wind and weat,
The second o' them was snaw an' sleet,
The third o' them was sic a freeze,
That the birds' legs stack to the trees."
See Note, Heart of Mid-Lothian.
- Boss, hollow.
- Bonnet-laird, small proprietor of land.
- Bonnie, bonny, pretty; beautiful; also strong; worthy; approved.
- Bothy, hut; hovel.
- Bouking, bucking.
- Boul o' a pint stoup, handle of a two-quart pot.
- Bountith, the bounty given in addition to stipulated wages.
- Bourd, jeer; mock.
- Bourocks, bourachs, confused heaps; miserable huts; also small enclosures.
- Bourtrees-bush, ekler-bush.

- Bow, boll, or dry measure, containing the sixteenth part of a chaldar.
- Bowies, casks with the head taken out: tubs: milk-pails.
- Bowk, bult: body.
- Bracken, fern.
- Brae, rising ground.
- Braid, bruid.
- Brander, gridiron.
- Brandered, grilled; broiled.
- Brank-new, bran-new, a phrase equivalent to "speck and span;" quite new.
- Brash, transient fit of sickness.
- Brattach, standard; literally, cloth.
- Braw, brave; fine.
- Brawly, bravely; finely.
- Braws, braveries; finery.
- Breaskit, briskit, the breast.
- Breeham, working horse's collar.
- Breckan, fern.
- Breeks, breeches. "Breckless," breechless.
- Brent brow, high forehead.
- Brickle, brittle; ticklish.
- Brig, bridge.
- Brither, brother.
- Broach, broche, spil.
- Brooch, breast-pin.
- Brochan, gruel.
- Breering, coming thro' the ground, as young corn, &c.
- Brock, badger, (from its white or spotted face.)
- Brockit-cow, white-faced cow.
- Brog, a pointed instrument, such as a shoemaker's awl.
- Brogging, pricking with a sharp-pointed instrument.
- Brogues, shoes; in the Lowlands, shoes of half-dressed leather.
- Broken man, outlaw; bankrupt.
- Broo, broe, broth; juice; also, opinion founded on bruit or report.
- Brose, a kind of pottage made by pouring boiling water or broth on meal, which is stirred while the liquid is poured. The dish is denominated from the nature of the liquid, as "water-brose," "kail-brose."
- Brose, brewis; stir-about.
- Brose-time, brewis-time; supper-time.
- Brown Man of the Moors, a droick, dwarf, or subterranean elf.
- Brownies, domestic goblins; "the Robin Goodfellows" of Scotland.
- Browst, brewing; as much as is brewed at one time.
- Bruckle, brickle; brittle; ticklish.
- Bruick, brook, use; wear; enjoy.
- Bruizie, broil; scuffle; disturbance.
- Brunstane, brimstone.
- Brunsten, burstled.
- Buckie, shell of a sea-snail, or any spiral shell, of whatever size. "Deil, or Deevil's buckie," a perverse refractory youngster; a mischievous madcap, that has an evil twist in his character.
- Buik, buke, book.
- Buirdly, strong; athletic.
- Buist, boost, the mark set upon cattle by their owners.
- Bumbazed, amazed; confused; stupefied.
- Bunker, bench. "Sand-bunker," sand-bank; in cottages, a seat which also serves for a chest, opening with a hinged lid.
- Busk, dress.
- Basking, dressing.
- But-an'-ben, be-out and be-in, or the outer and inner side of the partition-wall in a house consisting of two apartments.
- Buttock-mail, fine imposed on fornication, in lieu of sitting on the stool of repentance.
- By, "down bye," down yonder; not far off.
- By ordinar, more than ordinary.
- By, past; besides; over and above.
- Byganes, bygones, what is gone by and past.
- Byre, shipper; cow-house.
- Bytime, odd time; interval of leisure; now and then.

C.

- Ca', drive. "Ca'-throw," disturbance; prevention. "Ca' the shuttle," drive the shuttle.
- Ca', call.
- Cadger, carrier; huzter.

- Cadgy, lively and frisky; wanton.
 Cackling, cackling.
 Cailliachs (Gael.), old woman.
 Caimeid, kaimeid, combed.
 Caird, tinker.
 Cairn, heap of loose stones, piled as a memorial of some individual or occurrence.
 Calf-ward, v. Cauf-ward.
 Callan, callant, young lad; a somewhat irrisory use of the old term gallant; a fine fellow.
 Caller, cool, fresh; "Caller oysters," or "herrings," newly caught.
 Cam, came.
 Camstery, froward; perverse; unmanageable.
 Canna, cannot.
 Cannily, skilfully; cautiously.
 Canny, skilful; prudent; lucky; in a superstitious sense, good conditioned and safe to deal with; trustworthy.
 Cattle, the back part of the head; also, a fragment broken off anything.
 Cantrip, spell; incantation; charm.
 Canty, lively and cheerful.
 Capercailzie, the great cock of the wood.
 Cap, wooden vessel for holding food or liquor.
 Cappie, diminutive of cap.
 Cappernoity, crabbed; peevish.
 Capul, horse; in a more limited sense, work-horse.
 Carfuffed, curfuffed, ruffled; rumped.
 Carle, churl; gruff old man.
 Carline, caring, the feminine of carle.
 Carriage, horse-and-cart service.
 Carried, in nubibus; having the mind fixed upon something different from the business on hand; having the wits gone "a wool gathering."
 Carritch, carritches, catechism.
 Carvy, carraway.
 Cast, got over; recovered from.
 Cast, lot; fate.
 Cast out, fall out; quarrel.
 Cast up, appear; also throw in one's teeth; reproach with.
 Cateran, kearn; Highland and Irish irregular soldier; freebooter.
 Cauf-ward, calf-ward, place where calves are kept in the field.
 Cauff, chaff.
 Cauld, cold.
 Cauldrife, chilly; susceptible of cold.
 Caup, cap, cup; wooden bowl; also the shell of a snail, as snail-cap.
 Causey, causeway, calsay, raised and paved street. "To crown the causey," to keep the middle or higher part of the street, in defiance of all to be met.
 Cavey, hen-coop; also, a partan, or common sea-crab.
 Certie, "my certie," my faith; in good troth.
 Chack, snack; luncheon.
 Chafts, jaws.
 Chalder, (dry measure,) sixteen bolls.
 Chancy, lucky.
 Chap, customer; fellow; also a stroke.
 Chappit, struck; also pounded; mashed.
 Chaw, chew.
 Cheap o't, well deserving of it; deserving worse.
 Cheese-fat, cheese-dish; cheese form.
 Chenzie, chain.
 Chields, chiels, young fellows.
 Chimleyneuk, chimney-corner.
 Choast, (ch as k in Tweeddale,) hoast, severe cough.
 Chop, shop.
 Chowl, jowl.
 Chuckies, barn-door fowls.
 Chuckie-stanes, pebble-stones, such as children play at chuck-farthing with.
 Clachan, a small village.
 Clack-geese, clack-geese, barnacle geese.
 Clagged, claggit, clogged.
 Clairshach, clairsho, harp.
 Claise, clase, clothes.
 Claihs, clothes.
 Clamyhewit, stroke.
 Clamjamfrie, mob; tag-rag and bob-tail.
 Clap, a stroke; also moment.

- Clapper, tongue; tongue of a bell.
 "Ringing his clapper," using his tongue freely.
- Clarty, clorty, unclean; very dirty.
- Clash, tittle-tattle; scandal; idle talk.
- Clat, claut, rake together; an instrument for raking together mire, weeds, &c.
- Clatter, tattle.
- Clatter-traps, rattle-traps, a ludicrous name for tools and accoutrements.
- Claut, clutched; snatched violently.
- Claut, v. Clat.
- Clavering, talking idly and foolishly.
- Clavers, idle talk.
- Claw, scratch; scrape. "Claw up their mittins," give them the finishing stroke. "Claw favour," curry favour.
- Cleck, collect; bring together; hatch.
- "Clecking time," hatching time.
- Cleed, clothe.
- Cleek, cleick, hook.
- Cleekit, caught as with a hook.
 "Cleekit in the cunzie," hooked in the loin.
- Cleugh, cliff; also ravine.
- Clink, smart stroke; also a jingling sound; metaph. money.
- Cliuket, clanket; struck.
- Clipping time, the nick of time.
 "To come in clipping time," to come as opportunely as he who visits a farmer at sheep shearing time, when there is always mirth and good cheer.
- Clocking hen, clucking, hatching, breeding hen.
- Clodded, threw clods; threw with violence.
- Clomb, climbed.
- Clout, clove, divided hoof; cloven hoof. "Clout and clout," hoof and hoof, i. e. every hoof.
- Clour, bump upon the head from a blow; also indentation in a brass or pewter vessel; defacement; inequality of surface produced by a blow.
- Cloured, adj. of clour.
- Clute, v. Clout.
- Coal-heugh, place where coals are hewed or dug.
- Coble, small fishing-boat upon a river.
- Cock bree, cock broo, cock broth.
- Cocky-leeky, cock-a-leekie, leek soup, in which a cock has been boiled.
- Cockernonie, the gathering of a young woman's hair under the snood or fillet.
- Cock-laird, a land proprietor, who cultivates his own estate.
- Cockle-brained, chuckle-headed; foolish.
- Cock-padle, lump-fish.
- Cod, pillow; also pod.
- Codling, an apple so called. "Carlisle codlings," are in great esteem.
- Cogue, cogie, a round wooden vessel, made by a cooper for holding milk, brose, liquor, &c.
- Cöllie, cur, dog.
- Collie-shangy, quarrel; confused uproar like that produced when collies fall a-worrying one another about one of their own kind who has got a shangie or shagan, i. e. a canister, &c. tied to his tail.
- Coney, rabbit.
- Cookie, a kind of small sweet bread for eating at tea.
- Corbie, raven. "Corbie messenger," one that is long upon his errand, or who, like the raven sent from the Ark, returns not again.
- Coost, cast.
- Coronach, dirge.
- Corri, (in the Highlands,) a hollow recess in a mountain, open only on one side.
- Cottars, cottagers.
- Cosy, cozie, warm and comfortable.
- Couldna', could not.
- Coup, turn over. "Coup the crans," go to wreck, like a pot on the fire, when the cran upon which it stood is upset.
- Coup, barter.
- Couping, buying, particularly horses; also trucking, or bartering.
- Cove, care.
- Cowt, colt.

- Cozie, cosie, warm and comfortable.
 Crack, boast.
 Crack, new; showy.
 Crack-hemp, crack-ropes; gallows-apple.
 Cracks, hearty conversation.
 Craemes, krames, warehouses where goods are crammed or packed; range of booths for the sale of goods.
 Craft, croft.
 Craig, crag, rock; neck; throat.
 Craigsman, one who is dexterous in climbing rocks.
 Crap, crop, produce of the ground.
 Crap, the top of any thing; the craw of a fowl, used ludicrously for a man's stomach.
 Crappit heads, puddings made in the heads of haddocks.
 Creach, Highland foray; plundering incursion.
 Creel, a basket or pannier. "To be in a creel," or "to have one's wits in a creel," to have one's wits jumbled into confusion.
 Creefu', basketful.
 Creish, creesh, grease.
 Creishing, greasing.
 Crewel-, scrofula.
 Crombie, crummy, a crooked horned cow.
 Crook, pot-hook.
 Crook, winding.
 Crouse, brisk; full of heart; courageous-like.
 Crowdy, meal and milk mixed in a cold state; a kind of pot-tage.
 Crown of the causeway, middle of the street.
 Cruppin, crept.
 Cud, cudgel.
 Cuddie, ass.
 Cuitikins, cutikings, guetres, gaiters.
 Cuitle, diddle.
 Cuittle, Eng. cuddle, (with a different shade of meaning,) tickle.
 "Cuttle favour," curry favour.
 Cullion, (Gael.) puppy; base spunging dog; base fellow; pol-troon.
 Cummer, midwife; gossip.
 Curch, (Gael. and Fr.) kerchief; a woman's covering for the head; inner linen cap, sometimes worn without the (v.) mutch.
 Curfuffle, ruffle; rumple; put in a disordered and tumbled state.
 Curliewurlies, fantastical circular ornaments.
 Curmurring, grumbling.
 Curn, a quantity; an indefinite number.
 Curney, round; granulated.
 Curple, curpin, crupper.
 Currach, a corackle, or small skiff; boat of wicker-work, covered with hides.
 Cusser, cuisser, stallion.
 Cushat, wood-pigeon.
 Cut-lugged, crop-eared.
 Cutty, (cut,) slut; worthless girl; a loose woman.
 Cutty, a spoon; tobacco pipe, cut or broken short. "Cutty-spoon," a short horn spoon. "Cutty-stool," short-legged stool.

D.

- Dab, daub, to peck as birds do.
 Dabs, small bits, or specks stuck upon anything.
 Dacker, search, as for stolen or smuggled goods.
 Daft, mad; frolicsome.
 Daffin, thoughtless gayety; foolish plughfulness; foolery.
 Daidling, loitering; sauntering; getting on in a lazy, careless way.
 Daiker, to toil, as in job-work.
 Daikering, v. Dacker.
 Dais, v. Deas.
 Dalt, foster-child.
 Damner, miner.
 Dammer, stun, and confusion by striking on the head.
 Danders, cinders; refuse of a smith's fire.
 Dandering, sauntering; roaming idly from place to place.
 Dandilly, spoiled by too much indulgence.
 Dang, dung, struck; subdued; knocked over.
 Darg, dargue, day's work.

- Darn, dern, conceal.
 Daur, daured, dare; dared.
 Day, "the day," to-day.
 Dead-thraw, the death throes; last agonies. When applied to an inanimate object, it means neither dead nor alive, neither hot nor cold.
 Deas, dais, dees, table, great hall table; a pew in the church, (also a turf seat erected at the doors of cottages, but not used by the Author of Waverley in this sense.)
 Deasil, motion contrary to that of the sun; a Highland superstitious custom, implying some preternatural virtue.
 Death-ruckle, death-rattle in the throat of a dying person.
 Deave, defen.
 Dee, die.
 Deeing, dying; also doing.
 Deevil's-buckie, imp of Satan; limb of the devil.
 Deil, devil.
 Deil's dozen, thirteen.
 Deil gaed o'er Jock Wabster, everything went topsy turvy; there was the devil to pay.
 Deil may care, the devil may care; I don't care.
 Deil's snuff-box, the common puff-ball.
 Delieret, delirious.
 Deliver, active; free in motion.
 Deliverly, actively; alertly.
 Delve, v. Devel.
 Demented, insane.
 Denty, dainty; nice.
 Dentier, daintier; more nice and delicate.
 Dern, concealed; secret; hidden.
 Derved, concealed.
 Devel, delve, very hard blow.
 Didna, did not.
 Dike, dyke, stone-wall fence.
 Ding, strike; beat; subdue.
 Dink, neat; trim; tidy; also contemptuous; scornful of others.
 Dinmonts, wethers between one and two years old, or that have not yet been twice shorn.
 Dinna, do not.
 Dinnle, tingle; thrill.
 Dirl, thrill.
 Dirdum, uproar; tumult; evil; chance; penance.
 Discreet, civil.
 Discretion, civility.
 Disjasked, jaded; decayed; worn out.
 Disjune, dejeuner, breakfast.
 Dits, stops up.
 Div, do.
 Divot, thin sod for thatching.
 Doch-an-dorrach (Gael.), stirrup-cup; parting-cup.
 Doddie, cow without horns.
 Doiled, dyled, dazed; stupid; dotting.
 Doited, turned to dotage; stupid; confused.
 Dole, "dead dole," that which was dealt out to the poor at the funerals of the rich.
 Donnert, donnard, grossly stupid; stunned. "Auld Donnert," in dotage.
 Doo, dove.
 Dook, duck; immerse under water; bathe.
 Dooket, doucat, dove-cot; pigeon-house.
 Dookit, v. Doukit.
 Dooms, used intensively, as "dooms bad," very bad (mince of d—d bad).
 Doon, down.
 Door stane, threshold.
 Durlach, v. Dourlach.
 Douce, quiet; sober; sedate.
 Dought, could; was able.
 Doukit, ducked.
 Doup, bottom; but-end.
 Dour, hard and impenetrable in body or mind.
 Dourlach (Gael.), bundle; knapsack; literally satchel of arrows.
 Dover, neither asleep nor awake; temporary privation of consciousness.
 Dowering, walking or riding half asleep, as if from the effects of liquor; besotted.
 Dow (pronounced as in how), are able. Dowed, was able.
 Dow (pronounced as in who), dove; a term of endearment.
 Dow-cote, pigeon-house.
 Dowed, faded; rapid; decayed.

- Dowf, hollow; dull.
 Dowie, dolly, dull; melancholy; in bad health; in bad tune.
 Downa, cannot; do not.
 Down bye, down the way.
 Draff-poke, bag of grains.
 Draig, draick, dreck, dreg; dregs; a word which frequently makes part of the name of a slovenly, low-lying place. In this manner it is used in Mospha-draig.
 Drammock, a thick raw mixture of meal and water.
 Drap, drop. Drappie, little drop.
 Drappit-egg, poached egg.
 Drave, drove.
 Dree, suffer; endure; to dread the worst that may happen.
 Dreeling, drilling.
 Dreigh, tardy; slow; tiresome.
 Dridder, dreadour, dread; fear.
 Drigie, dreggie, dirgie, funeral company potation.
 Droghling, coghling, wheezing and blowing.
 Droukit, drenched.
 Drouthy, droughty, thirsty.
 Drow, drizzle; mizzling rain.
 Drudging-box, flour-box for basting in cookery.
 Drugsters, druggists.
 Dry multure, stricted mill-dues, paid to one mill for grain that is ground at another.
 Duddy, ragged.
 Duds, rags; tatters; clothes.
 Dule, dole, sorrow; mourning.
 Dulse, dulce, sea celery.
 Dunge-ower, knocked over.
 Dunniewassal, (Gael. from duine, a man—wasal, well born.) a Highland gentleman, generally the cadet of a family of rank, and who received his title from the land he occupied, though held at the will of his chieftain.
 Dunshin, jogging smartly with the elbow.
 Dunt, knock, stroke, or blow, that produces a din or sound; also a good sizable portion of anything.
 Dwam, dwaim dwaum. qualm; swoon.
- Dwining, decaying; declining in health.
 Dyster, dyer.
 Dyke, stone-wall fence.
 Dyvour debtor who cannot pay.
- E.
- Eannaruich, (Gael.) strong soup. The pot is filled with beef or mutton (not any particular part), as much water is put in as will cover the meat, which is kept simmering until it is fully done, and when it is taken out, the Eannarich is what an English cook would call double stock.
 Ear, early.
 Eard, earth.
 Earded, put in the earth; interred.
 Earn, eagle.
 Easel, eastward.
 Ee, eye.
 Fen, eyes.
 E'en, even. "E'en sae," even so.
 E'en, evening.
 Effeir of war, warlike guise.
 Eident, ay-doing; diligent; careful; attentive.
 Eik, eke, addition.
 Eilding, fuel.
 Eithly, easily.
 Elshin, awl.
 Eme, uncle.
 Endlong, in uninterrupted succession; even on; at full length.
 Eneugh, enough.
 Enow, just now.
 Equal-aquals, makes all odds even.
 Errand. "For ance (ains) errand," for that purpose alone.
 Estreen, yestreen, yesterday, more properly last night.
 Etter-cap, adder-cap, atter-cope, a spider; a virulent atrabillious person.
 Ettle, aim; intend.
 Evening, comparing.
 Evidents, evidences.
 Ewest, nearest; contiguous.
 Ewhow! eh wow! oh dear!
 Ewking, itching.
 Exies, hysterics; ecstasies.

F.

- Fa', faw, fall; befall.
 Fa, get. "We maunna fa that," we must not hope to get that.
 Fa'en, fallen.
 Fa'ard, favoured. "Ill fa'ard," ill favoured.
 Fae, foe.
 Fae, frae, from.
 Fae, faie, whose; who.
 Faem, foam.
 Faither, father.
 Faitour, rascal; mean fellow.
 Fal-lalls, foolish ornaments in dress.
 Fallow, fellow.
 Falsed, falsehood.
 Fan, whan, when.
 Fard, colour.
 Fard, faurd, v. Fa'ard.
 Fari, farle, now the fourth part of a large cake, originally used for corn or bread.
 Fash, fasherie, trouble.
 Fashing, taking or giving trouble.
 Fashous, troublesome.
 Fastern's e'en, Fastern e'en, Shrove Tuesday.
 Fat, what.
 Fauld, fold.
 Faund, found.
 Faur'd, favoured. "Weel faur'd," well favoured; good-looking.
 Fause, false.
 Faut, fault; default; want.
 Feal, sod.
 Feal-dyke, wall of sods for an enclosure.
 Feal, faithful; loyal.
 Feared, affected with fear.
 Fear, feer, entire.
 Fearfu', terrible.
 Feck, strength and substance; part of a thing. "Best feck," better part. "Maist feck," greatest part.
 Feckless, powerless; pitiless; feeble; deficient in some quality. "Feckless body," having barely the remains of a man.
 Fee, wages.
 Feel, fool.
 Fell, skin; also rocky hill.
 Fell, strong and fiery. "Fell chield," fiery fellow; terrible fellow. "Fell airts," hellish arts.
 Fell, befall.
 Fend, defend; keep out bad weather; provide against want.
 Fended, provided; made shift.
 Fending, providing; provision.
 Fendy, clever in providing.
 Ferlie, wonder; rarity. "To ferlie," to wonder.
 Fickle, made to fike or fidge; puzzle; difficult.
 Fie, fey, acting unaccountably, as persons in health and soon to die are supposed to do, in some last and extraordinary effort.
 Fient a haet, deuce a thing; deuce a bit; (from fiend), devil a bit.
 Fiking, fykiug, fidgiting; fiddle-faddling.
 Files, defiles; spoils.
 Finner, a small whale.
 Fireflaught, flash of lightning.
 Firlot, fourth part of a boll of corn.
 Fissel, bustle.
 Fissenless, fizenless, fusionless, pitiless; weak.
 Fit, foot; step.
 Fite, white.
 Flaming, basting.
 Flash, dash out rashly.
 Flaughtering, light shinning fitfully; flickering.
 Flunes, pancakes.
 Flaw, gust; blast.
 Fleech, flatter; wheedle.
 Fleeching, flattering.
 Flees, flies.
 Fleg, fright.
 Flemit, frightened.
 Flemit, flमित, banished; expelled.
 Fley, frighten.
 Flichtering, flattering.
 Flight, arrow.
 Fling, kick; throw out the legs like a horse.
 Flisking, whisking up and down.
 Flisk-ma-hoys, jill-flirts; giddy fly-flap girls.
 Flit, remove; depart.
 Flory, vain.
 Flow-moss, watery moss; morass.
 Fluff, flash.
 Fluff-gibs, squibs.

Fluffed i' the pan, burned prime,
without firing the barrel of the gun or pistol.

Flunkie, footman.

Flyte, flute, scold.

Folk free and sacless (IVANHOE),
a lawful freeman.

Follies, foolish fashions in dress.

Forbears, forefathers; ancestors.

Forbye, besides; over and above.

Fore, "to the fore," remaining still in existence; also, in front.

Foretauld, foretold.

Forfairn, exhausted by fatigue or decay; sorely worn out.

Forfaulted, forfeited.

Forfoughten, exhausted with fight- ing; fatigued and breathless.

Forgathered, fell in with.

Forgie, forgive.

Forpet, fourth part of a peck.

Forrit, forward.

Forspeaks, affects with the curse of an evil tongue, which brings ill luck upon what or whomsoever it praises.

Fortalice, a keep; fortress; castle.

Fouats, house-leaks.

Foumart, foulmart, pole-cat.

Four-nooked, four-cornered.

Fou, fow, full; drunk; also a pitchfork.

Foy, departing feast.

Fozy, soft and spongy.

Frack, ready; eager; forward.

Fractionous, peevish.

Frae, from.

Frampul, unruly; forward; evil- conditioned.

Freits, freats, superstitious observ- ances.

Frem, fremmit, fraim, frem'd,
strange; not related.

Fristed, put off for a time.

Fu', full.

Fuff, puff; whiff.

Fule, fool.

Fusionless, v. Fissenless.

Funk, funking, applied to a horse kicking up the rear without dashing out the heels.

Funk, funck. "In a funck," in a foolish perplexity.

Fyke, bustle; trouble; restlessness;
much the same as funk.

G.

Gaberlunzie, a mendicant; a poor guest who cannot pay for his entertainment.

Gad, goad; bar of iron.

Gae, go.

Gae down, drinking bout.

Gaed, went.

Gae wa', go away; have done; no more of that.

Gaen, going.

Gaisling, gosling.

Gait, goat.

Gaitt, get, what is begotten; brat.

Gane, gone.

Gang, go.

Ganging, going.

Gangrel, a child beginning to walk;
also a vagrant.

Gar, garr, make; compel.

Gardyloo (Fr.), gardez l'eau,

Garr'd, made; compelled; caused.

Gascromh, (Gael. cas crom), a long narrow spade, with a projecting foot-piece, used in the Highlands for digging in stony ground, where no other instrument can be introduced.

Gash, prattle; chatter; gossip.

Gash, sharp; shrewd.

Gate, way; manner.

Gathering-peat, a fiery peat which was sent round by the Borderers to alarm the country in time of danger, as the fiery cross was by the Highlanders.

Gathering peat, gathering coals, either of them, put into the fire at night, with the ashes gathered around it, to preserve ignition for the morning.

Gaunt, yawn.

Gaun, going.

Gauntrees, goan-trees, trams; or wooden frames on which casks in a cellar are placed.

Gauger, exciseman.

Gawsie, plump; jolly; portly.

Gay, pretty. "Gay gude," pretty good. "Gay well," pretty well.

Gear, goods; dress; equipment.

Gecked, tossed the head; jeered.

Geizened, geissend, gushing; leaky.

Gelt, brat.

- Gentles, gentlefolks.
 Gentrice, gentility; good descent.
 Genty, neat; trim; elegantly formed.
 Gey sharp, pretty sharp. "Gey gude," pretty good.
 Ghaist, ghost.
 Gie, give.
 Gied, gave.
 Glen, given.
 Giff gaff, in old English, ka me, ka thee, i. e., give and take; tit for tat; mutual service to one another.
 Gillie, man-servant in the Highlands.
 Gillie white-foot, gillie wet-foot, a running footman, who had to carry his master over brocks and watery places in travelling.
 Gills, gullies.
 Gillravaging, plundering.
 Gilpy, frolicsome young person.
 Gimmer, two-year-old ewe.
 Gin, gifan, if; suppose.
 Gingle, gingling, jingle or clink; jingling.
 Gird, hoop.
 Girdle, an iron plate for firing cakes on.
 Girn, grin like an ill-natured dog.
 Girning, grinning.
 Girncl, meal-chest.
 Girth, gird, hoop.
 Girths, "slip the girths," tumble down like a pack-horse's burden, when the girth gives way.
 Glaiks, deception; delusion. "Fling the glaiks in folk's een," metaph. throw dust in people's eyes. "Give the glaiks," be fool, and then leave in the lurch.
 Glait, glait, light-headed; idle; foolish.
 Glamour, magical deception of sight.
 Gled, kite.
 Gledging, looking slyly at one.
 Glead, flame.
 Glead, gleid, gleyed, one-eyed; squinting; also, oblique; awry. "Gaed a' glead," went all wrong.
 Gleeing, squinting.
 Gleg, sharp; on the alert.
 Gley, a-gley, on one side; asquint.
 Gliff, glimpse; short time; also a fricht.
 Glisk, glimpse.
 Gloaming, twilight.
 Glowr, glowering; stare; staring.
 Glunch, frown; gloom.
 Gomeril, fool; blockhead.
 Gossipred, gossiprie, familiarity; intimacy; sponsorship.
 Goustie, waste; desolate; what is accounted ghostly.
 Gouth, drop.
 Gowan, daisy.
 Gowk, cuckoo; fool.
 Gowling, howling; noisy; scolding.
 Gowpen, gowpin, as much as both hands, held together, with the palms upward, and contracted in a circular form, can contain.
 Graddan, meal ground on the quern, or hand-mill.
 Graff, grae, grave.
 Graip, dung-fork.
 Graith, harness.
 Gramashes, gaiters reaching to the knee.
 Gran, grand; (Swedish, grann), fine.
 Grane, groan.
 Graning, groaning.
 Grat, cried, wept.
 Gree, agree; also fame; reputation.
 Greed, greediness.
 Greeshoch, peat fire piled on the hearth.
 Greet, greeting, weep, weeping.
 Grew, shudder.
 Grewsome, horrible.
 Grice, sucking-pig.
 Griddle, v. Girdle.
 Grieve, overseer.
 Grilse, gilse, gray; a young salmon.
 Grip, gripe.
 Grippie for grippie, gripe for gripe; fair play in wrestling.
 Grippit, laid hold of.
 Gripple, gripping; greedy; avaricious.
 Grit, great.
 Grossart, grosert, gooseberry.
 Grue, shudder.
 Grumach, ill-favoured.
 Grund, ground, bottom.
 Gude, good.

Gude-dame, grandmother.
 Gude-man, husband.
 Gude-sire, grandfather.
 Gude-sister, sister-in-law.
 Guestened, guested, been the guest of.
 Guffaw, gaffaw, loud burst of laughter.
 Guided, used; taken care of; treated.
 Guisards, gysarts, disguised persons; nummers, who volunteer vocal music for money about the time of Christmas and New Year's Day.
 Gully, large knife.
 Guse, goose.
 Gusing-iron, a laundress's smoothing-iron.
 Gutter-bloods, canaille.
 Gy, rope.
 Gyre-carling, hag; weird-sister; ogress.
 Gyte, crazy; ecstatic; senselessly extravagant; delirious.

H.

Ha', hall.
 Haaf, seal (Orkney).
 Hack, heck, rack in a stable.
 Hacket, v. Howkit.
 Had, hold.
 Hadden, holden.
 Haddows, haddies, haddock.
 Ha'e, have.
 Haet, thing.
 Haffits, half-heads; the sides of the head; the temples.
 Hafflin, (half-long,) half; half-long.
 Half, dwelling; custody.
 Halfed, domiciled.
 Hag, a year's cutting of oak.
 Hagg, brushwood.
 Hagg, pits and sloughs.
 Haggies, haggis, the pluck, &c. of a sheep, minced with suet, onions, &c. boiled in its stomach; dish consecrated by Burns as "Chieftain of the pudding race."
 Haill, hale, whole. "Hail o' my ain," all my own. "Hale and feer," whole and entire,

Hallan, partition between the door of a cottage and the fire-place.
 Hallanshaker, fellow who must take his place behind backs at the hal-lan; sturdy beggarly scamp.
 Hallions, rogues; worthless fellows.
 Halse, hause, throat, neck.
 Halse, hailsie, hail; salute; embrace.
 Haly, holy. "Haly be his cast," happy be his fate.
 Hame, home.
 Hamely, homely; familiar.
 Hamshackle, to tie the head of a horse or cow to one of its fore legs.
 Hand-waled, chosen; picked out with the hand.
 Hane, hain, spare; not give away.
 Hantle, great many; great deal.
 Hank, rope; coil.
 Hap, hop.
 Hap, cover; cover warmly.
 Happer, hopper of a mill.
 Happit, hopped, hopped; also covered for warmth or security.
 Hapshackle, (used in the south of Scotland for hamshackle,) to tie the forefeet of a horse together at the posteriors. Side langle is to tie the fore and hind foot of one side together.
 Harle, drag; trail along the ground.
 "Harle an old man's pow," scratch an old man's head.
 Harns, brains. "Harn-pan," brain pan.
 Harry, to plunder.
 Harrying, plundering.
 Harst, harvest.
 Hash, a clumsy sloven.
 Hassock, anything thick, bushy, and ill-arranged.
 Hassock, haslock, (from halse-lock,) throat lock or more bushy portion of the fleece of sheep, when they were in a more natural and less improved condition.
 Hasna, has not.
 Hat, "giving one a hat," taking off the hat in his presence.
 Hatted, or hattit-kit, a mixture of milk warm from the cow, and butter-milk.
 Hand, hold.

- Hauding, support, dependence.
Haulds, holds; places of resort.
Hause, throat, v. Halse.
Havered, talked foolishly, or without method.
Havers, haivers, idle talk.
Havrels, haivrels, half-witted persons.
Haveings, behaviour; manners.
Hawkit, white-faced, applied to cattle.
Heart-scald, heart-scaud, heart-burn; metaph. regret; remorse.
Heartsome, cheerful.
Heather, heath. "Heather cow," stalk of heath.
Heather-blutters, cock-snipes; from their cry in alternate flights and descents in the breeding season.
Heck and manger, rack and manger. "Living at hack and manger," applied to one who has got into quarters where everything is comfortable and plenteous.
Heckled, hackled.
Heeze, hoist; raise up.
Hellicat, half-witted.
Hempie, rogue; gallows apple; one for whom hemp grows. Its most common use is in a jocular way, to giddy young people of either sex.
Hen-cavey, hen-coop.
Hered, kept sheep.
Herds, keepers of cattle or sheep.
Herezeld, an acknowledgment of vassalage.
Hership, plunder.
Herse, hoarse.
Hesp, hank of yarn.
Het, hot.
Heugh, precipitous acclivity; also hollow dell.
Heugh-head, head of the cliff; also head of the glen, between two cliffs.
Hickery-pickery, is clown's Greek for hicra-picra.
Hie, go in haste.
Hinderlands, latter ends; backsides.
Hinderlans, back parts.
Hinny, honey. "My hinny," my darling.
Hirdie-girdie, topsy-turvy; in reckless confusion.
Hirple, walk lamely; halt.
Hirsel, move forward with a rustling noise along a rough surface; move sideways in a sitting or lying posture, upon the ground or otherwise, by means of the hands only.
Hissy, hussy.
Hoaste, v. Choast.
Hobbilshow, confused kick-up; uproar.
Hoddle, waddle.
Holm, flat ground along the side of a river. Used in the North for island.
Hoodie-craws, hooded crows.
Hool, huil, hull; covering; slough; pea or bean-hull.
Hooly and fairly, fair and softly.
Horse-cowper, horse-dealer.
Hotch, hitch.
Houts, touts.
Howe, hollow; also hoe.
Houff, chief place of resort.
Houkit, dug out.
Howm, v. Holm.
Hoying, hollowing to; setting on a dog.
Humdudgeon, needless noise; much ado about nothing.
Humle, humble, without horns.
Humlock-know, hemlock knoll.
Hurcheon, urchin; hedge-hog.
Houdie, midwife.
Hound, hunt; set a dog after anything; ferret out; in modern common parlance often contemptuously applied to individuals, such as "a sly hound," "a low hound," a selfish, greedy, rapacious, quirking fellow, who will alike employ fair or foul means for the attainment of his purpose.
Housewife'skep, hussieskep, housewifery.
Houtfie, hout awa! (interj.) psha! nonsense!
Hurdies, buttocks.
Hure, whore.
Hurley-hackets, small troughs or sledges, in which people used formerly to slide down an inclined plane on the side of a hill. Hurly-hackit is still a child's play.

Hurley-house, literally last house ;
as the house now stands, or as it was last built.
Huz, us.

J.

Jackman, a man that wears a short mail jack or jacket.
Jagg, prick, as a pin or thorn.
Jagger, pedlar.
Jaloose, v. Jealous.
Jaud, jadd, jade ; mare.
Jaug, pedlar's wallets.
Jaw, wave ; also petulant loquacity ;
coarse raillery.
Jaw-hole, sink.
Jawing, undulating ; rolling water ;
also loquacious talking.
Jealous, pronounced jaloose, sus- pect ; guess.
Jee, move.
Jeeding, judging.
Jeisticor, justicoat, juste au corps ;
waistcoat with sleeves.
Jimp, slim ; short.
Jimply, barely, scarcely, hardly.
Jink, a quick elusory turn.
Jinketing about, gadding about.
Jirbling, pouring out.
Ilk, ilka, each. "Of that ilk," of the same, as "Knockwinnock of that ilk," "Knockwinnock of Knockwinnock.
Ilka-days, every days ; week days.
Ill, bad ; difficult ; evil.
Ill-faard, evil-favoured ; ugly.
Ill-set, spiteful ; ill-natured.
Ill-sorted, ill-suited ; ill-managed.
Ingans, onions.
Ingle, fire. "Ingle side," fireside.
"Ingle nook," corner by the fire.
Ingeer, glean corn, &c.
In ower and out ower, positively and violently.
In-put, contribution.
Jocteleg, clasp-knife.
Joes, sweethearts.
Jougs, pillory.
Jowing, the swinging noise of a large bell.
Jowk, jouk, stoop down.
Jowkery-packery, sly juggling tricks.

I'se, I shall.
Justified, made the victim of jus- tice ; hanged.

K.

Kail, colewort ; colewort soup.
"Kail through the reek," a good rating ; a good scolding.
Kail-blade, colewort leaf.
Kail-worm, caterpillar.
Kail-yard, cabbage-garden.
Kaim, a Danish fortified station.
Kame, comb.
Kane, kain, cane, duty paid by a tenant to his landlord in eggs, fowls, &c.
Keb, to cast lamb.
Kebback, kebbock, kebbuck, a cheese.
Keb-ewe, an ewe that has lost her lamb.
Kebbie, cudgel ; club ; rough walk- ing stick.
Keek, peep.
Keeking-glass, looking-glass.
Keekit, peeped.
Keel, ruddle ; red chalk ; soft stone
for marking sheep.
Keelyvine (keelyvein), pen ; pen- cil of black or red lead.
Kelty, fine of a bumper. "Take kelties mends," not drink fair cup out in order, to be fined in a bumper.
Kemping, striving for victory as reapers on a harvest field, &c.
Kemple, forty wisps for windlings
(about 8 lbs. each) of straw.
Ken, know.
Kend, known.
Kennin', kenning, knowing ; also small portion ; a little.
Kenspeckle, gazing-stock.
Kent, cudgel ; rough walking stick.
Kerne, freebooter.
Kill-logie, kiln fire place.
Kilt, the philabeg or short petti- coat of a Highlander. "To kilt," to tuck up or truss up.
Kimmer, cummer, gossip ; idle gossiping girl.
Kind gallows. The gallows at Crieff was so called, probably because it was jocularly said

- that the Highlanders, when passing it, paid great respect to it, because it had assisted at the last moments of so many of their friends and relations, and was likely to do so for themselves.
- Kinrick, kingdom.
- Kintray, country.
- Kippage, violent passion; disorder; confusion.
- Kipper, salmon salted and smoke dried; also in the state of spawning.
- Kirk, church.
- Kirn, churn.
- Kirsten, kirschen, christen.
- Kirstening, christening.
- Kirtle, gown, mantle, or petticoat.
- Kist, chest; trunk; coffin.
- Kitchen, any thing eaten with bread, such as butter, cheese, &c., to give it a relish. "Hunger is gude kitchen," hunger is good sauce. "Bread to bread is nae kitchen," it forms no enjoyment where individuals only of one sex associate.
- Kitchen fee, drippings.
- Kith, acquaintance.
- Kittle, ticklish, in all its senses.
- Kittled, tickled.
- Kittled, breded, i. e. brought forth young; applied only to some domestic animals.
- Kiver, cover.
- Knacks, trifles for ornament; nicknacks.
- Knapping, (gnapping,) English, affecting to speak fine without knowing how.
- Knave-bairn, man-child.
- Knave, servant; miller's boy.
- Knaveship, mill-dues paid to the knaves or servants.
- Knavelled, navelled, beat violently with the fists.
- Knowe, knoll, rising ground; hillock.
- Krames, v. Cremes.
- Kyloes, Highland cattle.
- Kyte, (kit,) belly.
- Kythe, seem; appear; make to appear.
- Kylevene, v. Keelyvine.
- L.
- Laid, load.
- Laid till her, awarded to her by fate; laid to her charge.
- Laigh, low. "Laigh crofts," low-lying fields of inferior quality.
- Lair, lear, learning.
- Laird, lord of a manor; squire.
- Laith, loath.
- Laive, lave, the rest; what is left.
- Lamiter, lame person; cripple.
- Lamping, beating; also going quickly and with long strides.
- Lammer, lamer, laumer, amber.
- Lane, "his lane," himself alone. "By their lane," themselves alone.
- Land (in towns), a building including different tenements above one another, upon the same foundation, and under the same roof.
- Landlouper, runagate; one who runs his country.
- Lang, long.
- Langsyne, long since; long ago.
- Lap, leaped.
- Lapper, coagulate; curdle.
- Lassie, lassock, little girl.
- Lat, let. "Lat be," let alone.
- Latch, dub; mire.
- Lauch, law; custom; usage.
- Lave, rest.
- Lawing, lawin, tavern reckoning.
- Leal, loyal; true.
- Leagner lady, soldier's wife; campaigner; camp trotter.
- Led-farm, farm held along with another.
- Leddy, lady.
- Leech, physician.
- Leelane, leefu'lane, all alone; quite solitary.
- Leesome, pleasant. "Leesome lane," dear self alone.
- Leevin', leeving, living.
- Leg-bail, "to give leg bail," to run away.
- Leglin-girth, girth of a milk-pail.
- Leglins, milk-pails.
- Let-a-be, let alone.
- Let on, acknowledge; confess.
- Let that flee stick to the wa', let that alone.
- Lethering, tanning the hide; thrashing.

- Lengh, laughed.
 Leven, lightning.
 Lick-penny, a greedy covetous person.
 Lift, sky.
 Lift cattle, make a prey of cattle.
 "Lift-rents," collect rents.
 Lifters, cattle-dealers.
 Lightly, slight.
 Like-wake, lyke-wake, watching a corpse before interment.
 Lilt, carol; lively air.
 Limmer, a loose woman.
 Linking, walking quickly and lightly.
 Links, flat, sandy ground on the seashore.
 Lippen, rely upon; trust to.
 Lipping, making notches on the edge of a sword or knife.
 Lippit, notched.
 Lippy, fourth part of a peck.
 Lith, joint.
 Lithe, pliant; supple.
 Loan, lane; enclosed road.
 Loanin, loaning, green sward on which cows are milked.
 Loch, lake.
 Lock, small quantity; handful.
 Lo'e, love.
 Loof, luif, palm of the hand.
 "Outside of the loof," back of the hand.
 Lookit, looked.
 Loom, implement; vessel.
 Loon, loun, rogue; rustic boy; naughty woman. The word is of both genders.
 Loop, (Gael.) bend of a river.
 Loopy, crafty; deceitful.
 Loosome, lovely.
 Looten, permitted.
 Lound, calm; low and sheltered; still; tranquil.
 Lounder, severe stunning blow.
 Lounder, quieter.
 Loup, leap.
 Louping-ill, leaping evil; a disease among sheep.
 Louping-on-stane, horse-block; lit. the step-stone by which one gets to the saddle.
 Loup the dyke, leap the fence; break out of or into the enclosure; scamp.
 Low, flame.
 Loveable, loveable; praiseworthy.
 Luckie, goody; gammer; old grandam.
 Luckie dad, luckie daddie, grandfather.
- M.
- Ma, mamma.
 Mae, ma, moe, more.
 Magg, steal.
 Magg, maggs, halfpenny; perquisite in pence to servants, &c.
 Magnum, magnum bonum, double-sized bottle, holding two English quarts.
 Mail, payable rent.
 Mailing, farm.
 Mail-payer, rent-payer.
 Mailed (with the bluid), mixed.
 Maining, bemoaning.
 Mains, demesne.
 Mair, more.
 Maist, most; almost.
 Maisterfu', imperious; violent.
 Maistery, power.
 Majoring, looking and talking big.
 Malison, curse.
 Maltalent, evil purpose; evil inclination.
 Mammie, infantine of mamma.
 Mammocks, gobbets.
 Mane, moan.
 Manna, must not.
 Manse, parsonage house.
 Mansworn, perjured.
 Manty, mantua silk; mantle.
 Marches, landmarks, boundaries.
 Marle, marvel.
 Marrow, match; mate; one of a pair.
 Mart, the fatted cow, or whatever animal is slaughtered at Martinmas for winter provision.
 Mashlum, mixed grain.
 Mask, mash; infuse.
 Masking-fat, mash-tub.
 Maukin, hare.
 Mauu, must.
 Maundering, palavering; talking idly.
 Maunna, must not.
 Maw, mow, (with the scythe).
 Mawking, maulkin, hare.

- Mawn, mowed.
Maybe, it maybe ; perhaps.
Mayhap, it may happen.
Mazed, amazed.
Mear, mare.
Meg dorts, saucy Meg ; saucy wench.
Meikle, much ; great ; large ; big ; preëminent.
Melder, as much meal as is ground at one time.
Mells, middles ; mizes ; interposes.
Meltith, a meal.
Meiths, mæths, eggs of the fly-blow upon meat.
Meiths, marks, landmarks.
Mends, amends.
Mense, manners ; moderation.
Mensefu', mannerly ; modest.
Mess, mass.
Messan, a little dog.
Mickle, v. Meikle.
Midden, dunghill.
Midges, gnats.
Mightna, might not.
Mim, prim, precise.
Minc'd collops, minced beef.
Minnie, mammie, infantine word for mamma.
Mint, aim ; attempt ; endeavour.
Mirk, dark. Pit mirk (pick mirk), dark as pitch.
Mirligoes, dizziness ; megrims in the head.
Misca'd, miscalled ; abused and called names.
Mischieve, do a mischief to.
Misguggled, mangled and disfigured ; rumbled and disordered.
Mislear'd, ill-taught ; ill-bred.
Misllippen, neglect ; also suspect and disappoint.
Misset, put out of sorts.
Mister, need. "Mister wight," child of necessity ; doubtful character.
Mistryst, disappoint by breaking an engagement ; deceive ; use ill.
Mither, mother.
Mittans, worsted gloves worn by the lower orders.
Mizzles, measles.
Mools, v. Mouls.
Moor-ill, a disease among cattle.
Mony, many.
Morn, "the morn," to-morrow.
Mornin', morning, morning dram, or draught.
Morts, the skins of lambs that die of themselves.
Moss-hags, pits and sloughs in a mire or bog.
Mouidiwarp, mouidiwart, mould-warp, mole.
Mouls, mools, earth ; the grave.
Mousted, (muisted) head, cropp'd head of hair.
Muckle, v. Meikle.
Mugs, the large Teeswater sheep.
Muhme, (Gael.) nurse.
Muils, moulds ; cloth or list shoes for gout.
Muir, moor.
Muir-pouts, (poots,) young grouse.
Munt, mount.
Murgeons, grimaces ; wry mouths.
Mutch, woman's linen or muslin cap.
Mutchkin, English pint.
Mysell, ma'sell, myself.

N.

- Na, nae, no.
Nalg, nag.
Nairt, own.
Nainsell, oumself.
Napery, table-linen.
Nane, none.
Nar, near.
Nashgab, impertinent chatter.
Natheless, nevertheless.
Near, close ; narrow ; niggardly.
Near-hand, near-at-hand ; nearly ; almost.
Neb-bill, nose ; point of anything.
Neebor, neighbour.
Needna, need not.
Ne'er-be-lickit, nothing which could be licked up, by dog or cat ; absolutely nothing.
Ne'er-do-weels, escapes graces, never to thrive.
Neeve, the closed hand ; fist.
Neevie-neevie-nec-nack, the first line to the remaining three, viz :
"Which hand will you tak ?
Tak the right, tak the wrang,
I'll beguile you if I can."

- A lottery rhyme used among boys while whirling the two closed fists round each other, one containing the prize, the other empty.*
- Neist, nighest; next.
 Neuk, nook; corner.
 Nevelled, v. Knevelled.
 Nevoy, nephew.
 New-fangled, new-fashioned; engrossed with some novelty.
 Nicher, nicker, neigh.
 Nick-nackets, trinkets; gimcracks.
 Nick-sticks, notched sticks; tal-lies.
 Nieve, v. Neeve.
 Nievfu', handful.
 Niffer, exchange.
 Niffy-naffy, fastidious; conceited and finical.
 Night-cowl, nightcap.
 Noited, knoited, rapped; struck forcibly against; as, "Noited their heads," knocked heads together.
 Nor, than.
 Norland, northland; belonging to the north country.
 Nourice, nurse.
 Nout, nolt, nolt, black cattle.
 Nudge, jog with the elbow, as a hint of caution.
- O.
- Od! odd! a minced oath, omitting one letter.
 Odd-come-shortly, chance time not far off; escape.
 Oe, oy, oye, grandchild.
 Off-come, come off; escape.
 Ohon! ohonari! (interj.) alas! woe is me!
 Onding, fall of rain or snow.
 Onfall, falling on; attack.
 Onslaught, inroad; hostile incursion; attack.
 Onstead, farm-stead; the buildings on a farm.
 Ony, any.
 Open steek, open stitch.
 Or, ere; before.
 Ordinar, ordinary; common; usual.
 Orra, odd; not matched; that may be spared; unemployed.
 Ostler-wife, woman that kept an hostelry.
 Out bye, without; a little way out.
 Outshot, projecting part of an old building.
 Out take, except.
 Ower, over.
 Ower bye, over the way.
 Owerlay, o'erlay, overlay, cravat; covering.
 Owerloup, get over the fence; trespass on another's property.
 "Start and owerloup," a law phrase relating to marches. See Marches.
 Ower'ta'en, overtaken.
 Owsen, ozen.
 Oye, grandson. See Oe.
- P.
- Pa, papa.
 Pace, Pasch, Easter.
 Paidle, pettle; staff; plough-staff; also hoe.
 Paidle, tramp; as clothes in a tub; also short and irregular steps, such as of children.
 Paik, beat.
 Paiks, blows; a beating.
 Palmering, walking infirmly.
 Panged, crammed; stuffed.
 Pantler, keeper of the pantry.
 Paraffle, ostentatious display.
 Parochine, parish.
 Parritch, porridge; hasty-pudding.
 Parritch-time, breakfast-time.
 Partan, crab-fish.
 Passemented, guarded with lace, fringe, &c.
 Pat, pot.
 Pat, put.
 Patrick, paetrick, partrick, per-trick, partridge.
 Pattle, plough-staff.
 Paughty, haughty.
 Pauk, wile.
 Pawky, wily; sly; drolly, but not mischievously.
 Pearlins, pearlings; lace.
 Pease-bogle, scarecrow.
 Peaseweep, peesweep, peesweet, lapwing.
 Peat, pet; favourite.

- Peat-hagg, sloughs in places from whence peat has been dug.
- Peeking. See Peghing.
- Pedder, pedlar; hawker.
- Peoble, pebble.
- Peel, a place of strength, or fortification, in general. In particular, it signifies a strong-hold, the defences of which are of earth mixed with timber, strengthened with palisades.
- Peel, Peel-house, in the Border counties, is a small square tower, built of stone and lime.
- Peengin, whining.
- Peer, poor; also a pear.
- Peerie, boy's spinning-top, set in motion by the pull of a string, in place of being whipped.
- Peerie, curious; suspicious.
- Peers, pears.
- Peghing, peching, puffing and panting; breathing hard.
- Peghts, the Picts.
- Pellack, pellock, porpoise; in old Scotch, a bullet.
- Peltrie, furrier's wares.
- Pen-gun, pop-gun; from boys' play crackers formed of quill barrels.
- Penny-stane, stone-quoit.
- Pensy, proud and conceited.
- Pettle, indulge; treat as a pet.
- Phraising, palvering; making long or fine speeches.
- Pick, pick-axe; also pitch.
- Pick-mirk, dark as pitch.
- Pickle, grain of corn; small quantity of anything. "Pickle in our ain pockneuk," supply ourselves from our own means.
- Pick-maw, a small sea-gull.
- Pictarnie, the great tern.
- Pig, earthen pot, vessel, or pitcher.
- Pigs, piggs, crockery-ware.
- Pike, pick.
- Pilniewinks, instruments for torturing the fingers. See Pinny-winkles.
- Pinchers, iron crows.
- Pinging, uttering feeble, frequent, and somewhat peevish complaints. A sickly spoiled child is called a pinging thing.
- Pingled, pained; put to difficulty.
- Pinner, a cap with lappets, formerly worn by women of rank.
- Pinnywinkles, a board with holes, into which the fingers are thrust, and pressed upon with pegs, as a species of torture.
- Pint, two English quarts.
- Pioted, pyebald.
- Pipestaple, tobacco stopper; also broken tubes of clay tobacco-pipes.
- Pirn, bobbin; the bobbin of a spinning-wheel; the reed or quill bobbin in a weaver's shuttle.
- Pit, put.
- Pith, strength.
- Pithless, wanting strength.
- Plack, a copper coin, equal to the third part of an English penny.
- Plainstanes, the pavement.
- Plenishing, furniture.
- Plough, plough.
- Plough-pettle, plough-staff.
- Plies, folds.
- Pliskies, mischievous tricks.
- Plot, scald.
- Plottie, mulled wine.
- Ploy, employment; harmless frolic; merry meeting.
- Pluff, puff; hairdresser's powder puff.
- Pock, poke, pouch; bag.
- Pockmanty, portmanteau.
- Poind, distrain.
- Polonie, Polonian, a greatcoat; a Polish surtout.
- Poin', pulling.
- Poor-man of mutton, cold meat; cold mutton broiled.
- Poorfu', powerful.
- Poortith, poverty.
- Pootry, poultry, poultury.
- Poots, pouts, poultis; young grouse, &c.
- Poppling, bubbling; purting; rippling.
- Pose, deposit; hoard of money.
- Potatoe-bogle, scarecrow.
- Pottercarrier, pottinger, apothecary.
- Pouch, pocket.
- Pouss, pouse, poos, push; slight, quick pull, or sportive snatch.
- Pouther, powder.
- Pouthered, powdered; corned, slightly salted.

- Pouting, shooting at the young pouls of partridges.
- Pow, poll; head; also pool.
- Powney, pony.
- Powsowdie, sheep's head broth;
milk and meal boiled together;
any mixture of incongruous sorts of food.
- Powtering, pockering, poltering, groping among the ashes; or pookering incessantly in the fire;
rummaging in the dark.
- Pratty, pretty.
- Precesely, precisely.
- Print, print.
- Prick, spur.
- Prick-my-dainty, affected and fincal.
- Prie, taste; prove by tasting.
- Prigged, entreated earnestly; pleaded hard; higgled for a bargain.
- Propale, publish; disclose.
- Propine, a present; gift.
- Public, public-house; inn.
- Puddings, guts; sausages.
- Puir, poor.
- Pupit, pulpit.
- Pun, pund, pound.
- Put on, clothed.
- Putted a stane, pitched a stone.
Putting the stone, is a very old Scottish and northern gymnastic exercise.
- Pyat, magpie.
- Pyket, picked.

Q.

- Quaich, small drinking cup.
- Quarters, lodgings.
- Quean, young woman. The term, like the English wench, is sometimes used jocularly, though oftener disrespectfully.
- Queans, wenches.
- Queery-madam, cuise-madame; a pear so called.
- Queish, quegh, v. Quaich.
- Quern, handmill.
- Quey, heifer; young cow.

R.

- Rade, rode.
- Raes, roes.

- Raff, person of worthless character;
v. Scowff.
- Raip, rape; rope.
- Rair, raired, outcry; from roar.
- Raise, rose; arose.
- Rampallions, rude romps.
- Rampauging, raging and storming;
prancing about with fury.
- Ram-stam, forward; thoughtless;
rash.
- Randy, riotous; disorderly.
- Raploch, coarse undyed woollen cloth.
- Rapparees, worthless runagates.
- Rapsallions, rascals.
- Rase, rose.
- Rath, ready; quick; early.
- Ratten, rottin, rotten, rat.
- Raunletree, randletree, rantletree, the beam from which the crook is suspended, where there is no grate;
also a tree chosen with two branches, which are cut short, and left somewhat in the form of the letter Y, set close to or built into the gable of a cottage, to support one end of the roof-tree.
- Rave, tore.
- Ravelled, entangled; confused.
- Rax, stretch.
- Raxing, reaching; stretching.
- Reaving, open violent thieving.
- Red, to interfere and separate, as in two people fighting; to disentangle; clear, and put in order.
- Red, redd, rede, advice; advise.
- Redder's-lick v. Redding-straik.
- Redding, unravelling; putting to rights.
- Redding-came, large-toothed comb.
- Redding-straik, a stroke received in attempting to separate combatants in a fray; a blow in return for officious interference.
- Redd up, put in order.
- Rede, advise.
- Redshank, Highlander with buskins of red-deer skin, with the hair outwards; applied also as a nickname to a Highlander, in derision of his bare limbs.
- Red-wud, stark mad.
- Reek, smoke.
- Reek, reik, rink, course; exploit;
adventure; frolic.

- Reekie, smoky.
 Reeving, reiving, reaving, robbing.
 Reird, v. Rair.
 Reise, ryse, twig.
 Reises, cut brushwood; shrubs.
 Reist, stop obstinately; stick fast in the middle.
 Reisted, stopped; stuck fast.
 Reisted, roasted; smoke dried.
 Reisting, restive; having the habit of stopping, as a horse.
 Rickle, heap of stones, or peats, &c.
 Riding-days, days of hostile incursions on horseback.
 Rief, robbery.
 Rievers, robbers.
 Rieving. See Reeving.
 Riff-raff, rabble.
 Rig, ridge of land; course; path.
 Rigg, wild adventure; dissipated frolic.
 Rigging, back; ridge; roof.
 Rigging-tree, roof-tree.
 Rin, run.
 Rintherout, run out of doors; gad about; vagabond.
 Ripe, search.
 Ritt, rip; tear; cut; applied almost only to the surface of the ground.
 Rive, rift; split; rend; tear.
 Rivin, rent; torn.
 Rizzer'd, half-salted and half-dried fish.
 Rock, distaff.
 Rokelay, short cloak.
 Roopit, hoarse.
 Rose, ruse, extol; praise.
 Rotten, rat.
 Roughies, withered boughs; a sort of rude torch; also dried heath.
 Round, roun, whisper.
 Roup, auktion.
 Rouping, auktioning.
 Roupit, rouped, sold by auktion.
 Rouping wife, saleswoman, who attends roupes.
 Roused, rusted.
 Routh, plenty.
 Routing, roaring; bellowing; snoring.
 Roving, raving; delirious.
 Row, roll.
 Rowan-tree, mountain-ash.
 Rowed, rolled.
 Rowt, roar like a bull.
 Rubbit, robbed.
 Rudas, rowds, haggard old woman.
 Rug, pull; dog-cheap bargain.
 Rugging, pulling roughly.
 Rullions, shoes made of untanned leather.
 Rund, rand, selvage of broad cloth; list.
 Rung, a rough undressed staff.
 Runt, an old cow; also the stalk of colewort or cabbage.

S.

- Sa, sae, so.
 Sack and fork, (Lat.) fosa et furca, i. e., drowning and hanging.
 Sack doudling, bagpiping.
 Sackless, salkless, sakeless, innocent.
 Sain, bless against evil influence; literally sign with the sign of the cross.
 Sair, sore; very much.
 Salvage, savage.
 Sandy laverock, sand-lark, sanderling.
 Sap, sop.
 Sapeless, v. Sackless.
 Sark, shirt.
 Saugh, sallow, broad-leaved willow.
 Saul, soul; mettle.
 Saulie, a hired mourner.
 Saultfat, pickling-tub; beef-stand.
 Saut, salt.
 Sautfit, salt-dish.
 Saw, sow seed.
 Sawing, sowing.
 Scaff-raff, riff-raff; rabble.
 Scaith, harm; damage.
 Scaithless, unharmd; uninjured.
 Scald, scald, scold.
 Scart, cornorant.
 Scart, scratch.
 Scat, tribute; tax; answering to the Latin vectigal.
 Scathless, free from harm.
 Scauding, scalding.
 Scauff and raff, rough plenty, without selection; fun and frolic in plenty.
 Scaur, scare; frighten.
 Scaur, precipitous bank of earth overhanging a river.

- Schelm, rogue.
 Sclated, stated.
 Scomfishing, suffocating by bad air.
 Scones, small cakes.
 Scotch collops, scotched collops; beefsteaks, scotched, and broiled in the frying-pan.
 Scouping, skelping, moving hastily; running; scampering.
 Scour, put forward.
 Scouter, scorch.
 Scraughing, scraighing, screaming hoarsely.
 Screed, a long stripe of cloth hastily torn off; a long tirade upon any subject, hastily brought out; a rash frolic.
 Screeded, torn.
 Screigh o' morning, the first dawn.
 Scud, a heavy shower.
 Scudlar, scullion.
 Scull, shallow fish-basket.
 Sculduddery, relating to what is unchaste.
 Scunner, disgust.
 Sealgh, selch, seal; sea-calf.
 Sea-maw, sea-mew; sea-gull.
 Seannachie, Highland antiquary.
 Seer, sure.
 Seiled, strained through a cloth, or sieve.
 Seiped, oozed; seiping, oozing.
 Sell, self; "the sell o' it," itself.
 Semple, of low birth, opposed to gentle.
 Ser'ing, sairing, serving; as much as serves the turn; enough.
 Set, fit; become; suit.
 Sey, "back-sey," sirloin.
 Shabble, cutlass.
 Shand, a cant term for base coin.
 Shanks, legs; "shank yourself awa'," take to your legs; be off.
 Sharn, thin cow-dung.
 Shathmont, six inches in length.
 Shaughling, shambling; "shauchling shoon," shoes trodden down on one side by bad walking.
 Shave, sheeve, slice of bread, cheese, &c.
 Shaw, shov.
 Shaws, woods; also leaves of potatoes, turnips, &c.
 Shear, cut; divide.
 Shearing, sheering, reaping.
 Shealing, temporary summer milk-house.
 Sheeling-hill (near a mill), rising ground, where the shelled oats are winnowed.
 Sheenest, clearest.
 Shellum, skellum, rogue.
 Sheltie, pony.
 Shiel, shell; take out of the husk.
 Shilpet, weak, washy, and insipid.
 Shogging, shaking; jogging.
 Shool, shovel.
 Shoon, shoes.
 Shored, threatened.
 Shouldna, sudna, should not.
 Shot-window, a small window, chiefly filled with a board that opens and shuts.
 Shouther, shoulder; "show the cauld shouther," appear cold and reserved.
 Shreigh, shriek.
 Shule, v. shool.
 Shute, push; also shoot.
 Sibb, related to by blood.
 Sic, siccan, such.
 Sic like, just so.
 Siccar, secure, safe.
 Side, long; said of garments.
 Siller, silver; money.
 Sillock (fish), podley; gadus carbonarius.
 Silly, in a weakly state of health, whether of body or mind.
 Sindry, sundry.
 Sith, since.
 Skaith, v. Scaith.
 Skarts, scratches.
 Skeely, skeily, skeelfu', skilful; cunning.
 Skeens, knives; "skeen dubh," black knife; the Highlander's dernier resort.
 Skellies, squints.
 Skelloch, shrill cry; squall.
 Skelping, moving rapidly; also slapping with the palm of the hand.
 Skeps, bee hives.
 Sketchers, skates.
 Skinker, pourer out of liquor.
 Skink, pour out; also soup made of the skink or hough of beef.
 Skirl, shrill cry.
 Skirl in the pan, sop in the pan.

- Skirling, screaming.
 Skitt, banter; jeer.
 Skivie, out of the proper direction; deranged.
 Skreigh, screech; loud shrill cry; "skreigh o' day," peep of day.
 Skrimp, stint, as to measure or quantity.
 Skulduddery, sculduddery, fornication.
 Skyte, contemptible fellow.
 Slack, an opening between two hills; hollow where no water runs.
 Slade, slid; slipped along.
 Slaistering, doing any thing in an awkward and untidy way; especially applied to dabbling in any thing moist or unctuous.
 Slaisters, dirty slops.
 Slake, smear; spotch of that with which any thing is bedaubed.
 Slap, breach in a fence.
 Sleeveless-gate, sleeveless-errand, an idle errand; hunting the cuckoo.
 Sliddery, slippery.
 Slighted (as a fortress), dismantled.
 Slink, little worth; not to be depended upon as good.
 Slink, veal of a calf killed immediately after calved.
 Sloan, sloven.
 Slockened, slaked.
 Slogan, war-cry; or gathering word.
 Slot-hounds, sleuth-hounds, blood-hounds, who follow the slot, or scent.
 Slue, slip softly and quietly.
 Sma', small.
 Smaik, a silly fellow; a puny fellow; paltry rogue.
 Smeeked, smoked.
 Smoor, smother.
 Snag, snaggy, "aik snag," knarry stump of an oak, a tree having the branches roughly cut off.
 Snapper, stumble.
 Snaps, gingerbread nuts.
 Snaw, snow.
 Sneck, latch; "sneck drawer," latch lifter; bolt-drawer; sly fellow.
 Snecket, notched.
 Sneeshing, snuff.
 Snell, sharp; cold; severe.
 Sniggering, tittering sneeringly.
 Snod, neat.
 Snood, a young woman's maiden fillet, for tying round her head.
 Snotter, the proboscis of a turkey-cock. "To snotter and snivel," to blubber and snuffle. To snotter is also to go loiteringly.
 Somedeale, somewhat.
 Somegate, somehow; somewhere.
 Somers, sojourners; sturdy beggars; obtrusive guests, who pleaded privilege, and were not easily got rid of, at least in the Highlands, where the Acts of Parliament against them were not enforced.
 Sorning, spunging, and playing the unwelcome guest.
 Sort, to assort; arrange; fit; accommodate and manage.
 Sough, the noise of wind; the breathing of a person in deep sleep; the chant, or recitative, peculiar to the old Presbyterians in Scotland, and to certain extra-religious castes everywhere; also a rumour.
 Soup, spoonful, or mouthful of soup, or other liquid, or spoon-meat.
 Souple, the striking part of a flail.
 Souple, supple; active; also subtle.
 Souther, sowder, soldier.
 Southron, south-countryman; Englishman.
 Soutor, souter, shoemaker.
 Sowens, flummery; blancmange, made of the oatmeal which remains in the bran after bolting, converted into a sub-acid starch.
 Spae, foretell.
 Spae-wife, prophetess.
 Spang, spring.
 Spanged, sprung.
 Sparry-grass, asparagus.
 Spauld, shoulder.
 Speck and span new, quite new.
 Speel, climb.
 Speer, ask.
 Speerings, askings; answers to questions asked; information.
 Spence, dispensary; parlour.
 Spick and span, matter and form.

- Spleuchan, tobacco-pouch.
 Splores, frocks; riots.
 Sporran (Gael.), purse.
 Sprack, spruce; sprightly.
 Sprackle, scramble; get on with difficulty.
 Spreagh, prey; literally, cattle.
 Spreagherie, cattle-lifting; prey-driving; also small spoil; paltry booty of small articles.
 Sprees, sprays, short irregularities, and convivial indulgences.
 Springs, merry tunes, to which people spring and dance.
 Sprug, sparrow.
 Sprush, spruce.
 Spulzie, spoil.
 Spule-bane, blade-bone.
 Spune, spoon.
 Spunk, a match; a taper; a spark of fire; a small fire.
 Spunkie, will-o'-wisp; jack with the lantern; ignis fatuus.
 Spur-whang, spur leather.
 Staff, stave.
 Staig, an unbroke-in young horse.
 Staik, steak.
 Stalwart, stalwarth, steelworthy; stout and courageous.
 Stomach, stomach.
 Stance, standing-place.
 Stanchels, stanchions, iron bars for securing windows.
 Stane, staine, stone.
 Stang, sting; also a long pole.
 Stark staring mad, evidently quite mad.
 Stark, strong; rigid; stiff.
 Staw, put to a stand; surfeit.
 Steek, stitch; also shut.
 Steer, stir; molest.
 Steer'd, stirred; meddled with.
 Steery, bustle; stir; quandary.
 Steeve, stiff; strong; durable.
 Steevly, stievely, firmly.
 Stell, place of covert; shelter.
 Stend, make long steps.
 Sterns, starns, stars.
 Stibbler, clerical probationer; applied in ridicule.
 Sticked, stickit, stuck; stabbed; also bungled and spoiled in the making.
 Sticket minister, a clerical student or probationer, become unqualified for the ministerial office from imbecility, or immoral conduct.
 Stievely, stiffly; firmly.
 Sting and ling, vi et armis.
 Stir, sir.
 Stirk, a young steer or heifer between one and two years old.
 Stoiting, staggering.
 Stoop and roop, stump and rump; altogether.
 Stot, a bullock between two and three years old.
 Stour, dust; skirmish; battle.
 Stour, stoor, large and strong; stern.
 Stoor-looking, gruff-looking.
 Stouth and routh, plenty.
 Stouthrief, robbery.
 Stow, cut off; lop.
 Stowings, sprouts of colewort gathered in spring.
 Strae, straw.
 Strae-death, death upon the bed-straw; natural death.
 Straik, stroke.
 Straike, a strike; a bushel.
 Strath, a valley through which a river runs.
 Straughted, stretched; made straight.
 Streak, streek, striek, stretch; lay out a corpse.
 Stress, hard pressure; hard straining.
 Sturdied sheep, a sheep that has the sturdy, or giddiness, from water in the head.
 Suckin, mill-dues.
 Suddenty, sudden.
 Suld, should.
 Sumph, soft muddy-headed fellow.
 Sune, soon.
 Sune or syne, sooner or later.
 Sunkets, provision of any sort.
 Sunkie, low stool.
 Sarquedy (IVANHOE), presumption; insolence.
 Sute, soot.
 Swankie, supple active young fellow.
 Swanking, supple; active.
 Swap, exchange.
 Swart-back, great black-and-white gull.
 Swarfit, swarveit, swooned.
 Swarved, swerved.

- Swattered, squattered, spluttered; flounced; moved rapidly in the water.
- Sweal, to run; said of a candle.
- Swear, swear, lazy; reluctant.
- Sweepit, swept.
- Swire, neck; also declination in a hill; hollow between two hills.
- Swirls, whirls; circular motions.
- Swith, quickly.
- Swither, doubt; hesitation.
- Swuir, swore.
- Sybo, an onion that does not form a bulb at the root.
- Syke, sike, small rill, commonly running out of a quagmire; small rill without sand or gravel.
- Syn, syne, sin, since; then; after that; in that case.
- Synd, rinse; syndings, rinsings.
- Syver, gutter; "causeyed syver," stone-paved gutter.
- T.
- Tae, toe.
- Tae, the ae, the one; tae half, the one half.
- Taed, taid, toad.
- Taen, taken.
- Taillie, deed of entail.
- Tait, lock of wool, &c.
- Tale, "wi' their tale," according to their own story; as they pretend.
- Talent, purpose; inclination.
- Tammie-norie (bird), the auk, or puffin.
- Tangle, the stem of the larger fucus digitalis, a species of sea-weed. The term is also applied contemptuously to any long dangling person or thing.
- Tangs, tongs.
- Tap of tow, the quantity of tow, or hards, that is made up in a conical figure, to be put upon the distaff.
- Tape, to tape, to make a little go a great way; to use sparingly.
- Tappit hen, (in drinking), a tin pot with a knob on the top, containing a quart of ale.
- Tarr'd, marked with tar, as sheep; "a' tarr'd wi' the same stick," one as bad as the other.
- Tasker, a labourer who does task-work.
- Tasse, cup.
- Tassel, tussell.
- Tatty, matted.
- Tauld, told.
- Taupie, a slow foolish slut.
- Tawse, the leather strap used for chastisement in Scotland.
- Tee'd ball, (at golf), a ball raised on a knob of earth.
- Teind. See Tiend.
- Tender, delicate, as to health; weakly; ailing.
- Tent, attention; caution; care.
- Teugh, teuch, tough.
- Thack, thatch.
- Thae, these.
- Thack, thatch. "Under thack and rape," under thatch and rope; commonly used in allusion to the stacks in the barn-yard, after they are thatched-in for the winter; so that "under thack and rape" means snug and comfortable.
- Thairm, small gut; catgut; fiddle-string.
- That,—"no that far off," not very far off.
- Theeking, thatching; thatch.
- Theow and esne (IVANHOE), thrall and bondsmen.
- Thiggers, mannerly beggars, that ask a benevolence, not an alms.
- Thigging, going round collecting benevolences; genteel begging.
- Thegither, together.
- Thereout, out of doors.
- Thick, inmate.
- Thirlage, thralldom; astraction to a mill.
- Tholed, suffered.
- Thought, a very little; somewhat.
- Thowless, sluggish; inactive.
- Thrang, throng; busy.
- Thrapple, thropple, throat.
- Thraw, twist; writhe. "Heads and thraws," lying side by side, the feet of the one by the head of the other.
- Thoom, thumb.
- Thrawart, cross-grained; ill-tempered.
- Thrawing, twisting; thwarting.

- Thrawn, twisted; perverse; ill-tempered, crabbed.
 Threave, twenty-four sheaves, or two stocks of grain.
 Threep, threap, accusation; pertinacious affirmation; threat.
 "An auld threep," a superstition obstinately persisted in of old.
 Threepit, persisted in averring.
 Thresh, a rush.
 Through-stane, grave-stone.
 Thrum o'er, tell over in a tiresome manner.
 Thumbiekins, thumb-screws for torture.
 Tiends, tithes.
 Tig, twitch.
 Till, to.
 Tillie-wallie, fiddle-faddle.
 Time about, alternately.
 Tine, lose.
 Tinklers, tinkers.
 Tint, lost.
 Tippences, two-penny pieces.
 Tippy, ale at two-pence a quart.
 Tirlie-whirlie holes, intricate holes.
 Tirling, digging up; uncovering.
 "Tirling at the door-pin," twirling the handle of the latch.
 Tirrieves, tantrums.
 Tittie, the infantine and endearing manner of pronouncing sister.
 Tocher, marriage portion.
 Tocherless, portionless.
 Tod, fox.
 Toddling, waddling as children do.
 Took of drum, tuck of drum.
 Toom, empty.
 Toon. See Town.
 Toot (tout) of a horn, blast of a horn.
 Torsk, tusk, a short thick codfish so called.
 Tou, thou.
 Toustie, testy.
 Tout, pout; pet; huff; also sound of a horn.
 Toutie, haughty.
 Touzled out, ransacked.
 Touzled, in disorder; such as the hair uncombed; rumbled.
 Tow, hards; also a rope.
 Town, any inhabited place; a single steading.
 Toy-mutch, close linen cap, without lace, frill or border, and with flaps covering the neck and part of the shoulders.
 Trailed, dragged.
 Traiking, lounging; dangling.
 Tramped, stamped; trod.
 Trampler, scamp; run-a-gate.
 Trashed, deteriorated through bad usage.
 Treen, made of tree; wooden.
 Trig, neat.
 Trindling, trundling.
 Trocking, trucking; bartering; having intercourse.
 Troggs, troth.
 Trocosie, a warm covering for the head, neck, and breast, when travelling in bad weather.
 Trow, trew, believe; think; guess.
 Trump, Jew's harp.
 Traycle, treacle.
 Tryst, appointment; rendezvous.
 Trysted with, met with.
 Tuilzie, toolzie, tusyle, scuffle.
 Tup, ram.
 Turbinacious, of, or belonging to, peat, or rather turf.
 Turnpike stair, winding staircase.
 Twa, twae, two.
 Twall, twelve.
 Twalpennies, one penny sterling.
 Twopenny, beer which cost two-pence a Scottish quart.
 Tyke, dog, of the larger kind.
 Tyne, lose; tint, lost.
 Tynes, antlers of a stag; teeth of a harrow.

U.

- Udal, alloclial.
 Udaller, one who holds his lands by alloclial tenure.
 Ugsome, disgusting.
 Ulzie, oil.
 Umquhile, whilom; ci-devant; late.
 Unbrizzed, unbroken.
 Uncanny, dangerous; supposed to possess supernatural powers.
 Unce, ounce.
 Unchancy, unlucky; dangerous.
 Unco, uncouth; strange; unknown; it is also used intensively, as "Unco little," very little.

Unfreens, unfriends; enemies.
 Unhalsed, unsaluted.
 Unkenn'd, unknown.
 Untenty, incautious; careless.
 Until, unto; till.
 Up-bye, a little way farther on; up the way.
 Upcast, reproach.
 Upgoing, ascend.
 Uphaud, uphold; maintain.
 Uphauden, supported; laid under obligation.
 Upsetting, conceited; assuming.
 Upsides with, even with, quit with.
 Up-tak, conception; applied to the understanding.

V.

Vaes, or voes, in Orkney and Shetland, inlets of the sea.
 Vaik, become vacant.
 Vassail, vessels.
 Vassail-buir, cup-board.
 Visnomy, visage.
 Vivers, food; eatables.

W.

Wa', wall.
 Waal, well.
 Wabster, webster; weaver.
 Wad, wager; pledge; hostage.
 Wad, would.
 Wadna, would not.
 Wae, woe.
 Waesome, woful.
 Waff, blast.
 Waif, strayed; vagabond.
 Waising, weissing, directing.
 Wakerife, vigilant.
 Wale, choice; choose.
 Wallie, vale.
 Walise, saddle-bags; portman-teau.
 Wallowing, welting.
 Wallydraigle, the youngest bird in a nest, and hence used for any feeble ill-grown creature.
 Walth, plenty.
 Wame, womb; belly.
 Wamefu', bellyful.
 Wampishes, tosses frantically.

Wan, got; won. "Wan o'er," got over.
 Wanchancy, unlucky.
 Wanion, vengeance; the devil.
 Wan-thriven, stunted; decayed; whose thriving is retrograde.
 Ware, expend; lay out.
 Wanle, active; strong; healthy.
 Wark, work.
 Wark looms, tools.
 Warlock, wizard.
 Ward, world.
 Warse, worse.
 Warstle, wirstle, wrastle, wrestle.
 Wasna, was not.
 Wastell cake, wassail cake; an oaten loaf baked in the oven, with carraway seeds, &c., in it.
 Wastrife, wastry, waste; imprudent expense.
 Wat, wet.
 Wat, weet, know.
 Water-broo, water gruel.
 Water-purple, water speedwell; brook lime.
 Wather, weather.
 Wauch, waff, wauff, nauseous; bad; shabby.
 Wauff, wave; flap.
 Waught, hearty draught of liquor.
 Waur, worse; also put to the worse; get the better of.
 Waured, worsted; vanquished.
 Wawl, roll the eyes, and look wildly.
 Waws, wells, and swelchies, waves, whirlpools, and gulfs.
 Wean, wee ane, little one; child.
 Wear, last; endure.
 Wear, weir, war.
 "Wear the jacket." This phrase alludes to a custom now, we believe, obsolete, by which, on paying a certain fee, or otherwise making interest with the huntsmen of the Caledonian Hunt, any citizen aspirant, whose rank did not entitle him to become a member of that more highly-born society, might become entitled to the field privileges of the Hunt, and among others, was tolerated to wear the jacket of the order.
 Wearifu', painful; distressing.

- Weasand, wind-pipe.
 Weather-gaws, signs of an approaching storm.
 Wee, small.
 Weel, well; weal.
 Weel, weil, well; prosperity; advantage.
 Weft, waft, woof.
 Weigh bawks, the beam of a balance for weighing.
 Weight, a sieve without holes, for winnowing corn.
 Weel a weel, well well!
 Weil, wiel, a small whirlpool.
 Weird, destiny. "The weird is dree'd," the ill-fortune is suffered; the destiny is fulfilled.
 Weise, weize, wuss, wush, lead; guide; point out; show the way; direct; put in the way.
 Welked, waukit, fulled cloth, callous.
 Well-head, spring.
 Wern, scar.
 Werena, were not.
 We'se, we shall.
 Wha, who.
 Whample, stroke; slash.
 Whang, leather.
 Whap, curlow.
 Whar, whaur, where.
 What for no? why not?
 Wheen, whin, parcel; a number of persons or things.
 Whidding, scudding.
 Whigamore, great whig.
 Whigging, jogging rudely; urging forward.
 Whigmaleeries, trinkets; nick-nackets; whims.
 Whiles, sometimes.
 Whillied, wheeled; cheated by wheedling.
 Whillying, bamboozling; deceiving with specious pretences.
 Whilly-whas, idle cajoling speeches; flummery.
 Whilk, which.
 Whin. See When.
 Whinging, fawning and whining like a dog.
 Whinger, a sort of hanger used as a knife at meals and in broils.
 Whinnying, neighing.
 Whins, furze; gorse.
 Whirring, flying rapidly.
 White hass, sausages stuffed with oatmeal and suet.
 Whittle-whattieing, making foolish conjectures; reasoning to little purpose.
 Whittle, knife.
 Whittret, weasel, from white throat.
 Whomling, whelming; overturning.
 Whorn, horn.
 Whully-whaing, cajoling.
 Whummla, whelm; turn over.
 Whunstone, whin-stone.
 Wi', with.
 Wife-carle, a man who busies himself about household affairs, or women's work.
 Will-a-wa, weal-away, woe is me!
 Willyard, wild; strange; unaccountable; shy.
 Wimple, winding turn.
 Win, get; "win by," get past; "win to," reach.
 Windle-strae, crested dog's-tail grass.
 Windles, a turning frame, upon which yarn is put, to be wound off.
 Window-bole, the part of a cottage window that is filled by a wooden blind.
 Winna, wunna, will not.
 Winsome, gainly; lovely; pretty; of engaging appearance, or character and manners.
 Withershins, wrong-ways about; from right to left; contrary to the apparent motion of the sun.
 Wither, woody, ropes of twisted wands.
 Witters, barbs of a fishing-spear, or of a fishing-hook, &c.
 Witting, weeting, knowing.
 Woo', wool.
 Woodie, gallows; also a withie, or rope of twisted wands, in which malefactors seem formerly to have been hanged.
 Worriecow, wirriecow, hobgoblin; bugbear; scarecrow; the devil.
 Wolf, wayward; wild; unreclaimed; disordered in intellect.
 Wraith, an apparition.
 Wud, wood, mad.
 Wuddie. See Woodie.

- Wull-a-wins, woe is me!
 Wull-cat, wild-cat; cat-a-mountain.
 Wull, will. "What's yer wull," what is your pleasure.
 Wuzzent, withered; dried.
 Wun, win; get, in all its senses.
 Wunna, winna, will not.
 Wuss, wish. See also Weise.
 Wyliecoat, boy's flannel under- dress, next the shirt; flannel petticoats.
 Wynds (in a town), turnings-off from the streets; lanes.
 Wyte, blame.
 Wyted, blamed.
- Y.
- Yaffing, barking like a dog in a pas- sion; chattering.
 Yagger, hunter; ranger about the country; pedlar.
 Yald, supple; active; athletic.
 Yammered, made a loud outcry.
 Yanking, way of talking English.
 Yaud, jade; mare.
 Yaud, "far yaud," a cry of en- couragement or direction from a shepherd to his dog.
 Yauld, alert; athletic.
 Yearned, curdled.
 Yearning, rennet.
 Yelloch, shrill cry.
 Yelloched, raised a shrill cry,
 Yellow yoldring, yellow yorling,
yellow-hammer.
 Yer, your.
 Yerl, earl.
 Yestreen, yester even; last night.
 Yin, one.
 Yince, once.
 Yett, gate.
 Yoking, the ploughing that is done
at one putting-to of the horses.
 Yon, there; yonder; beyond.
 Yook, yeuking, yowking, itch,
itching.
 Yowe, ewe.

CONTENTS OF THE HOUSEHOLD EDITION

OF

THE WAVERLEY NOVELS.

- WAVERLEY, 2 vols.
GUY MANNERING, 2 vols.
THE ANTIQUARY, 2 vols.
ROB ROY, 2 vols.
OLD MORTALITY, 2 vols.
BLACK DWARF, }
LEGEND OF MONTROSE, } 2 vols.
HEART OF MID LOTHIAN, 2 vols.
BRIDE OF LAMMERMOOR, 2 vols.
IVANHOE, 2 vols.
THE MONASTERY, 2 vols.
THE ABBOT, 2 vols.
KENILWORTH, 2 vols..
THE PIRATE, 2 vols.
FORTUNES OF NIGEL, 2 vols.
PEVERIL OF THE PEAK, 2 vols.
QUENTIN DURWARD, 2 vols.
ST. RONAN'S WELL, 2 vols.
REDGAUNTLET, 2 vols.
THE BETROTHED, }
THE HIGHLAND WIDOW, } 2 vols.
THE TALISMAN, }
TWO DROVERS, }
MY AUNT MARGARET'S MIRROR, } 2 vols.
THE TAPESTRIED CHAMBER, }
THE LAIRD'S JOCK, }
WOODSTOCK, 2 vols.
THE FAIR MAID OF PERTH, 2 vols.
ANNE OF GEIERSTEIN, 2 vols.
COUNT ROBERT OF PARIS, 2 vols.
THE SURGEON'S DAUGHTER, }
CASTLE DANGEROUS, } 2 vols.
INDEX AND GLOSSARY, }

